

Anglican Laymen Deanery Meets

KENSINGTON — A meeting of the Deanery Laymen's Association of the Anglican Church was held in St. Mark's hall Kensington recently for the election of officers.

Eric Balcom, Wolfville, president of the diocesan association was the guest speaker. Mr. Balcom has just returned from attending the executive council of the Anglican Church.

He addressed the association on the future of the church as related to laymen and the role they must play in an active and strong church. He stressed the point that the church is composed of 29.96 per cent laymen and 64 per cent ministers, therefore the laymen play an ever increasing part in church affairs.

Mr. Balcom also spoke in St. Peter's Cathedral Sunday morning and at Burlington on Sunday night.

The election of officers took place after the address and the new officers are as follows: past president, A.H. Davar; president, John Gillman, Kennington; secretary, Earl Carrier, Kennington; vice-president for Queens County, Verrier G. O'Leary, North Milton; directors, W.B. Armstrong and John L. Anderson, both of Charlottetown.
