Government To Provide For Three Additional Dragger

Faith in the future of the fishing industry here is reflected in the decision of officials of the Department of Industry and Natural Resources to place in the estimate an amount sufficient to build three more draggers.

Announcement to this effect was made Saturday by Hon. Eugene Cullen, Minister of the Department, who said that he would ask for $100,000 for this purpose. The draggers will likely be built in Nova Scotia and will be the new style 80-foot boats which have been found satisfactory for fishing in these waters.

At the present time cod fishermen along the east coast of Cape Breton are meeting with marketing difficulties due to a glut of fish on the United States market just now. This is being emphasized by importation of cod filets from various Scandinavian countries. It is reported that the Europeans are able to sell at a price lower than Canadian fishermen can compete.

However, the glut on the market was foreseen by local authorities who report that there is no cod in storage here at present. All has been disposed of. It was reported that Cape Breton fishermen could only produce the filets at 22 cents per pound while the Scandinavian fishers were selling at 11 cents. But an official source here suggested that the men referred to were inshore fishermen and not operators of draggers.

There is an expanding market for cod throughout the United States, but it frequently happens that too much fish is landed there for immediate needs. Each year more fish is being sold there as the public increases its annual consumption. This is the primary market for island-caught fish and conditions are carefully watched by authorities.

The new draggers are designed by Walter MacInnis of the naval architectural firm of Eldridge and MacInnis, Boston, and incorporate many suggestions made by Mr. Eugene M. Gorman, Provincial Director of Fisheries. The first draggers brought to this Province as an experiment proved successful, but also indicated necessity for certain changes to meet local fishing conditions. The new type have been highly satisfactory as they make better use of the power of the diesel engines by giving more towing power and thus permitting fishing in deeper water. The old boats worked in water up to 45 feet deep, but the new ones can work efficiently at 100 fathom depths.

Miss Lenore Kettles, (above) president of the Montreal and Ottawa Conference, Y.P.U., who arrived at Gander Airport, Newfoundland last week on return from Travancore, India, where she attended the Third World Conference of Christian Youth.

Fluctuating market prices may encourage farmers to grow more wheat and coarse grain to feed their livestock. In particular, the government's agricultural advisers are looking for a big rise in the pig population.

Whether it does or not could decide the long-term fate of conservatism or socialism for Britain.

Britain To Return Grain Trade To Private Control

It is important in other ways to have policies in this country—cold war for Britain can find all the grain she needs from only two sources and taps both—the Soviet Union and North America.

It also is the most fundamental change Winston Churchill's Conservative Government has made since it inherited power in October, 1951.

At one blow the government will allow private traders to take over the present complex farm supply program, and build up another on a new pattern.

Full Details Not Known — Full details of the new program are not yet known. But this much has been announced: One day next fall, price controls, rationing and government bulk purchasing of grain will come to an end, and private traders will again become responsible for feeding Britain after a 14-year interval.

Government grain subsidies also will end next April 1. Ever since 1939 the British Government has had the direct responsibility of finding bread grains and animal feed.

The bread grains are one basic staple in the country's diet. The other, livestock feed, is converted into about one half of the animal proteins needed to keep Britons alive.

Much of British agriculture is a processing industry, not primary production. Thousands of farms operate by turning imported feed into eggs, poultry, pork and beef.

The grain trade is so big it accounts for a quarter of the huge food import bill of $3,840,000 a year.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Haven Women's Institute was held at the home of Miss Helen Docherty on January 7th, with an attendance of 12 members and four visitors.

The meeting opened by singing the Institute Ode and repeating the Creed in unison.

The president occupied the chair. Roll call was answered by each member bringing an article for auction.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read, approved, and signed. The secretary reported $52.20 made at the Christmas Concert. The sick committee reported two calls, two taken and thanks expressed for same.

Correspondence was read and discussed, including a letter from the Red Cross concerning a First Aid Course. Several "thank you" letters from the recipients of Christmas boxes were received and read. Two letters of appreciation for boxes at Christmas were read from St. Vincent's and Mount Herbert Orphanages.

Sentenced To Three Years At Dorchester

A sentence of three years in Dorchester Penitentiary was passed on John Carl Fall convicted last week on a charge of possession of stolen goods in connection with the theft of a large quantity of cigarettes. They were taken from the premises of J. C. Montgomery Ltd. last November. There were originally two other men held on the same charge, one was acquitted and the Crown withdrew the charge against the other.

Prior to the passing of sentence by Mr. Justice George J. Tweedy in Supreme Court Saturday morning Mr. Allison M. Gillis, counsel for the prisoner, made a strong plea for leniency. He told the Court that sometimes in the case of large families, the prisoner is one of 12 children, one or two may not get the proper home supervision.

This, he said happened in the case of the prisoner and as a result he was in trouble early in life with the Juvenile Court. However, he said, since then the only difficulty he had was a minor charge of siphoning gasoline from a car. Other than that he had been a good youngster.

Mr. Gillis said that from statements made by the heat of argument the Court might have obtained the impression that the boy was a loafer. However, his employer stated he had never had a better workman. Counsel stated he was now at a critical stage of life where severity could lead into bitterness, but also where leniency and mercy would show that the law is not only a means of revenge but something which takes an interest in people personally.

He called Mr. William J. Ford, who had employed Fall in his contracting business until his arrest. Mr. Ford spoke strongly of the good work the prisoner had done while with him and said he had completely trusted him with property, collecting money and paying bills. Mr. Gillis then stated that the prisoner was a hard working boy and it would be a shame to wreck his life at this point.

Judge's Comment — In his remarks to the convicted man Judge Tweedy said at the outset the Court would be as fair and lenient as possible. He remarked that the length of sentence to be imposed had given the Court great concern because of the prisoner's stage of life.

His Lordship said that somewhere along life's way someone had fallen down on the job of looking after the prisoner. He did not know whether it was the home school, church, service clubs or other organizations, but it seemed strange that a boy of 13 in trouble could be left to his own devices with no one to take any interest and help him along. To him it was inconceivable that a child of 13 could be convicted and later no one offered to help. "It is a sad reflection on society and its organizations that it could happen."

He told the prisoner that his punishment was not meant as revenge, but was given to reform. His well being and the interests of society had been considered in arriving at what the Court felt was a fair and just sentence. He told Fall he would be given a chance to study and work and expressed the hope that on his return to society there would be someone to take an interest in him.

Mike Jacobs Former Czar of Boxing Dies

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 25 (CP) — Mike Jacobs, 72, a fabulous figure in the boxing world until his retirement 3 1/2 years ago, died Saturday of a heart attack in Mount Sinai Hospital here.

"Uncle Mike" had been dividing his time between Florida and his New Jersey home since 1949 when he resigned from the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, forced by failing health to give up the boxing empire he built and ruled for more than a decade.

His rule was established through his control of Joe Louis during the Brown Bomber's reign as heavyweight champion.

Jacobs was a longtime associate and eventual heir of Tex Rickard, promoter of fights in the grand manner of the turbulent 20's.

Mike was attending the races at Hialeah Park Friday when pains of his old heart ailment disturbed him. He was rushed to hospital where he died Saturday morning.

Born in lower New York City, the third of nine children, he attended school only through the sixth grade but developed a keen grasp of finances that helped through his career.

Rickard in 1921 when he promised blocks of choice seats to ticket brokers in order to raise $100,000 to help Rickard finance the Jack Dempsey-Georges Carpentier heavyweight title fight.

He organized the Twentieth Century Sporting Club and signed Louis, then a young fighter fresh out of Golden Gloves competition. With each knockout, the Brown Bomber's prestige grew and Jacobs made money in proportion, topped by the $1,255,564 gate in the 1946 fight between Louis and Billy Conn at Yankee Stadium.

Jacobs suffered a stroke in New York six years ago and gradually retired from participation in his Twentieth Century Sporting Club, finally selling out to Jim Norris and the present-day International Boxing Club.
