Wheat Futures Trading Resumes

By ARCH MACKENZIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer
LIVERPOOL, Eng., (CP)—Wheat futures trading resumed here Tuesday after a 14-year lapse, giving private traders protection while supplying the biggest wheat importer in the world.

Futures trading, which allows traders and millers to guard themselves against fluctuations in world prices, produced a handful of deals in Canadian, Argentine, United States and Australian wheat for delivery next May and July.

The main significance lay in the resumption—in a temporary building-up of the market which served in pre-war days as the main indicator of world wheat prices. The limited trading Tuesday had been expected—a reflection of the caution imposed by large wheat supplies in Canada and elsewhere as well as Britain's own stocks.

The first transaction involved wheat priced at 23s 6d ($1.97) a bushel, the non-IWA price per bushel quoted at Winnipeg Monday for wheat in store at the Lakehead, Vancouver and Montreal was $1.87 3/4.

Lower Prices

The prices were lower than Canada's International Wheat Agreement maximum of $2.05 per bushel for No. 1 northern and higher than the IWA minimum of $1.55 a bushel. The non-IWA price per bushel quoted at Winnipeg Monday for wheat in store at the Lakehead, Vancouver and Montreal was $1.87 3/4.

Britain left the International Wheat Agreement this year, preferring to let her private traders supply the country at the best price they could find.

Last May she allowed private traders to resume imports and stepped out of the grain picture—except for left-over stocks—Aug. 31 when millers were freed from buying solely from the government.

Subsequently, Liverpool and London's Baltic markets made plans for resuming future trading. Liverpool will add coarse grains futures in the new year while London is scheduled to resume futures trading in maize and barley Jan. 4. Wheat futures are expected to follow.

Only July and May contracts are being handled here initially.

The markets are designed to allow traders to protect themselves—or "hedge"—against price drops.

A trader who buys a shipload of Canadian wheat, to be delivered next May, can sell a "futures" contract on the market.

If the price drops, he loses on the shipload, but can buy back his contract at a profit.

Indian Complains He's Pushed Around

GEORGINA ISLAND, Ont., (CP)—Indian Chief Lorenzo Bigcanoe says an Indian is "pushed around and denied some of the privileges he ought to protect" when he is discharged from the armed services.

Chief Bigcanoe, head of the Algonquin Indians on Georgina Island in Lake Simcoe, made the statement Friday when two members of the Algonquin Regiment arrived here after two years' service in Germany.

The chief's main target was the liquor law which prohibits Indians from drinking in bars and beverage rooms.

"In the service," the chief said, "these lads are accepted as equals. When they leave it, the government refuses to recognize them as being responsible men."
