At the Concert

'Mid Fashion's devotees she sits,
As gay, as brilliant as the rest,
For such her higher rank befits;
But is she blest?
But is she blest?

Ah no! her thoughts are wandering far
Through mists that shroud her onward path,
And she, without her guiding star,
No pleasure hath!
No pleasure hath!

Though circled now by light and song,
Her fair young face bears signs of care;
With eager eyes she scans the throng—
He is not there!
He is not there!

The strains that with such rapture fill
All else around, scarce reach her ear;
One voice that made her heart-strings thrill
She doth not hear!
She doth not hear!

But she is dreaming o'er and o'er
Her spell of love, too bright to last;
As they who dream to look before
Brood o'er the past!
The cherished past!

Albeit the charm that lies therein
They rarely analyze or own.
Alas! 'mid countless kith or kin,
She feels alone!
Yes, all alone!

For he who was her joy and pride
By ruthless fate apart is torn;
No marvel she, his promised bride,
Is thus forlorn!
Oh, how forlorn!

Yet, as the storm cloud bears a bow
Whose blending tints delight the view,
What solace 'midst her grief to know
He still is true!
He still is true!

But even this she must disguise,
And act a false and callous part,
While 'neath her rich, gay vestiture lies
A breaking heart!
A breaking heart!

To bear her to her princely home
Her carriage waits—ah! rather far
Fond resting on his arm she'd roam
'Near yonder star!
Love's kindred star!

Communing on the old, old theme
That unto youth is ever new,
And o'er existence sheds a gleam
Of rosyate hue!
Sweet rosyate hue!

Fair dreamer! pause—the bliss you prize,
By sordid pride esteemed too dear—
In heaven may be realized—
But never here!
No, never here!

"SMITTEN OF GOD."—Who has not felt—when one dearly beloved has been snatched away—an inclination to forget all the things of earth, and to stand idle—helpless—stricken—on the shores of time, gazing, longing, after the lost, regardless of all that is left; all love, all remembrance, all hope—swallowed up in the one agonized sense of bereavement? "Smitten of God, and bereaved," was not this, too, written by one who knew of what he spoke? who had felt the bitter pang of parting—the awful sense of God's agency in earthly sorrow—the struggle between passionate regret and holy submission?

The human soul knows no variety in sorrow for the dead. Whatever else may change in the course of time, this remains the same throughout the ages. Paul, the sainted, the subdued, wrote not those tender words without a swelling of the heart; and many a mourner since responds to them with tears.

A REMARKABLE BILL.—The New York Times calls attention to a "truly remarkable bill" laid before Congress by Senator Burnside this year. It provides that, in the public schools in the District of Columbia, the school officers shall introduce as part of the daily exercises of each school, instruction in the elements of social and moral science, including industry, order, economy, punctuality, patience, self-denial, health, purity, temperance, cleanliness, honesty, truth, justice, cheerfulness, self-respect, hope, perseverance, politeness, self-reliance, gratitude, pity, mercy, kindness, conscience, reflection and the will. The teachers are to give a lesson every day upon one of these topics.

ECONOMY.—A prudent and economical housewife will make soup of bits of cold meat and the broken bones of a fowl, flavored with an onion, a carrot and a bit of parsley, that will prove more savory than a soup of thrice the cost, made by a careless hand. From the toughest parts of a fat and well flavored piece of beef or mutton, she will compound stews and potted dishes that will make the eater forget there are choicer bits to be had on any terms.

CREAM CHEESE CAKE.—A quarter of a pound of butter, a quarter of a pound of powdered white sugar, gently melt them, add the yolks of three eggs, the whites of two, grate the peel of a large lemon, squeeze the juice. Mix all well together and add a little brandy if liked. Another way—Squeeze two large lemons and grate the rind into half a pound of warm butter, half a pound of sugar, and six eggs well beaten.

PENS AND YARDS.—If plentiful litter is provided, the pens and yard need not necessarily be cleaned out often; but enough litter should be used to keep a dry bed and to prevent much heat in the manure. If there is any small apparent, a light dusting of ground plaster will remove it.

THE Presbytery of P. E. Island will meet in St. David's Church, Georgetown, on Wednesday, February 5th, at 11 o'clock, a. m.

SUPREME COURT.

The Murder Case.

JAN. 30, 1879.

THE EVIDENCE.
Afternoon Sitting.

JAMES McALEER, sworn—Examined by Mr. Peters—On the night Kelly was killed I was employed by Stumbles, the livery stable keeper. The morning after, between six and seven o'clock, a wagon was returned. It was in the yard till that evening, or the next. One of the policemen came after it. It had one seat.

Cross-examined by Mr. Palmer—I don't know where the wagon was the night before, nor who returned it.

The wagon was here, after some delay, brought into court.

ARCHD. McDUGALL, sworn—Examined by the Attorney General—I was looking after the horses at Stumbles on the night Kelly was killed. I was not present when the wagon was borrowed, but I was there when it came back. It was brought back by Philip Bolger, one of Millner's boys. I know James Millner. I see the wagon in Court. It is the one brought back by Bolger. It was vanished by Ed. Strain. It was brought back between six and seven of the morning after the evening on which Kelly was killed. A few hours afterwards Bolger came and got another wagon, but I do not know where he took it. Did not see James Millner that day, nor the night before. I do not know where Mat Curran now is. Saw him last just before Christmas.

Cross-examined by Mr. Palmer—The seat of the wagon Bolger returned is nearer the hind than the front. It is a high wagon.

PHILIP BOLGER (sworn)—Examined by the Attorney General—I am sixteen. I work at George Millner's. I have been there two years. I saw Johnston at the Gas House. James Millner worked in the same shop as I did. I never saw him and Johnston together. I heard of Kelly's murder next morning. We had two middling-sized black horses in the stable. One of them was out the night of the murder. He was not in the stable about nine o'clock when I fed. I slept in the same room as Millner. I do not know when the horse came home. There was a wagon in the yard the next morning. After a spell I was told to take it to Stumbles'. I took it over about seven in the morning, and gave it to Archy McDougall. I took another wagon back a short time after. I saw James Millner in the shop that morning before I went for the other wagon. I don't think James Millner was present when I was told to take the other wagon over. I just put it in the yard. I don't know whether or not it was used. I don't know what has become of Tom Lynch. He left the shop a day or two afterwards and I never saw him afterwards. I don't remember who sent me over for the second wagon. I didn't hear of the murder before I went to the Post Office at 8 o'clock. I can't swear who first told me about it.

Cross-examined by Mr. Palmer—The second wagon I brought over was used that morning. Lynch told me to take the first wagon back to Stumbles'. I don't remember who told me to get the second.

ROBERT SMALL (sworn)—Examined by Mr. Peters—I work at Millner's. I have been there about five years. I have been a journeyman about two years. Thomas Lynch was an apprentice in August last. He left in August—about the first or middle. He was there the night of the murder. I won't say that I ever saw him after dinner time of the day after the murder. I don't know where he went or why he went. I didn't see him going. I won't swear he didn't move away in a wagon got from Stumbles that morning. There was an express wagon in the yard at seven o'clock that morning—but no other that I know of. I don't know if any of the Millners were driving that day. I don't know who looked after the horses when Bolger was away. Philip Bolger was not working with me that day, and I don't know where he was or where he intended to go. I don't know whether or not Bolger was working with me the day following.

After argument of counsel it was ruled that the witness might be treated as "a hostile witness."

Witness hesitated to say whether or not he had just before stated that Bolger was not working with him the day after the murder.

Cross-examined by Mr. Palmer—I could not say whether or not Bolger was at the examination before the Stipendiary Magistrate's Court.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hodgson—Who is it they have been asking you about?

Witness—Smiled.

HUGH MCGONNELL, sworn—Examined by the Attorney General—I was a policeman last August when Kelly was shot. I went to the scene, in company with Keating, about a quarter to ten. I saw the body. Life was not extinct. I got orders to go to Millner's to see about the horse. I saw Patrick Hand, and I think he said it was Millner's horse. We went to the stable in Millner's yard about a quarter to eleven. We found fresh tracks of a horse and wagon—going in and coming out. Two wagons were in the yard. One of them was the wagon now in Court. The other was an express wagon. Jim Millner put his head out the window and asked who was there. I said "It's me." He said, "Hallo! Is that you McGonnell?" I asked, "Can I get into the stable?" He said "No." Then I went away, and came back
