International and Colonial Exhibitions

ANTWERP IN 1885—LONDON IN 1886.

It is the intention to have a Canadian representation at the INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION at Antwerp, commencing in May, 1885, and also at the COLONIAL AND INDIAN EXHIBITION in London in 1886.
The Government will defray the cost of freight in conveying Canadian Exhibits to Antwerp, and from Antwerp to London, and also of returning them to Canada in the event of their not being sold.
All Exhibits for Antwerp should be ready for shipment not later than the first week in March next.
These Exhibitions, it is believed, will afford favorable opportunity for making known the natural capabilities, and manufacturing and industrial progress of the Dominion.

Circulars and forms containing more particular information may be obtained by letter (post free) addressed to the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

ADAM BEDE.

CHAPTER XVI.

Toward the young squire this instinctive reverence of Adam's was assisted by boyish memories and personal regard; so you may imagine that he thought far more of Arthur's good qualities, and attached far more value to slight actions of his, than if they had been the qualities and actions of a common workman like himself. He felt sure it would be a fine day for every body about Heyslope when the young squire came into the estate—such a generous open-hearted disposition as he had, and an 'uncommon' notion about improvements and repairs, considering he was only just coming of age. Thus there was both respect and affection in the smile with which he raised his paper cap as Arthur Donnithorne rode up.
'Well, Adam, how are you?' said Arthur, holding out his hand. He never shook hands with farmers, and Adam felt the honor keenly. 'I could swear to your back a long way off. It's just the same only broader, as when you used to carry me on it. Do you remember?'
'Ay, sir, I remember. It 'ud be a poor look-out if folks didn't remember what they did and said when they were lads. We should think no more about old friends than we do about new 'uns, then?'
'You going to Broxton, I suppose?' said Arthur, putting his horse on at a slow space while Adam walked by his side. 'Are you going to the Rectory?'
'No, sir, I'm going to see about Bradwell's barn. They're afraid of the roof pushing the walls out; and I'm going to see what can be done with it, before we send the stuff and the workmen.'
'Why, Burge trusts almost every thing to you now, Adam, doesn't he? I should think he will make you his partner soon! He will if he's wise.'
'Nay, sir, I don't see as he'd be much the better off for that. A foreman, if he's got a conscience, and delights in his work, will do his business as well as if he was a partner. I wouldn't give a penny for a man as 'ud drive a nail in slack because he didn't get extra pay for it.'
'I know that, Adam; I know you work for him as well as if you were working for yourself. But you would have more power than you have now, and could turn the business to better account, perhaps. The old man must give up his business some time, and he has no son; I suppose he'll want a son-in-law who can take to it. But he has rather grasping fingers of his own, I fancy; I dare say he wants a man who can put some money into the business. If I were not as poor as a rat, I would gladly invest some money in that way, for the sake of having you settled on the estate. I'm sure I should profit by it in the end. And perhaps I shall be better off in a year or two. I shall have a larger allowance now I'm of age; and when I've paid off a debt or two I shall be able to look about me.'
'You're very good to say so, sir, and I'm not unthankful. But, Adam continued in a decided tone, 'I shouldn't like to make any offers to Mr. Burge, or to have any made for me. I see no clear road to a partnership. If he ever should want to dispose of the business that 'ud be a different matter. I should be glad of some money at a fair interest then, for I feel sure I could pay it off in time.'
'Very well, Adam,' said Arthur, remembering what Mr. Irwine had said about a probable hitch in the love-making between Adam and Mary Burge, 'we'll say no more about it at present. When is your father to be buried?'
'On Sunday, sir; Mr. Irwine's coming earlier on purpose. I shall be glad when it's over, for I think my mother 'all perhaps get easier then. It cuts one sadly to see the grief of old people; they've no way of working it off; and the new spring brings no new shoots out on the withered tree.'
'Ah! you've had a good deal of trouble and vexation in your life, Adam. I don't think you've ever been hare-brained and light-hearted like other youngsters. You've always had some care on your mind?'
'Why, yes, sir; but that's nothing to make a fuss about. If we're men and have men's feelings, I reckon we must have men's troubles. We can't be like the birds as fly from their nest as their kin when they see 'em, and get a fresh lot every year. I've had enough to be thankful for; I've always had health and strength and brains to give me a delight in my work; and I count it a great thing as I've had Bartie Massey's night school to go to. He's helped me to knowledge I could never ha' got by myself.'
'What a rare fellow you are, Adam!' said Arthur, after a pause, in which he had looked musingly at the big fellow walking by his side. 'I could hit out better than most men at Oxford, and yet I believe you would knock me into next week if I were to have a battle with you.'
'God forbid I should ever do that, sir,' said Adam, looking round at Arthur, and smiling. 'I used to fight for fun; but I've never done that since I was the cause of poor Bill Tranter being laid up for a fortnight. I'll never fight any man again only when he behaves like a scoundrel. If you get hold of a chap that's got no shame nor conscience to stop him, you must try what you can do by bugging his eyes up.'
'Arthur did not laugh, for he was preoccupied with some thought that made him say presently:
'I should think now, Adam, you never have any struggles within yourself. I fancy you would master a wish that you had made up your mind it was not quite right to indulge, as easily as you would knock down a drunken fellow who was quarrelsome with you. I mean, you are never shilly-shally, first making up your mind that you won't do a thing, and then doing it after all.'
'Well,' said Adam, slowly, after a moment's hesitation, 'no, I don't remember ever being see-saw in that way, when I'd made my mind up, as you say, that a thing was wrong. It takes the taste out of my mouth for things when I know I should have a heavy conscience after 'em. I've seen pretty clear, ever since I could cast up a sum as you can never do what's wrong without breed the end of the mischief it'll do. And it's a poor look-out to come into the world to make your fellow-creatures worse off instead of better. But there's a difference between the things folks call wrong. I'm not for making a sin of every little fool's trick, or bit of nonsense anybody may be let into, like the dissenters. And a man may have two minds whether it isn't worth while to get a bruise or two for the sake of a bit of fun. But it isn't my way to be see saw about anything; I think my fault lies th' other way. When I've said a thing, if it's only to myself, it's hard for me to go back.'

'Yes, that's just what I expected of you,' said Arthur. 'You've got an iron will, as well as an iron arm. But, however strong a man's resolution maybe, it costs him something to carry it out, now and then. We may determine not to gather any cherries, and keep our hands sturdily in our pockets, but we can't prevent our mouths from watering.'

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Elmira Literary Institute.

SIR,—The Elmira Literary Institute is in excellent working order. Meetings have been held weekly in our new hall during the fall. Subjects of an unusually interesting and instructive nature have been discussed. The society gave a free literary entertainment on Saturday evening the 27th ult. Mr. James Mellick was appointed chairman and Mr. Raymond McPhee acted secretary pro tem. Programme: An essay on "Farming" by the President, Mr. John F. Mellick, which was well received and applauded. Reading by Mr. Mal. J. Campbell, "Governor Robinson's address on P. E. Island," a very fine article, well read and duly appreciated. Reading by Mr. R. McPhee, comic; also essay by Raymond McPhee, on Common Sense, replete with information and instruction, well written and well delivered. Comic Reading by Joseph Bailey, which was very funny and enjoyed by young and old. Recitation by Wm. Bailey, on "Prince Edward Isle," was well recited, and very entertaining. Recitation by John F. Mellick, on the loss of the "Emeline." Reading and Recitation by M. J. Campbell, R. McPhee, Joseph Bailey and others brought the entertainment to a close. The President having taken the chair, the usual vote of thanks was tendered the Chairman for his efficient conduct therein. After hearing speeches from Mr. Michael McMahon, James Mellick, R. McPhee, M. J. Campbell, the President and others, a subject was proposed by R. McPhee for next evening's discussion, which was: "Ignorance or Poverty," after which the meeting quietly dispersed.
Yours, &c., "MEMBER."

Tryon North School Examination.

SIR,—The semi-annual examination of the Tryon North School, No. 85, held in the Schoolhouse on Friday, 2nd inst., was a grand success. It was conducted chiefly by the teachers—Miss Maggie Dault, Principal, and Miss Annie Ayers, Assistant. The pupils having been examined in the various branches taught in the School, in which they did exceedingly well, were then taken into the Advanced Department, where they entertained the visitors a short time with singing, dialogues and recitations, which were highly satisfactory.
Rev. S. T. Teed, who was present during the closing exercises, made a short speech, in which he gave the teachers and scholars great praise and encouragement, and the parents good advice.
We must be, as Rev. S. T. Teed said he was, well pleased that two such efficient teachers have charge of this school, and that it is progressing so well. The officers and thirty-eight visitors were present, who, after all was over, retired to their homes, seeming well pleased with the way they had spent the afternoon.
The walls of the Schoolhouse were beautifully decorated with spruce, in which there were red, white and pink roses, all done by the teachers and a few of the scholars. I must say in honor of the district, that as I was informed by the Secretary, the school tax for the year ending June 30th, 1885, has all been collected.
