MR. AND MRS. A. BYRON CUTCLIFFE

Cavendish United Church Is Scene Of Pretty Ceremony

Cavendish United Church was the scene of a very pretty wedding recently when Barbara Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Olaf E. Stevenson, was united in marriage to Allie Byron, son of Mr. and Mrs. F.W. Cutcliffe, Fredericton, P.E.I.

The church was decorated with baskets of mixed summer flowers and the guest pews were marked with white ribbon streamers.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. S.M. MacDowell, Montreal, Que. uncle of the groom. He was assisted by Rev. Morely Bentley of Cavendish United Church. The organist was Mrs. Reginald Simpson, Cavendish. Mr. Robert M. Stevenson, uncle of the bride, sang "The Wedding Prayer" before the ceremony and "I'll Walk Beside You" during the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her father looked lovely in a gown of nylon tulle with lace accents, over slipper satin. The bodice was shirred with a high neckline trimmed with tiny opal sequins. The gown was floor length. Her finger-tip veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a rose effect crown accented with tiny sequins, and her bouquet was pink roses.

Mrs. Arthur Monsebraaten, Ottawa, Ont. sister of the bride, was the matron of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Norma Stevenson, Ottawa, sister of the bride, and Miss Audrey MacEachern, Freetown.

They wore identical street-length gowns of shocking pink organza over satin with matching headdresses and they carried nosegays of pink carnations. The flower girl, Nancy Stevenson, niece of the bride, wore a dress of frosted nylon with a sash of pink organza. She carried a basket of pink rose petals.

Ben J. Cutcliffe, Belleville, Ont. brother of the groom, was the best man. The ushers were J. Lloyd Cutcliffe, Boston, Mass. brother of the groom and Morris Weeks, Picton, Ont.

The bride's mother was wearing a two-piece dress of multicolored silk with blue and white accessories. Her corsage was of white roses. The groom's mother chose a dress of beige silk with brown accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at Lakeview Lodge for eighty guests. The tables were beautifully set in the candle-lit dining room and bowls of mixed flowers added to the decor. A three-tier wedding cake surrounded by pink rose buds and flanked by tall tapers in silver candelabra adorned the bride's table.

Mrs. Charles MacKinnon, Charlottetown, a classmate of the bride's, circulated the guest book.

For a wedding trip around the Cabot Trail and through the Maritimes, the bride wore a two-piece linen suit with orange-ice and beige accessories. Her corsage was of tailsman roses.

The bride, who is a graduate of the Prince Edward Island Hospital School of Nursing, is on the staff of the Sackville Memorial Hospital and the groom is a senior science student at Mount Allison University in Sackville, N.B.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Lady Moon Climbs High To Take A Westward Course

And then November, the indifferent one, gave us a day washed by brilliant sunshine, a nice day, it came to mind, on which to lay away, as folks must, those loved ones called away recently from earthly homes to dwell in some "far ben." Not that the day matters ever shadowed in hearts as it is, or does it to those left to mourn In any event the solemn corteges move toward this or that cemetery, bearing them to rest. Perhaps beside some Church they have loved or maybe as today in this community, to a quiet spot of earth and very lovely, where in summer there is only the music of birdsong to mark the wide silence there, and at times the small winds which pass softly are those which come up from the shore.

The evening star was, and is, ours this evening. And it was also good to greet the Lady Moon, as she climbed gracefully above the barn gable and set her course on that path which leads west above the mill. Stars are caught now in the white birch tree's branches, and we think we shall have a shining one for our company in the stillness of the night, if and when sleep should chance momentarily to desert our pillow.

In the afternoon sun, the oak leaves, copper-tinted now, drifted earthward, as, alas, do so many humans in this "The falling of the leaf."

Today her legion of admirers world-over would, we believe, learn with much regret of the recent passing of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt. She was a remarkable woman. When all things are counted unto her, her name will be inscribed among the greatest of the illustrious ones of earth.

"She is the nicest person" we recall hearing an Island woman who had met her say. "She was so interested in everyone! When she chatted with you it seemed as if you were the only one in all the world, she wanted to chat with. Not pretty... no. But she has that kindly 'inner light' that shines so radiantly through."

It may be that one secret of her popularity was this she lived by, which we gave Granddaughter to read, and we reread carefully ourself, in regard not to "getting the most out of life" but the best.

"If you approach each new person you meet, in a spirit of adventure" she said "you will find yourself endlessly fascinated by the new channels of thought, and experience, and personality, that you encounter I do not mean simply the famous people of the world, but people from every walk and condition of life."

"If such an encounter is to be successful however, you will need two qualities, that you can develop by practice. One is the ability to be a good listener. The other is the imaginative ability to put yourself in the other person's place; to understand as far as you can, the background from which he comes, the soil in which his roots have grown, the customs, and beliefs and ideas, which have shaped his thinking. If you care enough to make the effort, you can establish an understanding relationship with people, who are entirely outside your own orbit."

"It's a big assignment" Granddaughter smiled.

"But a discerning one" we said. "The gist of it is: no matter whom you meet or rub shoulders with about home or away, there is always something interesting to be learned, something for good from that person."

"For good?" she echoed a bit sceptically.

"For good" we said. "Remember not all our best lessons are learned from those who live exemplary lives. Think that one out for yourself!"

"Fare you well!" Thursday says, stepping out now and away from our door.

Until tomorrow — — Diary— Good-night.....

WILL SELL WHEAT

TORONTO (CP) — Canada will sell wheat to anybody, Agriculture Minister Hamilton said here Monday. He told a meeting of the Canadian Farm Writers that much of the opposition to Canada's sales to Communist China is "sheer emotional banging just because the people are Communists."

Naval Wedding Solemnized In Esquimalt, British Columbia

St. Paul's Naval and Garrison Church in Esquimalt, B.C. was beautifully decorated with autumn flowers and leaves for the wedding of Miss Joyce Margaret Rogers to Sub-Lt. Paul Henry Newcombe, RCN. Rev. J.A. Roberts officiated at the ceremony on October 6.

Delicate lace enhanced the bride's floor length gown of white chiffon over satin; and her chapel length veil was held in place by a tiara of seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of white orchids and stephanotis.

The Misses Bonnie and Penny Rogers attended their sister. Their gowns of pale green velvet were fashioned on simple lines and were complimented with gold tone headdresses and bouquets of gold mums.

Sub-Lt. Gerald McManus, RCN, was the best man and the ushers were two of six naval officers that formed a guard of honor as the newly-weds left the church. All were former classmates of the groom.

A miniature of the H.M.C.S. Skeena, is which the groom now serves, topped the four tier wedding cake that centered the head table at a reception which followed in the wardroom of H.M.C.S. Naden.

For their honeymoon trip to San Francisco, the bride donned an italian knit suit in a gold tone, accented with black accessories and an orchid corsage.

The bride is the daughter of Surgeon Capt. John W. Rogers and Mrs. Rogers of Esquimalt and is with the staff of the Canadian Automobile Association in Victoria. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter P. Newcombe, Port Hill, P.E.I. and is a graduate of Royal Military College and Queen's University in Kingston, Ont.

Among the out of town guests were the groom's mother, Mrs. Newcombe and his sister, Mrs. Harold L. Milligan, Gander, Nfld.

Addresses and gifts were presented to Mr. and Mrs. MacMillan by the Cornwall, York Point and Meadowbank Women's Institutes, the pupils of Cornwall School and family and relatives. A rememebrance was received from the Men's Club of the Cornwall Church and greetings were brought from the provincial Musical Festival Association.

MARY HAWORTH

Divorcee Is Disillusioned By Fruitless Romance

Dear Mary Haworth: Several years ago my husband died, leaving me fairly well off, and with three married children.

I hadn't thought of marrying again until recently, when a man proposed to me. He also is widowed and has married children. All are high school graduates but he seems ashamed to have me meet them.

He asks me to marry him first, then meet his family. It seems his children are envious and quarrelsome among themselves; also very demanding of his time, money and the use of his home (which he bought without their help).

Do you think I have a chance for happiness with him?—F.P.

Dear F.P.: Perhaps the old fellow wants to steal a march on his selfish children and get married before they can stop him. Maybe he foresees that they would treat a prospective stepmother as a hateful rival, to be frightened off before she can cut in on their inheritance objectives.

A proverb says: "Like father, like son." Thus if the man's children are as disagreeable as he says, one naturally infers that he, too, must be rather sadly in want of lovable (or livable) qualities of character.

It would seem preposterously foolhardy of you to marry him before getting acquainted with his children, friends (if any) and family history.— M.H.

Dear Mary Haworth: Lots of people may have this problem. It is a minor gripe, but annoying.

We are a handful of women past 60. We meet for a weekly luncheon and card game for four, six or eight persons. Some of the ladies always have private conversations, so that the room is buzzing like a bunch of magpies.

I was taught that a small group, in a small room (say four to eight persons) should have only group conversation on topics of interest to all present. What do you think? Thanks— K.G.

Dear K.G.: If there is an arbitrary social rule to the effect that private exchanges are tabu in smallish groups in a small room, I was not aware of it.

I've been in many smallish groups of ladies foregathered for luncheon or tea, where the chatter switched back and forth from private confabs to general conversation.

At table the usual practise is for both patterns of talk (private and general) to mingle in either a mellow or an electric buzz, as the case may be.—M.H.

Dear Mary Haworth: My husband and I are having a dispute about whether or not to send a wedding gift to my nephew, who married out of his religion. We didn't go to the wedding, therefore my husband says no gift is necessary. The bridegroom is still my nephew, however so I feel a gift is indicated. What do you think?— G.B.

Dear G.B.: A wedding gift, properly given, is a voluntary offering— a manifesto of friendly good wishes, addressed to the bride, as a presumably helpful addition to her dowry. As such, it is supposed to be helpful to the bridegroom as well.

You don't owe your nephew a wedding gift just because he is your nephew (anyway, the gift is to the bride, as mentioned above). Nor should a gift be withheld simply because you skipped the wedding, as a matter of conscience.

So, what to do? My advice is, give a gift because you want to, if you can afford to. Better be generous than mean, in heart or purse, in cases of the kind.— M.H.
