

May Burdens and Perils Disease and Ill Health Should Be Banished This Month.

Paine's Celery Compound is the World's Great Health Restoring Agent.

It matters not whether trouble be rheumatism, neuralgia, kidney disease, dyspepsia, nervous prostration or some nasty blood disease, Paine's Celery Compound is sufficient to meet your case and overcome your sufferings.

Diseases of any kind that have wintered themselves in the winter, and have fastened their deadly grip in the spring months, are terribly perilous to life, if allowed to run into the heat of summer. This is the time to grapple with disease, and Paine's Celery Compound is the only sure friend and helper of the sick.

The work of disease banishing and health restoring already accomplished this spring in Canada by Paine's Celery Compound is marvellous and a tonishing, judging from the many letters received from cured people, supported by the endorsement of leading druggists and merchants to whom the cured people are known.

Paine's Celery Compound is the only medicine that can honestly claim public recognition. Its work is never-failing and sure. It first cleanses the blood, causing the life-stream to run pure in every artery and vein of the body. It quickly restores lost strength; it gives perfect digestive vigor, sweet sleep and lasting health.

The city of Portland, Me., the former home of Neal Dow and the pioneer American city in the adoption of prohibition by constitutional amendment, has taken a step backward this year at the municipal election, at which the prohibitionists polled 167 votes out of a total of 7,395. As this is less than 1 per cent., the prohibitionists will not be entitled to representation on the official ballot at the next election.

WHAT THEY'VE LOST

(Montreal Star.)

The Liberal party's accession to power has deprived many of its most highly respected statesmen of valued treasures:

Sir Wilfrid has lost his Democracy and his Cobden medal.

Sir Richard has lost his antipathy to a "robber tariff."

Mr. Mulock has lost the opportunity of pushing his Independence of Parliament act.

Mr. Paterson has lost his resonant voice once upraised against bribery and corruption.

Mr. Fisher has lost all interest in the Prohibition movement.

Mr. John Chariton has lost his admiration for his American friends.

Mr. Sifton has lost all conceit in his immigration literature.

Mr. Borden has lost Col. Domville—or General Hutton.

Mr. D.C. Fraser has lost nearly three years of his valuable time.

Mr. Macdonald (Huron) has lost his horror of extravagance and over expenditure.

Mr. Tarte has lost no chance of spending money.

Senator Mills has lost several occasions for speaking his honest convictions.

Mr. Blair has lost all interest in Western railway construction.

Sir Henri Joly has lost all hope of Sir Wilfrid's pledges being redeemed and promises fulfilled.

Mr. Fielding has lost his cherished free trade principles.

Mr. McMullen has lost all the pleasure that the Auditor-General's report once afforded him.

Sir Louis Davies has lost $300 to the poor of his own country.

The Caseys, the McMillans, the Somervilles and the other back benches have lost all desire for economy and retrenchment.

Mr. Flint, (Yarmouth,) has lost caste with his fellow Prohibitionists.

Mr. Beausoleil has lost his grip.

Mr. Costigan has lost himself.

The whole Grit party has lost the Ottawa platform of 1893, and its reputation and principles, and is in a fair way of losing office.

ESTEEMED EXCHANGES.

—Mail and Empire: There seems to be a trick in nearly everything the Laurier-Tarte Government does. We had one startling example in the plebiscite. That contest was ostensibly given to settle a question upon which strong opinions were held by serious people. But it was never intended to be anything but a hoax. Prohibitionists and anti-prohibitionists were summoned to the ring to fight, and were urged to exert their strength and spend their money. They struggled for the victory until the end, when Sir Wilfrid laughed at them all, and declared that he and his colleagues had reached a secret understanding at the first, the terms of which rendered the entire thing a sham. The two Quebec politicians who manage affairs humbugged the country in this matter, and were not ashamed to tell it.

DIED.

At Norris Pond, Souris East, on April 15th, 1891, John D. McDonald, in the 64th year of his age, leaving three sisters and two brothers to mourn the loss of a kind and loving brother. May his soul rest in peace.

Farewell brother, farewell brother! Peaceful be thy silent rest, Slumber sweetly, God knew best, When to call thee home to rest.

Farewell brother, farewell brother! We must say our last farewell, Till we meet beyond the river, Happy there with three to dwell.

MAY MAGAZINES.

LADIES' HOME JOURNAL.

"The Countess Emilia," Anthony Hope's new romance, is begun in the May Ladies' Home Journal, and "The Art of Listening to a Sermon" inaugurates the first of a series of articles on the pulpit and the pew by Ian McLaren. Another notable feature of the same issue is "The Secret of a Happy Life," by the Rev. Dwight Hillis, D. D., pastor of the Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, who has become a regular contributor to the Journal. Paul Leiberter Ford writes "The Anecdotal Side of George Washington," recounting some of the best but least known stories of the "Father of His Country." Viola Allen draws upon her own rich store of experience to tell "What it Means to be an Actress," and Joseph Edgar Chamberlin introduces "Helen Keller as She Really is," giving some interesting glimpses of the marvelous blind and deaf girl. On the editorial page Edward Bok treats of the pretty American girls, and discourses on the most beloved women of the country. The feminine wardrobe is considered in elaborate detail, the articles being by the best fashion writers—and illustrated. "The Building of the Ship" is the theme of the sixth of W. L. Taylor's illustrations of Longfellow's poems, and pictorial features of practical interest are "Nature's Garden," "The prettiest country homes in America," "Rustic arbors and summer houses" and "The flag in the Church." Maria Parloa inaugurates a new department, "Household helps and new ideas," and Mrs. S. T. Rorer gives the menus of "Little dinners by eighteen of my girls," and writes of "Milk, its use and abuse." Helu Watterson Moody defies "The true meaning of motherhood," and Mrs. Humphry contributes her second article on "How to be pretty though plain." In short, the May Journal has apparently anticipated every need that can rise in the home. By the Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia. One dollar per year; 10 cents per copy.

KIPLING AND HIS STORIES.

A Sketch of the Great Writer

WHO HAS HAD SUCH A MARKED CAREER

His Tales Have Made Him Widely Known and Admired.

Not until the light of a great genius seemed about to be extinguished did people generally begin to fully realize what an important place Rudyard Kipling holds in the literary world and in the affections of millions of Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Americans. No great ruler at death's door could have excited a more universal and sincere sympathy and interest than did Kipling, lying at his hotel in New York, stricken with what for a time seemed a fatal disease. Here was a man only 35 years old, who had won no battles, taken no part in politics, born to no high rank and holding no official position, who had so moved the world that it stood watching with deepest anxiety at his bedside. This is the reason

For words are things, and a small drop of ink, falling like dew upon a thought, produces that which makes thousands, perhaps millions, think.

Rudyard Kipling was born in Bombay Dec. 30, 1865, and is the son of John Lockwood Kipling, head of the Lahore School of Art in Bombay. The elder Kipling is a native of Staffordshire, England, where he was formerly a designer of decorations in a large pottery firm. Doulton's, formerly Pinder, Bourne & Co. Pinder's son tells the following story of how Rudyard received his rather peculiar name:

"One day my mother gave a picnic to the young people of the neighborhood at a pretty little English lake between the villages of Rudyard and Rushton, not far from Burslem. John Kipling went of course, and there he met a pretty English girl, Mary McDonald, the daughter of a Methodist minister at Endon. Kipling fell in love with her at once. They met very often at my mother's house, and it grew into a love affair on both sides. Then John Kipling went to the art school in Kensington and was afterward sent out to direct the art schools of the Madras Presidency in India. When he went to India, he took pretty Mary McDonald along as his wife.

"In the fullness of time a son was born to the Kiplings in Bombay. Their first meeting at Rudyard lake must have been the pretty bit of sentiment of their lives, for when they named the son they took for him the name of the little lake on the banks of which they first saw one another."

Young Rudyard was the apple of his father's eye, and as he matured in years he soon showed that he had unusual ability and aptitude for learning and scorned all playthings that were commonplace toys, but any sort of instructive puzzle or game that required thought and intelligence appealed to him at once, and with these he found endless pleasure and pastime. His mother was his early instructor. He proved an apt pupil and in a very short space of time accomplished reading and writing, and when this time came to pass the difficulty was to persuade him to play and do as other boys. Books were his one pleasure. No matter how erudite the work might be, Rudyard attacked it and absorbed its contents—in fact, he was quite beyond his years in intellect. He had a will of his own, as a boy, and at times asserted it in spite of the remonstrances of his parents. When he was about 8 or 9 years of age he was taken over to England and left in charge of a certain elderly relative. Here he passed some of the most miserable and uninteresting years of his youth. Eventually the time came when Rudyard was old enough to be
