W. H. ROGERS.

AMHERST, N. S., May 27, 1893.

THE GRODER DYSPEPSIA CURE CO.

GENTLEMEN:—I am 71 years of age. Have been afflicted with sick headache most all my life, which developed into Dyspepsia of a mild type about twenty years ago, and has continued to grow worse until during the past seven or eight years I have not been able to take a drink of cold water or milk, as they would produce severe pains and sometimes vomiting. I have been subject to severe pains in the chest, with dizziness, which have been more frequent during the past three or four years. My mouth was furred up in the mornings, accompanied with bad breath. My case was yearly growing worse.

During all this long period I have tried many popular medicines, as well as prescriptions from the regular medical practitioners, but without producing any improvment.

In the fall of '92 I concluded to try a bottle or two of your medicine and such were its effects that I continued it and now I can drink cold water or milk without any inconvenience. Those dizzy pains are all gone and my mouth is as sweet as a baby's. In short, your medicine has cured me and I am sure that all Dyspeptics can be cured by its use.

(Signed) W. H. ROGERS,
Late inspector of Fisheries for Nova Scotia.

AMMONIA BETTER THAN A CLUB.

New York Policemen Have Adopted a Novel Plan for Arousing Drunks.

Ever since the New York police commissioners issued the edict against members of "the finest" carrying their locust during the day the patrolmen in the downtown precincts have been trying to find something with which to take the place of the club when it was found necessary to recall sleeping "drunks" from the land of dreams to the stern realities of existence. Formerly, says the Evening World, a free application of the club to the soles of a sleeper's feet had the desired effect. Denied that method of rousing the dormant powers of locomotion in the golden gentry it was often necessary to spend the greater part of an hour persuading an individual to hie himself away. But it was not long before the inventive genius of an Oak street station patrolman made the way all smooth and beautiful once more. Now a five cent rubber ball has taken the place of the eighteen-inch stick. Apparently harmless as this little toy looks to the uninitiated, its efficacy as a "bum" accelerator far exceeds a whole bundle of night sticks. It isn't the rubber ball, but its contents that does the business. Every patrolman in the fourth ward now fills a rubber ball with household ammonia when he starts out in the morning. A gentle pressure of the thumb and finger projects a fine stream of fluid lightning from the small hole in the hollow sphere a distance of several feet. This tiny stream brought to bear upon a "sleeper's" mustache has never yet failed to bring about an immediate revivifying of the subject, no matter how inert the bundle of "bum" appeared to be a moment previous.

Tower Bridge, London.

Some interesting figures are published relating to the new Tower bridge, corrected up to what, so far as materials are concerned, may be taken to be the completion of the work. It was estimated that the bricks required would be 31 millions; the number actually used has been only 24 millions. On the other hand the granite, which was to have been 235,000 tons, has really been 415,000 tons. The cement used has been 19,000 tons, instead of 19,500; the concrete 72,000 cubic yards, instead of the estimated 70,500. It was reckoned that the iron and steel required would be 15,000 tons; they have actually used 800 tons more than this. Some of these discrepancies have been due to modifications of plans as the work proceeded; on the whole, they may be taken to be remarkably near the calculated figures. It need hardly be said that the estimated cost has been somewhat exceeded. It almost invariably is in such undertakings. But here again the departure from the original reckoning does not strike one as anything very surprising. It was to have cost £750,000; it is now calculated that when all is done the bill will be £800,000. The finishing courses of masonry are now being put upon the towers, and the "chains" have just been completed; the lifts are being got into position, the spiral staircase are rapidly stretching up the towers, and the roadways are fast preparing for traffic. All will be finished early in the new year.

The Unprotected Women of Paris.

An interesting account has just appeared of some of the Protestant organizations which exist in Paris, and indeed throughout France, for the benefit of young women and girls who have to live alone. The International Union of the Friends of Young Women has founded in various towns of France 21 homes where young women are fed and lodged very cheaply, and can enjoy many social pleasures. In Paris there is also the Christian Asylum for Female Domestics, where servants are lodged for one and a half francs, or fifteen pence, a day, and at the temporary asylum for Protestant women the fees amount to only half a crown a week. There is also a workshop for unemployed workwomen, where plain needlework is found and well paid for. Paris has a club for shop-girls, which is open every afternoon and evening, where lessons in English and music are given gratuitously. At this house the average daily attendance is between 30 and 40. There is also a Convalescent Home for Protestant young women near the Bois de Boulonge, where they are allowed to stay for three weeks at a time. With few exceptions, these charitable institutions, though primarily intended for Protestants, are not exclusively sectarian.

A Little Sermon.

The primeval enjoyment of man is the most healthful of all occupations; healthful for the body and the soul. The husbandman walks forth under the open sky, his broad acres spreading beneath his feet; the blue concave, sunlit or starlit, or shrouded in clouds, is still above him. Health claims him as her favorite child, and the glorious sun loves to kiss a cheek that is not ashamed to wear the ruddy imprint of such affection. Nature's own inimitable babbling brooks, birds, breeze or rustling foliage, enter his ear on their glad mission to his heart. He listens to instructive voices continually speaking from the universe around him. His eyes gather truth from pages of wisdom everywhere open before him. Each day, each month, season after season, year after year, these teachings are given to him, infinite in variety, and endless in extent. When, towards the close of a sultry day, the summer's blessing comes pouring down, as says the beautiful poetry of the sacred volume, the trees of the field clap their hands, and the valleys, covered with corn, shout for joy; the husbandman, retiring from his labors to the friendly shelter of his cottage roof, improves his leisure hours with measures of wisdom.—From the London Echo.

A Habit of the Red Deer.

The red and fallow deer which formerly roamed through the English forests had a habit of scraping up the earth with their fore feet to the depth of several inches, sometimes even of half a yard. The stranger passing through these woods was frequently exposed to the danger of tumbling into one of the hollows, when he might be said truly to be "in a scrape." The college students of Cambridge, in their little perplexities, picked up and applied the phrase to other perplexing matters which had brought a man morally into a fix.

Industrious.

"I never got a cent that I didn't work for," said Meandering Mike, as he stood on the farm-house doorstep. "Didn't you?" was the surprised inquiry. "No, ma'am. Not a cent, and often I've walked miles and miles lookin' fur somebody to work."

CAPTAIN JOHN R. HIRE, of schooner Lillian, says: "I was suffering with inflammation of the chest, brought on by exposure at sea. Took a good supply of Puttner's Emulsion, which perfectly cured me. It has given me a new set of lungs. .....

PYTHONS SHEDDING THEIR SKIN.

How the Big Reptiles in the Philadelphia Zoo Accomplished the Feat.

The two large pythons which were imported from India for the Philadelphia Zoological Garden have made themselves at home in their quarters. They are said to be the largest reptiles in this country, and naturally attract considerable attention. They had only been here two weeks when both snakes underwent a change. They became droopy and it was seen that they began to shed their skins. The manner in which the snakes accomplished the greater part of the job is described by a correspondent of the Globe Democrat as wonderful. The largest python measures 16 feet, and the other 12. They are mates, and have mouths like cellar doors. They are filled with terrible fangs. On Monday last the big snake, which had eaten nothing for three weeks because he was shedding his coat, got a move on himself and climbed one of the tall trees and coiled all around the limbs. Then he rubbed his head and neck violently against the branches in every direction, and gradually loosened his old cuticle from around his head, mouth and neck. In the meantime the other snake was not idle. It, too, coiled around the tree, and, raising its head, took hold of its big brother's neck, and by careful manipulation loosened the skin from the head and neck for about a foot down. Then it took hold of the loosened skin, and the keepers and spectators who were watching the proceedings saw what was going to happen. With its head and neck free the big snake could help in the shedding during the operation, and it twisted around the tree near the top and began to pull away from the smaller snake at top speed. Inch by inch the old skin was released, and the bright color of the new cuticle came in view. It took nearly a hour to get about half of the body free from the old covering, and then both snakes rested. The old skin was pulled back just as one would pull a glove inside out, and gave the reptile a peculiar appearance. When the snakes resumed their job they employed different tactics. The larger snake climbed higher, and the other made itself fast lower down the tree. The smaller one took hold of the skin and pulled for all it was worth. All of the covering with the exception of about two feet from the big snake's tail was loose. Then a most wonderful thing happened. The big snake's head was at the top of the tree, and he had not been paying much attention to the goings on at the other end of his body. When the smaller snake stopped pulling the big one looked down and saw that something was wrong. His eyes glistened, and reaching down he grabbed a mouthful of his own covering and proceeded to finish the job. It was done with dispatch and ease. The big snake seemed proud of his new suit, and wriggled all around the case and admired himself for some time. Then to the astonishment of the watchers the smaller snake climbed the tree and went through the same performance, assisted by the larger one. After both reptiles were free from the old skins they made a meal of them and each drank about a gallon of water to wash down the repast. The keepers says that it is no unusual thing for small snakes to get rid of their old skins in this way, but they never heard of large snakes like the python or boa doing it.

The Jews in Switzerland.

The adoption by Switzerland of the constitutional amendment of last year which authorizes the promulgation of a law demanded by any 50,000 of the electors, although nobody in the Legislative Assembly is prepared to advocate it, seems likely to lead to some singular developments. One of the fruits is a requisition by 83,000 electors for an Act the ostensible object of which is to prohibit the slaughter of animals without the application of anæsthetics, and is professedly directed against the method of slaughtering cattle adopted by the Jews. As a matter of fact, however, it is declared to be another form of attack upon the Hebrew communities in cantons, where they are formidable competitors with other trading classes, neither more nor less, indeed, than an anti-Semitic demonstration veiled under the pretence of exercising a constitutional right on purely human grounds. The object, however, seems likely to be frustrated. The initiative of the electors must be supported by a majority of the cantons, as well as by a majority of voters, and it is understood that at least 13 of the 22 cantons are opposed to the new movement.

The Little Weaver.

Once in an eastern palace wide
A little child sat weaving;
So patiently her task she plied,
The men and women at her side
Flocked round her, almost grieving.

"How is it, little one," they said,
"You work so well and cheerily?
You never seem to break your thread,
Or snarl, or tangle it, instead
Of working smooth and clearly.

"Our weaving gets so worn and soiled,
Our silk so frayed and broken,
For all we've fretted, wept and toiled,
We know the lovely pattern's spoiled";
They sighed as words were spoken.

The little child looked in their eyes,
So full of care and trouble;
And pity chased the sweet surprise
That filled her own, as sometimes flies
The rainbow in the bubble.

"I only go and tell the king,"
She said, abashed and meekly;
"You know, He said in 'everything,'"
"Why, so do we!" they cried; "we bring
Him all our troubles weekly!"

She turned her little head aside,
A moment let them wrangle;
"Ah, but," she softly then replied,
"I go and get the knot untied
At the first little tangle!"

O little children—weavers all!
Our broidery we spangle
With many a tear that need not fall,
If on our King we would but call
At the first little tangle!

The Fin De Siecle Boy.

In the good old days which produced Websters, Beechers and Longfellows, 12-year-old boys were wont to read compositions on horses, skating, butter and other apprehensible and comprehensible subjects, whereas now they must befog themselves and their hearers with dissertations on immigration, arbitration, socialism, university extension and the like, or be covered with the ignominy of the juvenile. How a parent would blush in these days to hear his boy read a very good and luminous composition on cows, after hearing somebody else's boy read a poor and nebulous one on "Theories of Government!" We are all prone to join in accomplishing the apotheosis of the prig. Do we not all cry Hail! to the little mental prodigy, with his high white brow and his low white collar, his weak dissolving eyes, his manikin ways, flat chest, studied speech and aversion to leap-frog?—Kate Field's Washington.
