STRICT ATTENTION

to Business, Honesty and Square Dealing, and paying Cash every time, is what has placed to the front of all competitors, in CLOTHING, HATS, &c.

He does not advertize to sell goods at cost, but he guarantees to sell from 10 to 25 per cent less than those who do advertize to sell at cost.

He does not try to deceive the people by making a big blow and offering paltry rewards, but tries to do things right and has the goods to back him up in what he advertizes.

He has now about 6,500 HATS and $4,000 worth of CLOTHING, which he guarantees to sell from 10 to 25 per cent less than any house in the trade. A lot of this Clothing was bought less than half price, and will be sold less than half price.

He does not ask the people to believe his advertisement until they see his prices; he knows then they will believe, and knows that the goods and prices back him up every time.

All goods freely shown, or sent to any part of the town.

ABSOLUTE PURITY.

THE following analyses (made by the Dominion Analyst) of three BAKING POWDERS sold in this market should put a stop to the unjust efforts of the Royal to mislead the public as to its being the only pure Powder. These impartial tests show that other Powders are as pure and wholesome.

W. SAUNDERS, Dom. Analyst, St. John, N. B.
reports:

Royal—Contains Alkaline Carbonates—a mixture consisting mainly of Bicarbonate of Soda and Cream of Tartar—adulterated with about 20 per cent of Starch.

W. F. BEST, Dom. Analyst, St. John, N. B.
reports:

Pure Gold—Contains Cream of Tartar, Carbonate of Soda—fresh and pure.

Nov. 19, 1885—Not adulterated;
same as usual.

WOODILL'S—Not adulterated.
Same as usual.

June 4, 1881—Fresh and pure; same composition as usual.

MAYNARD BOWMAN, Dom. Analyst, Halifax,
N. S., reports:

WOODILL'S—Of good quality; contains nothing injurious.

Woodill's German Baking Powder has a reputation for purity and wholesomeness now nearly 30 years.

WRITTEN ESPECIALLY FOR THE EXAMINER.]

Ethel De Wolfe

—OR—
SHADOWS AND SUNSHINE.

BY S. M. BENT.

CHAPTER XI.

"Listen, Ethel, till I tell you how you can save me, and save yourself from losing the home that has been so dear to you from childhood. You know that Warner's son Lionel has a great influence over him; you know too, I daresay, that he is not insensible to your beauty and social position. He has requested your hand in marriage, and on your accepting him will purchase my stocks at their full value, and I shall escape financial ruin. Otherwise the dreadful crash will come too soon, and leave us homeless and penniless."

"And I am to be bartered away, sold to that cowardly gambler, just as you would sell a piece of real estate, or the stocks for which you will place me in the market? And you, my father, propose this to me whom I almost in the same breath in which you lament my dead mother's memory. Oh! that she were living, to shield me from this fate, this wrong!"

"But, Ethel, do you not see that I am speaking for your own future welfare; and besides, painful as the question is to me, it is the only way to help me."

"There is another way."

"What is it, my child?"

"Put me on the auction block, and sell me to the highest bidder, as they do the slaves down in those Southern States, where noble men are fighting to save the Union," replied Ethel, her face crimsoned with angry blushes, and her bosom heaving with half suppressed wrath. "I had as soon be sold like a slave as married to Lionel Warner, a creature I have always despised."

"Ethel, you are unjust. Look at the question reasonably and calmly. You must see that in this matter I am acting for your own good. Were it not for you, I could let the worst come to the worst, and then go to work again at the bottom of the ladder. But you are unused to living as the poor—"

"Poverty were preferable to the course you have proposed; besides, you forget that you have already consented to my marriage with Paul Chandley, a man worth ten thousand Lionel Warners, and is my plighted faith to be thus easily broken?
Am I to be false to vows as sacred and binding as though spoken before the altar?"

"Believe me, Ethel, I respect your truth, and feel the utmost sorrow for you.
It grieves me bitterly to think of the sacrifice I am begging you to make. When I was wealthy, I would gladly have seen you and Paul married. Your fortune and his, and his talents, would have enabled you to live in the luxury to which you are accustomed. Now that poverty stares us in the face, such an engagement must no longer be considered. My enemy has me completely in his power, and if you do not accept Lionel, I know not what your future will be. Think of the luxury in which you have been brought up, compare it with what you must endure; think how your father can no longer hold his position in the commercial world, and of the years his life will be shortened by his ruin. Try and forget your attachment to Paul Chandley, who may not be living. I know it is difficult for you to do so, but remember it is for the best, and that if you marry Warner, life will go on as before. None will know of the fearful pit on whose brink I am now standing. Like you, Lionel has not known a mother's love, and his youth has been rather wild, but you will make a very different man of him. You will soon learn to love your husband, and with that love happiness will be born."

"Father, I shall never love Lionel Warner, nor forget Paul Chandley. Even if sacrificed for your sake, my heart will always cling to Paul, though it may be wrong to cherish his memory, while I shall always despise the creature to whom you are selling me. Give me time to think, my heart is nearly broken."

"Take a week, Ethel, at the end of which Lionel will call for his final answer."

"Papa, you have never yet deceived me; tell me now that all is not so bad as you have represented."

"Would to God I could, my dear child; but alas! every word is true—too true."

She kissed her father's brow, and weeping and shuddering, went to her room.

His defiant words, his bold demeanor, his just indignation, were gone. They had been weighed in the balance against wealth and love of home, and found wanting. The courage that had borne him up had failed.
The villainy that had surrounded him with snares and pitfalls had triumphed. He had gone down before the first rush of the storm. He judged it all for the best, and perhaps we cannot blame him for sacrificing his better feelings, and trying to avert disaster in the only way that seemed left to him. He could plead that he had acted for the best interests of her whom he loved so well, whom he could not bear to see thrown upon the world's charity, to meet a fate perhaps a thousand times worse than the one now menacing her. Man, in his mind, is a curious being, and he falsely reasons out sufficiently plausible excuses for deeds that conscience tells him are wrong, and he would often rather listen to the voice of blind reason than that of conscience—he would rather be swayed by reason's subtleties than the stern commands of a monitor who does not hide the keen edge of her sword with glittering tinsel.

CURRENT NOTES.

Dr. Burroughs writes in a scientific magazine that nitro-glycerine is now used in minute quantities as a heart stimulant far superior to brandy. Two drops of a one per cent. solution are equivalent to an ounce of brandy, and the effect in the collapse of fevers and certain poisoning cases is immediate.

William G. Townsend and William F.
Cousins, 16-year-old boys, and fast friends, were shooting at a target at the home of the former, on Buena Vista avenue, Yonkers, N. Y., when the weapon while in the hands of Cousins, was accidentally discharged.
The ball struck Townsend in the eye and inflicted a wound which proved fatal two hours later.

Mr. Clews, the eminent New York banker, has, according to the N. Y. Independent, a hundred clerks, and not one of them is a college graduate. University men are too old and too far advanced when they leave college to enter in subordinate positions, and rise step by step. He prefers to take his clerks at the age of fourteen or fifteen, and he thinks they make better financiers.

At the close of the revising officers' court in Wentworth, Mr. Gwyn, counsel for the Conservatives, presented to Judge Sinclair a motion which had been seconded by Mr. Bogue, counsel for the Reformers, complimenting his Honor on "the very fair, judicial and impartial manner in which he had discharged his duties." A vote of thanks was also tendered to the revising officer's clerk.

At Mount Harman, in Northfield, Mass., Dwight L. Moody has opened a summer school for the study of the Bible. It will be attended by 225 College students drawn from the Young Men's Christian Association of leading colleges in this country and Canada. Many came from the South, Randolph Mecon College in Virginia sending fifteen students. Mr. Moody will be assisted by leading orthodox clergymen.

He was a wheelman, and called at a farm-house for a glass of water, but the farmer's pretty daughter offered him a glass of milk instead. "Won't you have another glass?" she asked, as he drained the tumbler.
"You are very good," he replied,
"but I am afraid I shall rob you." "Oh no," with emphasis. "We have so much more than the family can use that we're feeding it to the calves all the time!"

The people of Toronto are endeavoring to get milk at two cents a pint, and unless the milk dealers come down to that rate the Torontoites will buy a couple of cows and supply themselves. But the Toronto, which is agitated on the milk question, is not the famous Canadian city of that name.
It is a village in England near Bishop Auckland, county of Durham. Canada, it seems, is giving names to Old World localities.

An idea of the extent of the patent medicine business may be gathered from the figures of a printing contract, said to be the largest on record, between a New York manufacturer of a nostrum and a Philadelphia printer. The bargain was for 400,- 000,000 thirty-two-page pamphlets and 400,- 000,000 four-page circulars, to cost $800,- 000. Part of the work will be done in Philadelphia, and the remainder in England and Germany.

A Berlin surgeon has discovered the art of repairing and remodelling noses of all sizes and ages. He can take a nose shaped like an antihook and by his peculiar method turn it into a beautiful and really classic snout. He hears nothing. The fact of the matter is he invites the hideous, and pays a premium for it. The man with a nose twisted like a gourd-handle or a ram's horn is his pleasure. The man with no nose at all is his delight and joy.

Mr. Schmidt," said a German gentleman, yesterday as he entered a Pittsburgh merchant's office. "Mr. Schmidt, I haf der schmaltz pox." "Great heavens! Mr.
Schneider," was the hurried reply, "don't come here," and the clerks rapidly disappeared in various directions. "Vot's der maader mit you fellers anyhow?" pursued Schneider, "I haf der schmaltz pox full of butter out in my wagon vot der Mrs.
Schmidt ordered last week vresty?"

Cheques for sums inside of a dollar are not an uncommon thing in business. There hangs in an office in Boston the cancelled cheque of the United States for one cent.
Another firm in that city have framed and hung in their counting-room one drawn by the same official for two cents. The other extreme in cheques, which naturally comes to mind in this connection, may be seen in the Bank of Commerce, New York, where there hangs on the wall a handsomely framed cheque for $14,000,000.

The people of Wise County, Texas, have petitioned Gov. Ireland to call an extra session of the Legislature to provide relief for the people in the drought-stricken sections of the State. Thousands of acres of school lands have been sold to settlers in the drought district, and the settlers have come from the northern and eastern States.
They have made first payments on their farms, and must make second payment during August or lose their land and what they have already paid. The crops are utter failures.

In an article on engagement rings a French writer says: "Do not choose the ruby; it is too showy, loud, and indiscreet.
Good taste inclines toward the sapphire and the diamond, of which the one does not go well without the other. Do not choose a large sapphire surrounded by diamonds, but ask your jeweller-artist to interleave in happy combination the sapphire and the diamond. The turquoise is also a tasteful stone, but when it is constantly worn it has the immense disadvantage of change color, and to this change must women attach a
