Club Elects New Executive; Now Membership-Controlled

A move to "make the government recognize the Sportsman's Club as a real and genuine club" was made Tuesday evening as the executive resigned and turned the club over to the non-corporate membership.

Following the resignation a new executive was elected from the 600 registered members of the club. Chosen were: J. A. C. Sark, president; Clive Cadmore, vice-president; Ron McKeenan, secretary; treasurer; and Roger Tanton and Tom Erkelens, directors.

The club's equipment and supplies will be sold to the membership, which is called the "Physical Culture and Recreation Centre."

A club spokesman said after the meeting that the club will be operated as a non-profit social club with 40 per cent of any profits from the club operation going to the club operation. David Currie rendered a vocal solo and Paula Rogers gave the valedictory address.

The yearly report as given by J. A. C. principal, Norman MacDonald.

New P.E.I. Flag May Not Be Available

He said that the company from which the department had ordered the flags was experiencing some delay in setting up production machinery.

"Once the machine is in operation the flags can be stamped out by the thousand," he said.
