Cooks Are Provided With Good Equipment

The kitchen in which 18 Island cooks are taking an improver course at the Charlottetown Vocational Institute, is considered one of the most efficiently equipped in the Maritimes.

The Institute, which opened in January, is the newest Vocational Institute in the Maritimes, and provides all the latest in equipment and the most modern surroundings for its students.

Joseph Morrison, head chef in the cooking school, which opened Feb. 10, says that the equipment in use is "all first class."

Most of the equipment and inside work in the kitchen is of stainless steel with hardwood working tables. Huge refrigerators, with light switches on the outside and safety handles on the inside of the door, line one wall. Off to the side there is a well- lighted airy storage room for dry-goods.

Mr. Morrison noted that there are different refrigerators to do the specialized work of keeping meats, vegetables and dairy products at the peak of freshness.

IN CAFETERIA

The cafeteria, where all students and staff of the school receive their noon meal has refrigerated salad boards, electrically fed dish warmers and thermostatically controlled coffee and tea machines, all of which are of stainless steel.

The kitchen itself has perfect ventilation, Mr. Morrison said. He explained that the work is made easier by huge electric steam pressure cookers; steam kettles; electric thermostatic grills, ranges and fryers; and of all things, electric potato peelers. Automatic dish washing machines are also in use at the school.

The two-month course is attended by cooks having anywhere from one to 20 years experience. Held under an advisory committee for the P.E.I. Tourist Association, enrollment in the course is divided equally between men and women, Mr. Morrison said.

He noted that food prepared by the school has been consumed by an average of 200 students and staff per day and that they hadn't missed getting the dinner out by 12 o'clock yet although sometimes he had feared they wouldn't make it. He added that no complaints whatever had been voiced on the quality of the food. Mr. Morrison explained that there had been no waste of food and that they were actually running under the expected cost.

When the menu is posted in the morning, the students, who have arrived at nine, are each assigned to a particular part of the dinner. He explained that there are usually two students assigned to each of the following: vegetables, meats, gravys, soups, bakery, salads, desserts and setting up the cafeteria line, with two left over to circulate. They will remain on one job anywhere from three days to a week, depending on how well they get along he said.

A typical menu at the school is: fruit juice, roast turkey, two kinds of vegetables, fresh rolls, apple pie, and tea, coffee or milk.

The students are usually finished clearing up from dinner by 2:30 or so when they assemble in classrooms for lectures until 4:00.

Mr. Morrison explained that night classes are held twice a week for a group of students holding down jobs at present. These classes are mainly theoretical with little actual cooking being done.

The Institute itself also provides courses in commerce, navigation, basic training, motor mechanics and welding. It is subsidized by the government with only a small tuition fee being paid by the student.

A school for beginner cooks will open after the present course is completed.

ALBERTON

Magdalens last year and the season was fairly profitable. The season opens Thursday, March 5.

GREAT INTEREST

As in other years interest in seal hunting is tremendous, Mr. Matthews said and hundreds of people have contacted him asking to join in the hunt. Included in these are 10 men from Lennox Island but present plans are to use experienced hunters from the Magdalen Islands. The Glen Mathews party will leave for the Magdalens today.

A herd estimated to contain over 150,000 seals is located near Grindstone in the Magdalens and this will be the base of operations for most of the hunters.

Most of the men in the Mathews party are from Alberton, Alberton South, Tignish and Cascumpec.

Other groups expected to join in the annual hunt are headed by Lowell Matthews, Conway, a brother of Glen Matthews, Pointe De Canso, Fredericton, N.B., Russell Dockendorff, St. Peters, Dan Forgey, Shediac and Les MacInnis, Moncton, N.B.

Tignish To Have Handicraft Courses And Tourist Bureau

TIGNISH — A resources development study group meeting was held in the Tignish Dalton School Thursday evening with a large number present.

Mrs. Percy Lister, instructor of handicraft with the provincial government was guest speaker. She was accompanied by her husband who is handicraft director.

Mrs. Lister outlined handicraft courses and gave detailed information on the cost, time, working space, numbers of students required, and equipment used in textile painting, leathercraft, jewellery, woodturning, weaving and silk screen painting along with a display of each.

She said that handicrafts locally made are very popular with the tourists along with Island jellies, jams, hooked rugs, hand knitting fruit cakes, plum puddings, stuffed toys, and home made candy. The courses she said will teach the basic principles.

She also explained how a student interested in weaving could rent a loom and later keep it for a small rental fee. It is very important to have articles well labelled, as tourists like to remember where things come from. Mr. Lister spoke on weaving and what is required of each student.

Following the talks and demonstrations the meeting formed into groups to discuss development in the area.

A tourist information bureau will be set up during the summer months and a killing plant will be sought by the agriculture committee. Handicraft courses will be made available in the village.

A guest speaker for the tourist department of the provincial government will address the meeting Wednesday evening, March 14 and films will be shown.

Following the meeting refreshments were served by members of the Tignish Sports Recreation Association.

Danger Stressed In Queen's Visit

OTTAWA (CP) — "God save the Queen if she ever comes to Quebec," Michael Beaulieu, editor of the University of Montreal student newspaper, said Saturday at a lecture series on Confederation here.

Mr. Beaulieu said many Quebec residents regard the Queen as a representative of colonialism. A visit by her would be considered provocative and, if she were menaced, the situation could "degenerate into civil war."

Quebec, he said, might remain in Confederation if given equality which he defined as half the seats in Parliament.

(Quebec now has 75 of the 265 Commons seats.)

Mr. Beaulieu was one of several speakers in the week-long series at Carleton University sponsored by the Canadian Union of Students.

Two Children Die In Blaze

ST. STEPHEN, N.B. (CP) — Fire caused by an exploding stove near here Saturday claimed the lives of five-year-old Stephen Roy and his sister Koanne, 3, and sent four other children to hospital.

RCMP said the girl died Saturday night of shock and the boy early Sunday morning from burns received in the blaze that levelled their two-storey frame home at Todd's Point, five miles southeast of here.

At least one other Roy child was reported in critical condition in hospital. The four admitted were identified as Claude, 15, Robert, 13, Ronald 8 and Raymond, 6.

Two other children were uninjured while two more were away at the time of the fire. The father, Patrick Roy, was reported working in the woods when the fire broke out.

The front door of the home was heavily barred and the blaze blocked the back entrance. Mrs. Roy was said to have smashed a ground floor window and helped the surviving children to safety.

Retirement Of Glenn Postponed

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Lt.-Col. John H. Glenn Jr. has postponed his retirement from the Marine Corps for a month, apparently to avoid the risk of losing his disability benefits.

The astronaut's announcement was made at Grant Hospital in Columbus Saturday following consultation with his doctors and advisers in his campaign for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

Glenn's retirement to enter politics was to take effect at midnight Saturday night. However, a mild concussion suffered in a bathroom fall Wednesday has kept him in hospital with an equilibrium disturbance. He gets dizzy when he moves.

The choice of whether to retire from the marines immediately or to remain on active duty pending final determination of his condition, was offered Glenn earlier Saturday.

PURITY DAIRY

"Parents Prefer Purity Products"

317 Kent Dial 4-7125

In spite of its short life (2 years and 1 month) we've already found 141 ways to improve the VW 1500.

Not that you'd notice it. On the surface, you'd have to look carefully to spot the improvements:

This year we made the parking lights bigger to make the lighting brighter. And we put a handle on the front trunk to make the lifting lighter.

But apart from considerate little changes like these you can hardly tell a '62 from a '64.

Underneath it's a different story. A lot has happened. Since our debut. For 1964 we developed an optional engine. It has much extra power for a few extra dollars. Yet you can still get around 35 miles to a gallon of gas (which everybody likes).

Before the VW 1500 made its appearance, spare parts for it were already in dealer's hands, and since most of these parts fit any 1500 (regardless of its year), servicing is simple and economical.

True, the 1500 is less than 3 years old. But our Volkswagen mechanics have already had 10 years' experience. The important mechanical principles of the 1500 TS are the same as the beetle (right down to the air cooled rear engine and independent torsion bar suspension).

So you see, while there are now two Volkswagens, underneath it all, things haven't really changed, except for the better.
