ROGERS' BUILDING, UPPER QUEEN STREET

Charlottetown, Sept. 24, 1890.

The Two Workers.

Two workers in one field,
Telling on from day to day,
Both had the same hard labor,
Both had the same small pay,
With the same blue sky above,
And the same green earth below,
One soul was full of love,
The other full of woe.

One leaped up with the light,
With the soaring of the lark;
One felt his woe each night,
For his soul was ever dark.

One heart was ever gay,
One toiled with many a groan,
One whistled all the day.

One had a flower-clad cot
Beside a merry mill;
Wife and children near the spot,
Made it sweeter, fairer still.

One a wretched hovel had,
Full of discord, dirt and din;
No wonder he seemed mad,
Wife and children starved within.

Still they worked in the same field
Toiling on from day to day,
Both had the same hard labor,
Both had the same small pay.

But they worked not with one will—
The reason let me tell:
Lo! one drank at the still,
And the other at the well.

LODGE ATTENDANCE.—“We have but a small attendance this evening; brothers very well late.” How often one hears the above in an apologetic tone when visiting a lodge away from home. What is the reason for it? Surely not for any lack of intrinsic worth in Oddfellowship? Ask those who habitually stay away from lodge meetings, and they will immediately tell you that Oddfellowship is one of the best Orders that they know of. Again, it cannot be from any lack of attractiveness in the ritual, for it may well be doubted if the Order has ever had one before which so few of our nature. The lessons are most sublime and beautiful, enlisting the finest sympathies of everyone to whom they are addressed and who may be fortunate enough to appreciate them. Not because our lodge-rooms present a cheerless aspect. On the contrary, no more comfortable and sumptuous places for a gathering of men united for a common purpose can be found anywhere. Our lodge-rooms—many of them—are fitted up in the most costly and elegant manner. It certainly is not for want of any of these things that the attendance is small. Just let some question or measure be brought forward affecting the finances, or some sweeping change in the by-laws, or other matters of general interest be started, and forthwith you will see the members coming from all quarters; from the counting room, workshop, factory and wherever they may be employed, proving that their interest in the welfare of our Order has not abated in the least.

A certain proportion of the brothers in every lodge will be found as constant in their attendance on lodge meetings as the sun is to rise and set. These brothers constitute the mainstay of the lodge. They are as true as steel and they gravitate as naturally to the lodge-room as the needle points to the north. But it is nevertheless a source of discouragement that others who have as much interest at stake in a well-governed lodge as any others, should absent themselves so often. It seems to me that if the stay-aways only knew how it cheered the hearts of those who are so constant in their attendance at lodge meetings, they would indulge in the luxury of astonishing them by presenting themselves at the lodge-room door and receiving the hearty congratulations of their brother, that they have got thawed out at last and are really wide-awake. The long winter evenings are just here. Brothers, see if you cannot, one and all, spare from business one evening each week to devote to the good of the Order. You will not feel any the worse or poorer for it. And, moreover, you need not have any reasonable fear of a curtain lecture when you return home.

We copy the following truthful words from our vald exchange, the Baltimore Telegram: “There is nothing so revolting, we might say heart-breaking, to an honest, high-minded, truthful and liberal man as the conviction forced upon him that the recipient of his favours, often bestowed at considerable sacrifice of time and money, has proved utterly unworthy; not only failing to make the slightest acknowledgment for kindness rendered, but using every means possible to the detriment of the benefactor. Such cases are not rare; unfortunately they are too common, as even our limited experience has determined, and it is much to be regretted that some who call themselves Oddfellows are to be found in the ranks of the ungrateful. They are oblivious of the teachings of the order, entirely wrapped up in their own self-esteem and their unholy greed for gain and determination to acquire fame, or fortune, at all hazards, leads them to stifle all the tender promptings of their hearts if, indeed, they are ever troubled with emotions of that kind.”

A new lodge of the I. O. O. F. is to be instituted at St. Stephen, N. B., shortly.

If you want to get hold of some of the good old fashioned tea, go to Beer & Goff's and get a pound of their 32 cent, and take it home and give it a fair trial and you will be more than satisfied.

The Paris Figaro makes an appeal to the churches to keep their doors open all night, and to take other steps necessary to transform them into night shelters for the homeless poor of Paris.

The London Court of Queen's Bench has decided that Justin McCarthy and Lord Hill, M. P.'s, are liable to £340 damages on account of the furniture which had been supplied to the collapsed Irish exhibition in London.

In Italy snow has fallen eighteen inches, causing many accidents. The railway line from Rome to Naples has been blocked. People are suffering terribly and many deaths from exposure have already been reported.

The amount cleared at the Montreal clearing house in 1890 was $473,980,000, against $454,528,000 in 1889. Of the 61 cities and towns in Canada and the United States where there are clearing houses, Montreal stands twelfth.

Dr. Sheldon Jackson says that almost a hundred vessels have met a watery grave there within twenty years. In one storm, and at one place, thirty-three ships were ground between ice-fields, and 1,200 sailors cast, wrecked, on a barren shore.

Smallpox is becoming a raging epidemic throughout central and southern parts of Texas. There are five hundred cases in Spofford city. The facts have been withheld from the press on account of the supposed injury to the commercial interests of the city.

Mr. Alex. Loucks, while cutting ice on Louck's dam, Pa., discovered a spider frozen in a solid block of ice. He ingeniously cut into the ice, when the spider stepped out and hopped about. The ice was some seven inches thick and was frozen about two weeks ago.

The case of a young man surviving a broken neck, and with every prospect of recovery, is attracting the attention of medical men at the Roosevelt Hospital, New York. It is pronounced a most remarkable instance, and is the only one of the kind where a cure seems to be assured, that is recorded in the annals of the institution.

The miners of the United States have completed plans for the inauguration of a demand on the 1st of May for the eight-hour working day. The miners' organization throughout the country numbers 150,000 men. They will be backed by the American Federation of Labor, and will have $1,000,000, it is said, to carry on the movement.

Mrs. Salter, the mayor of a Western American city, has during the past year administered all the public affairs of the municipality she governs, attended all social functions incumbent upon her office, performed her own housework, washing, ironing and cooking for a family of five, and increased her family from five to six, all in one year.

The first vessel for the Manchester ship canal has been launched at Belfast. It is of steel, is 180 feet long, but only draws 14 feet of water. Manchester is looking forward with interest to the establishment of a direct service between that city and Belfast, with Liverpool as a mere port of call. So much can enterprise and capital do for an inland city.

George Estes and Fannie Hogan were married at a country church at Marion County, Ala., on Friday night last, in the presence of a few relatives and friends. Just as the ceremony was concluded a shot was fired through a window, and the bride fell dead with a load of buckshot in her body. A discarded lover, who once told Miss Hogan she should never marry anyone else, is suspected of the murder.

Charles and Augusta Thieck, an aged German couple, whose last abiding place was Jersey City, travelled the world over in search of a cure for rheumatism, with which the wife and finally the husband suffered severely. They found no relief in Europe, Australia or America. In mutual despair they prepared two cups of poison, swallowed their respective draughts, and last Monday their dead bodies were found in their home, on Third Street, Jersey City.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

A Stranger Stands Up For Charlottetown.

SIR,—George Eliot writes: “Gossip is a sort of smoke that comes from the dirty tobacco pipes of those who diffuse it. It proves nothing but the bad taste of the smoker.”

So a book which is written to circulate slander, shows only the bad taste of the writer. In every town there are those who are more ready to believe evil than good—and tattling tongues old enough to have learned discretion and charity, who should know better than to “throw stones.” That this beautiful city has much of the spirit of slander, or that a gossiping type of humanity infests the “market” is not what I am willing to believe. Of course, in some towns there are those whose tongues, like the central office of a telephone line, talk in all directions, on all subjects, to all people. New comers are picked to pieces, and in turn the new-comer is served with “dainty morsels” from fifty years ago up to date.

But this is not done in Charlottetown. For have I not been here long enough to know? Even an unkind whisper I had not heard until that dreadful book came out. For my part, I have found everyone amiable and agreeable. How kind my opposite neighbor is, who tells me that my “servant girl” has a “good character” and all sorts of other nice things. I wonder if every block in the city has a neighbor like mine on the opposite side? If so, how many “little heavens there must be here below.” And when I was sick all of my friends were “ministering angels,” but the one I appreciated most, perhaps, was the cook, whose mistress sent her in the back way daily with richest soups and choicest delicacies, and when my doctor from “around the corner” and the minister from “the other corner” were both just what they should be. Kind to the stranger, and no meddling person from across the street, said why didn't you get a home-opath? or why hadn't you High Church? Truly I can say that in my afflictions I found out my friend, and only a spiteful person will say that landlords never repair the houses they rent and that the ladies are awfully envious and jealous, for my house has lately been most elaborately shingled and my lady friends “don't care a cent” if one has her bangs curled prettier or a shoe a size larger (?) nonsense! I have found them above a “little thing” like that, and I just love them all like sisters and hope to spend the remainder of my
