

Canadian Recognition Of China Would Be Unpopular In U.S.

By ARCH MacKENZIE
 WASHINGTON (CP)—Some American legislators have advised their Ottawa counterparts that Canadian recognition of China would be unpopular in the United States, but it is Canada's own business.

Canadian parliamentarians also are more inclined toward a "go-slow" attitude in facing the situation created by President de Gaulle's decision to pull France from the NATO military structure.

These points emerged in the final reports of the ninth Canada-U.S. inter-parliamentary conference which ended Friday. The specific issue of the impact on the U.S. by a future Canadian decision to recognize China was raised by the Canadian delegation and formed part of a lively discussion.

Canada's Senate Speaker, Sydney Smith, and Republican Senator George Aiken of Vermont, agreed the latest conference was the most constructive.

Differences evident within each national delegation, the 24-man Canadian group, for example, represents all parties in the Commons and both Senate parties.

This divergence was particularly evident in a reference to the war in Viet Nam which gave recognition to the fact "there would be differences of opinion both in Canada and the U.S. on the best means of achieving the objectives of a restoration of peace and stability in Southeast Asia."

The report said there is unanimity that the U.S. has been striving earnestly for a solution and that President Johnson, who spoke to the delegations Thursday, deserves sympathy and support.

The China debate hinged on the questions of whether China's admission to the United Nations is desirable and of difficulties it might cause. It also touched the issue of moderating policies to contain China and "especially what might be the advantages and disadvantages of Canadian recognition of the Chinese Communist government at some future time."

Said the report: "Several American delegates frankly said that the move would be unpopular in the U.S., especially given the current situation in Viet Nam."

whether American attitudes to China were softening. There was a "general agreement, however, that close relations of mutual confidence between the U.S. and Canada would not be adversely affected by differences in Canadian and American viewpoints concerning Communist China."

The Canadian view also was noted that while Chinese non-compromise continues on terms for accepting U.S. admission it should not be given to the problem of standards of admission.

"Canadians also expressed considerable interest in recent statements by U.S. officials in which they saw evidence that some evolution was taking place in U.S. thinking on the problem."

A CANADIAN PROBLEM

However, some American delegates felt this was a problem for Canada to decide as viewed through its own national interest. In fact, it might serve a useful purpose to the West.

They urged that careful consideration be given to the proper timing if Canada should be led to consider such a step.

"There was some disagreement among the delegates as to

Leader Of Union Nationale Predicts 'Bomb' In Campaign

QUEBEC (CP)—Daniel Johnson, Union Nationale party leader, said in two weekend speeches that the Liberal party is planning to "drop a bomb" in the June 5 Quebec election campaign.

In Mont Laurier and Rouyn, the opposition leader referred to the "fake voting slips" scandal that erupted during the 1962 provincial election campaign when 4,000 counterfeit voting slips were seized in a Montreal railway station.

"It will happen eight days before the election, just like the affair of the false certificates," he said.

Premier Lesage pledged Sunday to make French the priority language of communication and advancement in Quebec.

He told an audience at St. Georges de Beauce, his government has no intention of curtailing the rights of the English-speaking minority. But the use of French had to be increased and its usage improved.

The premier said French will be made a basic requirement for all civil service jobs and new Canadians will be encouraged to enter French-language schools.

He stressed the policy "does not prevent English-speaking Quebecers from continuing to live here as full citizens of the Quebec we are building. The future of Quebec is as much theirs as ours."

A total of 419 candidates had entered their names with provincial election officials when nominations closed Sunday, more than in any previous election in the province.

Tautu and Kuglikiat were lonely for the first week of their two-month stay but quickly made friends with townsmen and fellow-employees at Lunenburg Sea Products Ltd.

After a few dinners in Lunenburg homes they took to German cooking in a big way. They now relish sauerkraut.

With about 3,500 people, Lunenburg impresses the visitors as big, compared with Rankin Inlet's population of 700.

Back-Benchers Elections Bill Talked Out By Other Liberal

OTTAWA (CP)—A Liberal back-bencher's bill which he said would correct an injustice in the Canada Elections Act was talked out in the Commons by another Liberal.

Jack Bigg (Athabasca) had instituted the mailed vote. This meant the results of an election might not be known for up to three weeks after the votes were cast.

Grant Deachman (L—Van-couver-Quadra) said thousands of university students were disfranchised in the 1965 general election because they were not registered and were attending university when the election was called.

Under his amendment, students attending a recognized educational institution would be deemed to be residing in the electoral district where they have their temporary residence at the time of the elections.

Spokesmen for the New Democratic and Social Credit parties said they would vote for the bill, but Conservative MPs said it should be studied.
