Expected To Revise Waiver Rules This Year

(By Jack Hand) NEW YORK, Aug. 14—(AP)—What goes on with all this waiver nonsense in baseball.

No trading in the majors after June 15 is the rule. But the New York Yankees have filled up with National Leaguers via the waiver rule for four seasons.

Chicago gets Jim Rivera from St. Louis after trading him to the Browns in a multiple-player deal last spring. Cleveland pops up with Wally Westlake from Cincinnati. And that's just a couple.

According to the rule book, it's legal. The rules say no assignment of players by one big league club to another after June 15 except—

The "except" is the gimmick. It provides for deals through the waiver channels. Thus in the American League, the seventh place Browns and last place Detroit Tigers can shuffle players at will—for a $10,000 price tag.

Like-wise Pittsburgh and Cincinnati in the National League if they wish.

Perhaps no great harm is done in a wholesale shift of talent from seventh place to eighth place. A change of faces sometimes helps the gate. Nevertheless, it violates the spirit of the June 15 trade ban.

It is difficult to understand how a player like Westlake, despite his bad year at bat, can be shucked off as not worth $10,000 by the entire National League. A year ago he and Cliff Chambers were traded to St. Louis for Howie Pollock, Ted Wilks, Joe Garagiola, Bill Howerton and a minor leaguer named Dick Cole.

The two top political figures in Nepal—Prime Minister Matrika Prasad Koirala and his younger brother, Bishwar Prasad Koirala, leader of the main political party in Nepal—have not been getting along with each other.

The King today accepted the resignation of the Prime Minister, who refused to bend to his brother's demands for a cabinet reshuffle.

Tribhuvana said he would rule with the help of five advisers because "it does not seem possible at the moment to have a cabinet which will work harmoniously and effectively."

He would work for early elections, an Independent Judiciary and fundamental rights.

Two Quebec Men Killed In Crash FORESTVILLE, Que. Aug. 14 — (CP)—Two Quebec residents were killed Wednesday when their Fleet-Canuk two-seater plane crashed on take-off at this lumber base centre, 100 miles downriver from Quebec.

The dead were identified as Andre Vesina, 27, the pilot and Alfred Gingras, 32.

The two men had left L'Anclienne Lorette Airport, near Quebec, yesterday to visit relatives here and were returning to Quebec when the accident occurred.

Police said the craft was just leaving the runway when it crashed and burst into flames. Police said they believed the two men were burned to death.

With the Crowds At The "Ex."

Pitted against strong opposition from the Holstein herd of Colby Lewis, Freetown, Lewis Bros. of York, and Oswald Newson & Sons, Clyde River, the Abegweit herd of Premier Jones held a margin over his competitors when the judging was completed.

Attracting much attention, though not being shown, is Abegweit Milady, world's record holder, and the dowager of the great Bunbury herd. The details of Milady's great record of production, and of her victories in the show ring are appended to her stall. Abegweit Milady is now twelve years old.

Colby Lewis made a great impression with his Holsteins, and carried off the grand championship female.

Colby's sons, Lewis Bros., ranked next to the Jones herd, in the number of first prizes, and their stock dominated some tough classes.

Oswald Newson's Holsteins gathered in many high awards, and it was probable that in actual money earnings he stood well up towards the top.

Edison Mutch of North River led in the field in the Jersey classes. His herd compelled the admiration of the many people who followed the judging.

Col. Fred Andrew probably set up some kind of a record when his magnificent Ayrshire bull won his sixth grand championship.

This remarkable animal now thirteen years old headed a grand array of entries from the Colonel's East Royalty farm.

Taking time out from his track performances Commander Geo. H. Buntain's Miss Knox proved his class in the show ring. He took first honors in the roadster class, and his selection by Judge John McCallum of Ottawa was seconded by the many ringside spectators.

P. J. Cadejan, owner of Lucky Chief, and other fast performers, is one of the best known owners of visiting stables. "P. J." is in no wise standoffish and everybody around the stables from grooms to owners draws a smile and word or two from the genial Cape Bretoner. He is the type that keeps horseracing in high gear in the Maritimes.

Mr. R. R. Bell, whose cattle are making an excellent showing at the fair, seems to have little time for anything else than looking after his herd. Mr. Bell is doing his full share of the work, and has spent most of the week in coveralls. It's quite a step from Bar to barn, but he seems to revel in it.

Well MacNeil, who for many years was a central figure in the racing game still takes a hand in things. His Neil Budlong did very well yesterday afternoon.

Dr. Lantz, president of the Exhibition Association, who in the final analysis is responsible for the success or failure of the annual show, must be pleased with this year's renewal of the fair.

About the only criticism heard is in itself an indirect compliment. Many people believe that the crowds are outgrowing the accommodation, and this of course is the fate that overtakes every smash-hit.

Traces Descend Of Polynesians To American Indians LONDON, Aug. 14 — (CP)—There's a book just out which says the Polynesians of the Pacific are direct descendants of North American Indians.

Thor Heyerdahl, the Norwegian scientist who headed the famous Kon-Tiki expedition and then wrote a best-seller about it, outlines the theory in a second book entitled "American Indians in the Pacific" published Wednesday. (Allen and Unwin).

Heyerdahl claims that some nine centuries ago members of Indian tribes from British Columbia took the ocean in canoes and eventually wound up in Hawaii and other Pacific Islands. Until recently, the accepted theory has been that the Pacific Islanders came from Java or Malaya.

But Heyerdahl says they are closely related to tribes in the northwest coastal strip of Canada. To support his point that canoes could safely travel to the west, he recounts a trip made by a sea captain from Vancouver Island in 1926.

Heyerdahl's 800-page book also sets out the theory that the Pacific Islands were colonized some 600 years before the Norwegian American Indians arrived by bearded, fair-skinned settlers from Peru.

Busy Three Days On P. E. Island For Noted Photographer

Mr. Yousof Karsh, internationally known photographer, will leave here tomorrow for Halifax, N. S. after spending three days in Prince Edward Island on a picture story he is doing for a national magazine.

Mr. Karsh, who has photographed Royalty including Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip, Pope Pius, Prime Minister Churchill and others, is currently doing a 10-city series for MacLean's Magazine. In the Maritimes, he is doing Saint John, Charlottetown and Halifax.

After that he will visit Regina for a picture story on wheat farming and from there will proceed to the United States.

While in Prince Edward Island, he had a busy three days. He photographed Premier J. Walter Jones in his office, the birthplace of Lucy Maude Montgomery, lobster fishing, a typical island potato field, Dr. Roddy MacDonald of St. Peter's, who at 94 is Canada's oldest practicing physician, horse racing and other island items.

Mr. Karsh was accompanied here by his wife and Ian Scanders of MacLean's Magazine. During his tour of Charlottetown and the province he was conducted around by George V. Fraser, director of the P. E. I. Government Tourist and Information Bureau.

Living Costs In Seven Cities Up

OTTAWA, Aug. 14 — (CP)—Living costs in seven of nine regional cities — all but Toronto and Vancouver — climbed again during June, pushed ahead mainly by higher food prices, the Bureau of Statistics reported Wednesday.

The regional cost-of-living index, based on August, 1939, prices equalling 100, remained unchanged at Toronto at 184.4, but declined by four-fifths of a point at Vancouver to 189.8 from 190.6.

Egg prices were higher at all centres, the Bureau said, and meat also climbed at most points. Vegetables were higher at Winnipeg, Saskatoon and Edmonton, but lower at other points. The regional index shows.
