UNIVERSALITY OF CREED—God created the world, and by practical illustration he has shown us that when forces are methodically applied, as illustrated by the movements of the heavenly bodies, His power and glory will command our reverence. If, in like manner, we conform to the laws that the Creator has given us respecting our physical and intellectual integrals, our triumph over evil will be as fixed and certain as the magnetic polar influence Felix Boothia exercises over the compass needle. If we conform to the teachings of Oddfellowship, our pathway to heaven will be as certain as the unchangeable laws of sacred phenomena.

As Oddfellows we are taught and required to believe in God, the first cause, the Supreme Being; and all creeds, other than Paganistic, seem to agree that there is a Father, Son and Holy Ghost. We have seen the M. Hammedan, whose faith is firm in God, as devout in the exercise of prayer as ever was evidenced by the followers of the Cross. We have seen the Jews of both hemispheres steadfast in their faith in the same God that Christians as well as M. Hammedans worship; and even the poor Indian of nomadic life worships the Great Spirit that created all of earth, and who moves the starry world.

Oddfellowship is open to the followers of all creeds, but no man can be a member unless he declares his faith and unqualified belief in God, the Supreme Being, Ruler of the Universe, but the Order has nothing to do with sects, as such; yet it does expect its members, who believe in certain particular faiths, to adhere to those accepted doctrines with integrity, and not play the hateful part of a hypocrite. The Order neither advocates nor demands any system of religion, but, on the contrary, it aids, by instruction to all its members, in comprehending the mystery of God, and all the principles that are calculated to make man philanthropic, and to live in humble obedience to the laws of God. As such a teacher of moral philosophy, every religious sect should encourage Oddfellowship.

The followers of some creeds object to the Order as a secret society, because its system requires secrecy. What are those secrets? They are signs, words or tokens by which one Oddfellow can recognize another. There cannot be any sin in such simple and innocent proceedings. All religious denominations have their secret meetings. Armies have their countersigns and words of recognition. The business man corresponds in cipher, and the telegraphist is required by statute law to keep inviolate the secrets of the despatches that he transmits. There are no reasons justifying religious people in objecting to the order because its proceedings are secret particularly as there are no doctrinal principals involved in its teachings; but, on the contrary, the rules enjoin every man to exercise his own judgment with respect to religious theories.

There are no laws of the order requiring a member to adhere to any particular system of religion other than faith in one God, the Creator of the Universe; but if a member believes that the prophecy of Isaiah has been fulfilled, that "Unto us a child is born," etc., and if he believes in the birth at the stable of Bethlehem, and that the wise men of the East were guided by the star that appeared to them in the heavens, then, in that case, the Order says to such a member, keep thy faith and live a life of honor to yourself, a credit to your society, and an example to the world in general. Attend divine worship according to your faith.

work and especially in the laws of Moses. A man may pursue his own form and manner of prayer in the lodge except that we do not permit sectionalism in the ceremonial prayers. Many years ago some of the Protestant churches of America opposed the union of their members with this society because it was a secret institution, and therefore wrong. Clergymen were admitted free as their influence was considered valuable, their example as good companions a help, and their presence in the lodge calculated to produce becoming decorum, and as to themselves they had an opportunity of proving the benefits of the order and that Oddfellowship was based on principles they could not deny, and if they opposed the institution they could only do so by sacrificing the blessings desired for their own souls. Many of the most prominent and able clergymen of our day are the most enthusiastic in the dissemination of our principles.—Tal. P. Shaffner, Gr. Rep., Kentucky.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.
Bad Roads.

SIR,—As the serious impediment to travel on our winter roads, by the apathy of overseers, is so freely conceded by the general public and seldom more painfully apparent than at present, I, impelled, by a sense of duty rather than a spirit of fault-finding, would, with your leave, Sir, address a few words to the Hon. Donald Ferguson. The sudden and lamented death of the new and late Commissioner of Public Works, Hon. Hugh L. McDonald, whose efficiency and courtesy were proverbial, urges me to adopt this course, with full confidence that Mr. Ferguson will attend to it without delay. At the Five Mile House, St. Peter's Road, (or more truly speaking, Marshfield) the track is not broken or bushed on the main road (as a level-headed overseer in that vicinity used to do it) and was, with the snow fall of last Sabbath and previous days, (I have no hesitation in saying) an outrage on the travelling public and taxpayers. As the electors are anxious to get the late news about the tunnel, Mr. Ferguson will, no doubt, see the propriety of attending to this vital matter, and in the meantime the survey at the Capes can be proceeded with without any unnecessary delay. Should any of your readers be inclined to think my statements an exaggeration, I can refer them to a most deservedly popular and genial clergyman from Charlottetown, the Rev. Mr. Gordon, who was travelling with me. I can truthfully add that he would have retraced his steps to the town, save and except that he was nearer the Church than the city, and under any circumstances strongly opposed to disappoint his congregation.

J. L. ROBERTSON.
Ch'town, Feb. 6, 1891.

Senator from the State of Ontario.
(The Empire.)
At last Sir Richard Cartwright has made the meaning of his trade policy so unmistakably clear that he is greeted with acclaim by a United States audience as the future "Senator from the State of Ontario;" at least he has won the frank recognition of a foreign people that he is working in their interest; at last, we hope, he has brought home to many of his party the deadly peril in which the country stands from the Opposition platform of Unrestricted Reciprocity; at last it is plain to all loyal sons of Canada that their imperative duty is to put a stop, now and forever, to a policy which men of ordinary sense and foresight perceive to be nothing short of a dallying with treason and an out and out barter of the country.

So irresistibly did the arguments of Sir Richard Cartwright in favor of so-called Unrestricted Reciprocity, at the Boston banquet on Friday night, appeal to the understanding of his hearers, that one of the approving listeners, Mr. Bullock, President of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, rose and said: "The ready road to Reciprocity with our neighbors is to accept Sir Richard Cartwright as a senator from the State of Ontario," thus putting into plain Saxon the real aim and literal meaning of the Opposition policy, which proposes in one form or another to vindicate the "unoneness of this continent" by annexing the Dominion to the States, so that the present leaders of the Opposition may take up their permanent abode at Washington, instead of being at the expense of temporary hotel bills, as they are now.

This, then, is the battle cry: "Unrestricted Reciprocity, with Sir Richard Cartwright as the future senator from the State of Ontario," and we very much mistake public sentiment in this country if the challenge is not accepted and fought out, if a shock of surprise and indignation is not everywhere felt at the Boston episode, and if Sir Richard Cartwright is not given plainly to understand by loyal Liberals—members of a party founded long ago and led by loyal men—that his bitter personal spleen, his ferocious hanger-for-office knowing no restraints, his insatiable egotism, deserve a severe re-buke, and that the time has come for true Canadians to stand shoulder to shoulder to defeat one of the most unscrupulous and unpatriotic movements that besotted partyism has ever engendered. Let the loyal Liberals show their power and their patriotism at this juncture, let them crush and defeat this unworthy policy and vindicate themselves forever from the charge of favoring the movement to make this misguided man the "future Senator from the State of Ontario."

F. ST. CLAIR McDONALD, Dentist, will be in Souris on February 4th, where he will remain for a few days. People wishing artificial teeth will please call as soon as possible.

Farmers' Meeting.
Pursuant to notice, a largely-attended meeting of farmers and others interested in the public welfare, was held in the Hall at Vernon River Bridge on Wednesday, the 4th inst.
Mr. George Forbes, M. P. P., being called to the chair, explained that the object of the meeting was to organize a Farmers' Institute. A number of those present spoke in favor of such an institution, showing the necessity of union among farmers and the benefits arising therefrom. A constitution drawn up by a previously-appointed committee, was considered clause by clause and adopted.
The following officers were then elected by ballot:

President—David P. Irving.
Vice-President—Edward Frasier.
Sec.-Treas.—Thomas Furness.
Committee—Lemuel Hayden, John R. McDonald, Hayden Vanlisterne, Duncan Matheson, William Jenkins.

The object of this Institute is to discuss the best means of increasing the fertility of the soil, the improvement of stock, and the welfare of the community in general.
The next meeting will be held on Wednesday, the 18th inst., when a good attendance is expected.
