South Africa Votes On Wed.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP)—South Africa's two big political parties wound up a roughhouse campaign Sunday, for Wednesday's parliamentary elections. The voting is for whites only and the government braced for an African workers' protest strike that could tie up two major cities. "If we cannot vote on the ballot paper we shall find another way to vote," warned a manifesto of the African National Congress. The congress has called on all African (Negro) workers to stay in their huts starting today to underscore demands for a voice in government, higher wages and the scrapping of segregation laws. The government placed all police forces on the alert.
