ELLEN'S DIARY

Haying Season Closes And Fair Week Begins

By this evening, after a long and busy day for our farmers, our haying 1966 was complete. "And not before time!" Mack commented with a twinkle. "We missed you when you were away on that 4-H trip!" James said. "Another shoulder to the wheel would have counted. However, we did well." "Had the odd holdup too on account of breaks in machines?" one of the crew recalled. "And" another added with a wry expression, "had to search the island to try to locate the needed extra!" "And at last had to have one cast!" the first one nodded. "Well, there won't be any worry over being short of hay this stabling!" James smiled. "I would say, we'd have a nice few bales to come and go on." "And isn't that good news!" we said. "It's good too to have it done!" he nodded. "Now we can catch up on other work about the place." "Now," Mack grinned, "we will have time to get ready for the Fair!" By this the Fair, that gala event which marks the Island's Old Home Week, will be taking form. Not yet altogether settled, that is. There will be that last flurry of preparations, which attends such doings, though by midnight, things will have pretty well fallen into place. "We'll take a holiday Fair Week," Ellen James suggested at dinner. "We'll stop at home, and take things easy. Rest, you know. I see we have weeds in the mangel patch. And where that wood was cut the other year, there's a few maple shoots springing up. I might take a axe back one day and cut those. But by rights that should have been done in July. That's the best time to kill them. I've found. It would be nice to have that piece cleared." "And the thistles in the orchard?" "I did mow them. Remember - when they were in the right stage of blossoming?" It is likely however that James will be "among those present at the Fair." Perhaps tonight. Or before this he will have come in, to satisfy himself that all is well with our herdsman, and those of the little herd, taken in of late from the fields to sojourn in strange stables there. Will the littlest calf, similar, we think, to white kitten's son and heir, be content stabled after chumming with the birds of the fields? Without the summer winds that pleasantly sun and shade of the Pasture? And the quiet of the farm? Scented today's wash was with the fragrance of a million blossoms, when we carried it indoors, fresh from the line to be ironed. Then it is, it presses easily and well. And the Starlings? There was no sign of them. We think they are excursions with the dark company of the king, which in a sound of beating wings fly over these days to settle here and there on the fields. In any event, this evening saw the close of our haying. I & crew will no doubt sleep well. Until tomorrow - Diary - Good-night.

Beauty Classes Successful For Young Retarded Girls

New York, N. Y. - An unusual beauty class is conducted by Mrs. Ida Horowitz, a social worker. Her students are pretty and teen age girls at Maimonides institute, a private nonprofit school in New York city which works only with retarded children who cannot meet the pace of ordinary public schools. Mrs. Horowitz's instruction on one day was confined to hand care. First, she examined everyone's hands for nail biting and gave each girl a point. She had not often seen since the last class. Then she carefully went over hand washing and nail cleaning. By simple questions, she drew from the girls points about giving themselves manicures. Afterward, Miss Carol Wolitsky, speech therapist, said, "If appearance is important to people generally, it's even more so to exceptional children. We are trying to prepare as many children here as possible for a normal life, with a job as well as social activities in their future. To be accepted by those who are going to meet them later, they need a socially acceptable appearance." Learn Self-Respect One of the functions of Maimonides institute is to experiment with new approaches in the total teaching of retarded children. The need for grooming lessons first presented itself to Mrs. Horowitz as social worker for the school. "The retarded child well enough, he or she is different from other children," she said, "especially as often he has normal brothers and sisters. When a child comes to Maimonides, she frequently has no self-respect. It seemed to me that grooming lessons might be the quickest way to creating self-respect." In a few months, the initial experiment classes became a general program. The girls even took it over themselves making it into a club which meets once a week. Because the slow learner tires quickly of anything abstract, teaching methods feature the "let's pretend" technique. For example, the girls decide that they will go to a party and then decide how they should dress, style their hair and groom their apparatus. Prizes Awarded Besides general lessons, the girls are encouraged to pay attention to individual problems. Prizes are given to those who stop biting their nails. One girl has gone on a diet and lost 10 pounds. Miss Wolitsky is integrating the "beauty" classes with her speech work, finding that each gives new meaning to the other. "The club beauty program has made a great difference in the girls," said Miss Wolitsky. "We find that it improves their general learning because their attitude is better. Self-respect is very important in motivating learning, as the girls feel now that they have more reason for learning." Maimonides will review the program after a year to decide whether it should be permanent. Mrs. Horowitz said she had little doubt, already that it has proven a highly useful tool in the instruction of retarded children. - Women's News Service.

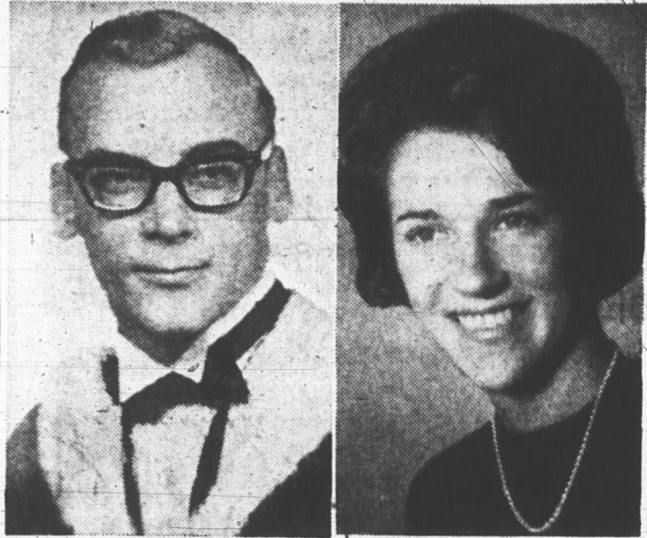

Clinton Success WI's Combine For Meeting

The members of the Clinton Women's Institute were guests of the Success Women's Institute for the regular monthly meeting when the guest speaker for the evening was Mrs. Beryl Craswell of Hunter River who is a First Aid and swimming instructor in the Hunter River Area. Mrs. Craswell stressed the importance of the Red Cross Water Safety program for both children and adults and a water safety knowledge test was given each member. She also distributed water safety calendars and water safety rules. The speaker was introduced by Mrs. Ralph Wigmore and thanked by the president, Mrs. Louis MacLeod for a very interesting talk. The president welcomed the guests and the meeting opened with the song "In the Good old Summer time." The secretary Mrs. Fred Campbell, read the minutes of the previous meeting. It was announced that the collection in the district for the Cancer Society amounted to $28.00 and for the Salvation Army $27.50. An ice cream social was held in the school house and proceeds amounted to $100.90. Correspondence was read and discussed. Mrs. Ralph Wigmore gave a very interesting report of the annual convention and also gave a report of the Water Safety meeting which she attended. Mrs. Louis Campbell entertained with a contest. The theme for next meeting will be "literature" and Mrs. George P. MacLeod will be convener. Meeting closed with the National Anthem.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

For a nice dark navy blue, when you're dyeing at home, mix 1-3 black, 2-3 navy dye. To whiten handkerchiefs, soak them overnight in a basin of cold water in which a quarter teaspoon of cream of tartar has been dissolved. To prevent wool sweaters from sagging at the shoulders, measure the wearer from neck to armpole, cut a bit of ribbon this length and attach firmly at both ends. Fill hot water bottles 1/2 to 2-3 full, squeeze out air before closing and the water will stay hotter longer. Be sure to buy pillowcases large enough. Those you have to force the pillows into wear out faster. When washing throw rugs, add starch to the rinse water and they'll lie flatter, without curling. More than 50 per cent of the funds raised annually by the Canadian Cancer Society is devoted to research. Television antennas, house numbers, home mail delivery and billboards are not permitted in Carmel-by-the-Sea, Calif.

MRS. JAMES WILKIE

Alberton Woman Honored On Her Ninetieth Birthday

Mrs. James Wilkie of Alberton celebrated her 90th birthday on Friday, June 29th. In honor of the occasion, her daughter, Mrs. Stanton Clark, was hostess at an afternoon reception when friends and neighbors had the opportunity to extend their congratulations and good wishes. Mrs. Wilkie received in a room decorated with seasonal flowers. Assisting in serving were Mrs. Rhodes Ashley, Mrs. Glen Rennie and Jacylyn Johnson. Refreshments included a very attractive birthday cake. In the evening a number of relatives assembled. Among congratulatory messages received was one from Premier Alex Campbell. Two weeks prior to this there was a family party to enable as many as possible of the Wilkie family to share in celebrating this milestone in their mother's life. On this occasion the hostess was another daughter, Mrs. Charles Gordon. Alvin Wilkie, acting as master of ceremonies called on his brother, Perez to read an address to their mother. Presentations were made on behalf of the children by Mrs. Gordon and Mrs. Fred Ashley, on behalf of the grandchildren by Eileen Wilkie, on behalf of the great grandchildren by Grant Wilkie and on behalf of the little great-great-grandchild by her mother, Mrs. Murray Ellis. Telegrams were received from grandson Douglas Molins of Montreal, from granddaughter, Mrs. Paul Nicholson who is attending summer school in Moncton, and from granddaughter, Mrs. Eric Caldwell and her family in Dartmouth. One of the very happy features of the evening was a telephone call from son Elbert Wilkie in Lethbridge, Alberta, who was the only member of the family not present. He conversed with his mother, then with the other members of the family. A birthday cake, made by daughter-in-law, Mrs. Arthur Wilkie, was topped with a wreath with a 90 year emblem, surrounded by twelve candles, one for each child in the family. As the cake was carried in by grand daughter Faye Gordon three little great-grandchildren,

"When it comes to hauling your freight, we're not talking about old Dobbin." "That's a lot of horses. And they're for hire. They gallop your freight to the next city, the next province, or clear across the country any time of day or night. Like old Dobbin, they're working horses. But unlike old Dobbin, they don't get tired at the end of the day." "You see, we're a company of people serving you. So we do our best to ship your goods as quickly and efficiently as possible. We figure that makes good horse sense." "Canadian Pacific Serving you in so many ways." "And to make sure our horses speed your freight where you want it to go, we spur them on with the latest in handling techniques and communications."
