

Ye Two Wishes.

An angel went awaking one day, as I've heard said. And, coming to a faggot maker, begged a crust of bread.

"I wonder," says the faggot maker, after he had gone, "I wonder if there's any truth in that same little song."

So turning this thing over in his mind, he cast around, "Till he saw the empty bottle where it lay upon the ground."

"I wish," said he, just as a test, "if what he said is so, into that empty bottle, now, that I may straight-way go."

No sooner said than done: for whisk! into the flask he fell, where he found himself as tightly packed as a chicken in the shell.

In vain he kicked and twisted, and in vain he howled with pain: For in spite of all his efforts, he could not get out again.

So, seeing how the matter stood, he had to wish once more, When out he slipped, as easily as he'd gone in before.

If we had had two wishes, granted by an angel thus, We would not throw away the good so kindly given us.

For first we'd ask for wisdom, which, when we had in store, I'm very doubtful if we'd care to ask for any more.

—From Howard Pyle's Pepper and Salt.

He Saw His Father.

"Father, he began, after taking the old man out back of the barn, "your years are many."

"Yes my son."

"You have toiled early and late, and by the sweat of your brow you have amassed this big farm."

"That's so, William."

"It has pained me more than I can tell to see you, at your age, troubling yourself with the cares of life. Father, your declining days should be spent in the old arm chair in the chimney corner."

"Yes William, they should."

"Now, father, seeing you are old and feeble and helpless, give me a deed of the farm and you and mother live out your few remaining days with me and Sally."

"William, said the old man, as he pushed back his sleeves, "I think I see the drift of them remarks. When I'm ready to start for the poorhouse I'll play fool and hand over the deed! William!"

"Yes, sir."

"In order to dispel any delusion on your part that I am old and feeble and helpless, I am going to knock down half an acre of cornstalks with your heels!"

"And when the convention finally adjourned, William crawled to the nearest haystack and cautiously whispered to himself:

"And Sally was to broach the same thing to me at the same time! I wonder if she's mortally injured or only crippled for life!"

Sleeping Face Downward.

Hunters, scouts, children and wild men sleep with the spine upward. So do animals all but civilized man. If a dog, a cow, a cat or a horse, were forced to lie on its back it would die.

Among the Arabian jugglers and show people that have been brought to this country, it has been noticed that they always turn over upon their breasts when they go to sleep and lie that way till they wake. It seems to be the natural way. It protects the vital organs in case of a shot from an enemy.

The spine and the great amount of nerve tissue that starts from it are the most sensitive parts of the body. Lying with the great weight of the stomach, heart, intestines and other organs pressed upon these nerves it seems sure to be in time work injury. Even the half weight as when a person lies upon his side, must have its bad effects, it is said. The spine and nerves are also abnormally heated by the common way of resting. Keep the spine and spinal nerves cool, say the advocates of the cow's and the wild man's way of sleeping. There are such advocates, among them able physicians. They affirm that turning upon their breast to sleep will relieve backache. Also, it will leave the nerve stimulant free to flow vigorously from its centers and in that will remedy indigestion and take away the bad taste in the mouth.

Many will be surprised to find how difficult it is to lie with the face downwards, after years of reposing in the other attitude. One cannot do so comfortably ten, minutes at first. But practice will overcome the difficulty. The natural method, so called, of sleeping, has many and able advocates recently.

NOTES.

Not the promissory, but facts about WELCOME SOAP, an article that does not contain one particle of the adulterations used to reduce the cost of "Pure Goods," but does possess the value of legitimate Washing Qualities, the demand for which proves the advantage gained by the use of the genuine over Soaps of doubtful character. None should be deceived even by Red and Yellow Wrappers, or any of the imitations of the WILCOXES, as a pair of clasped hands is stamped on every bar. Made by CHAS. DAVIS & Co.
