

The Irish Landlords.

IN SERIOUS TROUBLE OVER THEIR UN-PRODUCTIVE PROPERTY—A MEMORIAL TO BE PRESENTED PARLIAMENT FOR THEIR RELIEF.

The Irish landlords are in serious trouble over their unproductive property. Notwithstanding the recent reductions of rent, which have been very general and liberal, they cannot collect even the reduced rents with any degree of certainty, and they are now almost without exception, anxious to sell. A largely attended meeting of landlords was held on May 16th, at which the situation, as reported by speakers from various parts of the country, was shown to be exceedingly unfavorable to the landlords. They have appealed in vain for capitalists outside of Ireland to come in and purchase their lands, even at prices which a few years ago would have been considered absurdly low. This condition of affairs exactly suits the Parnellite party who are urging the tenants not to purchase lands from the landlords, holding out the hope that by standing aloof the proprietors will be forced to sell their property at very low figures. The highest offer that has been advised by any of the Irish leaders is a seven years' purchase which is mentioned as acceptable by Mr. Parnell. The other leaders insist upon a much cheaper rate, Mr. Davitt claiming that a five year's purchase is enough, while Mr. Hailey, M. P. for Monaghan, goes so far as to say that the landlord ought to be satisfied with one year's purchase. A strong attempt will be made to force the landlords to recede very materially from their present demands, and a significant fact, pointing in this direction, is that the purchases of land for Mr. Parnell's migration company have suddenly ceased. This concern was originated last March under the name of the Irish Land Company, with Mr. Parnell as chairman, and with various members of parliament, including Sir Baldwin Leighton, Jacob Bright and Edmund Dwyer Gray, among the directors. Its object was the thinning out of the congested districts in Ireland by buying land in less thickly populated portions of the Island, and selling it on easy terms to residents of the crowded districts, who would thus be enabled to spread out over the whole entire country. Several large purchases of land were made by this company, but these have suddenly ceased, and it is evident that the company believes the market is falling. All these phases of the situation were fully discussed at the meeting of landlords in Dublin, and a deputation was appointed to present a memorial to parliament, praying the government to adopt measures to facilitate the sales of land to tenants.

Death of An Inventor.

Hon. C. H. McCormick, who died at Chicago on Tuesday, in the 75th year of his age, was the inventor of the famous reaper. He was a Virginian by birth, of Scotch-Irish descent, and inherited his inventive faculties from his father. He worked up the idea of his reaper and harvester by practical experiment, and has achieved for himself as the result renown, honor and profit in every part of the world. He was able to get the benefit of his own invention, an opportunity which comparatively few inventors have. His wealth is very great. Mr. McCormick was a member of the Presbyterian denomination. He founded the Northwestern Theological Seminary and endowed it with $200,000. He has also endowed Professorships in the Washington and Union Seminaries of Virginia, and has given away large sums in unostentatious charities. Mr. McCormick was an esteemed citizen of Chicago.

A Narrow Escape.

Bark Sokoto, Capt. Crocker, from Singapore Dec. 24, reached Boston Sunday night last. When twenty-two days out, a seaman named C. Anderson was sent aloft to secure the topgallant-sail, and while passing a rope around the yard, he lost his balance, missed his hold and fell overboard. The bark was running along at a very fair speed, and passed him by a long distance before she could be brought up to the wind. But a life buoy was thrown to him as quickly as possible, which kept up his courage. Finding that his clothing was interfering with his buoyancy, he stripped off most of it and managed to keep afloat and in good condition for nearly two hours, until the boat reached him.

Early Rising.

Every day some myth is demolished. "Getting up with the lark" can no longer be said to signify early rising. Elliott Cones, the Wellington ornithologist, has been studying the habits of the high-soaring warbler, and pronounces him an unmitigated laggard. Mr. Lark remains in his little bed for hours after other species of the feathered creation have started out with their dinner-pails.
