

PLEASANT TO TAKE
DROPPED ON SUGAR.

JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT
CURES COLIC, COUGH, CRAMPS.

All who use it are amazed at its wonderful power and are full of its efficacy ever after.

INTERNAL USE—External Use. Our Book "Treatment for Diseases" Mailed Free. Originated in 1855 by an old Family Physician. Doctor's Signature and Directions on every bottle. Do not be afraid to trust what time has endorsed.

Every Mother should have it for the many common ailments which will occur in every family as long as children live. Do not forget the very important and useful fact that Johnson's Anodyne Liniment cures every form of inflammation, internal or external. It is the only medicine that the preparations of medical science have produced that cures the disease caused by inflammation, cures the inflammation and you conquer the disease.

Could a remedy have existed for over eighty years except for the fact that it does possess extraordinary merit for the many families who have used it? There is not a medicine in use today which has the confidence of the public to so great an extent as this wonderful Anodyne Liniment. It has won its own intrinsic merit, while generation after generation has proved the present generations of medical science that the real danger of the disease is caused by inflammation, cures the inflammation and you conquer the disease.

A CASE OF IDENTITY.
BY A CONAN DOYLE.

"And what else?" I asked, keenly interested, as I always was, by my friend's incisive reasoning.

"I noted, in passing, that she had written a note before leaving home, but after being fully dressed. You observe that her right glove was torn at the forefinger but you did not, apparently, see that both glove and finger were stained with violet ink. She had written in a hurry, and dipped her pen too deep. It must have been this morning, or the mark would not be so fresh. All this is amusing, though rather elementary, but I must go back to business, Watson. Would you mind reading me the advertised description of Mr. Hosmer Angel?"

I held the little printed slip to the light. "Missing," it said, "on the morning of the fourteenth, a gentleman named Hosmer Angel. About five feet seven inches in height; strongly built, narrow complexion, black hair a little bald in the center, bushy, black side whiskers and mustache; tinted glasses; slight infirmity of speech. Was dressed, when last seen, in black frock coat faced with silk, black waistcoat, gold Albert chain, and gray Harris tweed trousers, with brown galsters over elastic-sided shoes. He has been employed as an office in Leadenhall street, Anybody bringing," etc., etc.

"That will do," said Holmes. "As to the letters," he continued, glancing over "they are equally so. They are absolutely no clever in them to Mr. Angel, save that he quotes Balzac once. There is one remarkable point, however, which will not doubt strike you."

"They are typewritten," I remarked.

"Not only that, but the signature is typewritten. Look at the neat little 'Hosmer Angel' at the bottom. There is a date, you see, but no superscription except Leadenhall street, which is rather vague. The point about the signature is very suggestive—in fact, we may call it conclusive."

"Of what?"

"My dear fellow, it is possible you do not see how strongly it bears upon the case."

"I can not say that I do, unless it were that he wished to be able to deny his signature if an action for breach of promise were instituted."

"No, that was not the point. However, I shall write two letters which should settle the matter. One is to a firm in the city, the other is to the young lady's step-father, Mr. Windbank, asking him whether he could meet us here at a quarter to-morrow evening. It is just as well that we should do business with the male relatives. And now, doctor, we can do nothing until to-morrow. I will write two letters, so we may put our little problem upon the shelf for the interim."

I had had so many reasons to believe in my friend's subtle powers of reasoning, and extraordinary energy in action, that I felt that he must have some solid grounds for the assured and easy demeanor with which he treated the singular mystery which he had been called upon to fathom. Once only had I known him to fail, in the case of the King of Bohemia and the Irene Adler photograph, but when I looked back to the weird business of the "Sign of Four," and the extraordinary circumstances connected with the "Study in Scarlet" I felt that he would be a strange tangible indeed which he could not solve.

I left him then, still puffing at his black pipe, with the conviction that when I came again on the next evening I would find he had held in his hand all the clues which would lead up to the identity of the disappearing bridegroom of Miss Mary Sutherland.

A professional case of great gravity was engaging my own attention at the time, and the whole of next day I was busy with the details of the case. I was not until close upon six o'clock that I found myself free, and was able to spring into a hansom and drive to Baker street, half an hour before I reached the office. I found the denouement of the little mystery. I found Sherlock Holmes alone, however, half asleep, with his long thin form curled up in the recesses of his armchair. He had a few bottles and test-tubes, with the pungent, cleanly smell of hydrochloric acid, told me that he had spent the day in the chemical work which he owed to him.

"Well, how you solved it?" I asked as I entered.

"Yes, it was the sulphate of barium."

"No, no; the mystery?" I cried.

"Oh, that! I thought of the salt that I have been working upon. There was never any mystery in the matter, though, as I said yesterday, some of the details are of interest. The only drawback is that there is no law, I fear, that can touch the scoundrel."

"The question was hardly of my mouth, and Holmes had not yet opened his lips to reply, when we heard a heavy footfall in the passage, and a tap at the door.

"This is the girl's step-father, Mr. James Windbank," said Holmes. He has written to me to say that he would be here at six o'clock."

The man who entered was a sturdy, middle-aged fellow, some thirty years of age, clean shaven, and with a shrewd, intelligent, and somewhat cunning expression, with a bland, insinuating manner, and a pair of wonderfully sharp and penetrating gray eyes. He shot a questioning glance at each of us, placed his shiny top hat upon the sideboard, and with a slight bow, sidled down into the nearest chair.

"Good evening, Mr. James Windbank," said Holmes. "I think that this typewritten letter is from you, in which you made an appointment with me for six o'clock?"

"Yes, sir, I am afraid that I am a little late, but I am not quite my own master, you know. I am sorry Miss Sutherland has troubled you about this little matter, for I think it is far better not to wash linen of the sort in public. It was quite against my wishes that she came, but she is a very excitable, impulsive girl, as you may have noticed, and she is not easily controlled when she has made up her mind on a point. Of course, I did not mind you so much, as you are not connected with the official police, but it is not pleasant to have a family misfortune like this nosed around. Besides, it is a useless expense, for how could you possibly find this Hosmer Angel?"

"On the contrary," said Holmes, quietly, "I have every reason to believe that I will succeed in discovering Mr. Hosmer Angel."

"Mr. Windbank gave a violent start, and dropped his gloves. 'I am delighted to hear it,' he said.

"It is a curious thing," remarked Holmes, "that typewritten letters are ready quite as much individuality as a man's handwriting. Unless they are quite new, no two of them ever exactly alike. Some letters get into the hands of others, and some wear only on one side. Now, you remark in this note of yours, Mr. Wind-bank, that in every case there is some little stirring over the e, and a slight defect in the tail of the t. There are fourteen other characteristics, but those are the more obvious."

"We do our own correspondence with this machine at the office, and no doubt it is a little worn," our visitor answered, glancing keenly at Holmes with his bright little eyes.

"And now I will show you what is really a very interesting study, Mr. Windbank," Holmes continued. "I think of writing another little monograph on some of these data on the typewriter and its relation to crime. It is a subject to which I have devoted some little attention. I have here four letters which purport to come from the missing man. They are all typewritten. In each case, not only are the e's stirred and the t's tallest, but you will observe, if you care to use my magnifying lens, that the fourteen other characteristics to which I have alluded are there as well."

Mr. Windbank sprung out of his chair, and picked up his hat. "I can not believe that you are deceiving me," he said. "If you can talk the man, catch him, and let me know when you have done it."

"Certainly," said Holmes, stepping over and turning the key in the door. "Let you know, then, that I have caught him!"

"What? where?" shouted Mr. Windbank, turning white to his lips and glancing about him like a rat in a trap.

"Oh, it won't do—really it won't," said Holmes, suavely. "There is no possibility of catching him, for he is quite too transparent, and it is a very bad compliment when you say that it is impossible for me to solve so simple a question. That's right! Sit down, and let us talk over."

Our visitor collapsed into a chair, with a ghastly face, and a glitter of moisture on his brow. "It—it's not reasonable," he stammered.

"I am very much afraid that it is not; but between ourselves, Windbank, it was as cruel, and selfish, and heartless a trick in a petty way as ever came before me. Now, let me just run over the course of events, and you will contradict me if I go wrong."

London People Have Become Used to the Great Specific Remedy

LONDON, July 6.—The despatch from Detroit with reference to the cure from Bright's disease and blood poison of Mr. Langley of this city, by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, has recalled the wonderful facts of the case to the citizens, among whom Mr. Langley is well known. It has reminded them that Mrs. Langley, among others, also made a cures, and that the use of the pills, however, has become so universal here, and there has been so many instances in which they have been used with beneficial results that a similar case would hardly excite as much interest now as it did then when the medicine was less known.

New York Sun: "Never again shall we consent to give our English-speaking neighbors the immense boon of free access to the American market, unless they first agree to share the responsibilities of American citizenship. But while we speak frankly and firmly on this point, we heartily acclaim the advent of the Liberal to power at Ottawa. They laugh at the silly talk about Imperialism, and they are friendly to our institutions and our people; they fully appreciate its value to Canadians of free trade with the United States; and when they are convinced by experience that the estimable privilege of reciprocity is for their benefit, we will see to it that the course is taken."

"The Railroad Men"

Railroad employes, baggage handlers, teamsters and other men who are engaged in such jobs, are often troubled with a pain across the middle of the back. This indicates the "Railroad Injury," an insidious precursor of serious illness. On the slightest symptoms of backache take one Edwards' Kidney Liver Pills—two pills—and the pain is instantly relieved. For all kidney troubles they have no equal. 25c. per box.

A Good Deal in a Few Words.

"I paid a Toronto specialist on catarrh a large sum of money, but I got no benefit. I tried the best of them, almost in despair, and assuredly without any faith, I tried Chase's Catarrh Cure. It is all that is recommended, which is saying a good deal in a few words." Joel Rogers, clerk, Division Court, Beeton. Improved blower in each 25c. box.

"Does your wife laugh when you tell her a funny story?" "Oh, yes; I always tell her beforehand that it is funny.—Indianapolis Journal.

Money No Object.

The amount of money suffers from catarrh will spend in attempting to cure that foul and disagreeable disease is almost incredible. J. W. Jennings, of Gifford, Ont., says: "I spent between $200 and $300 consulting doctors; I tried all the 'treatments' without benefit. One box of Chase's Catarrh Cure did me more good than all the remedies. A 25c. box cured me. Don't waste money. Chase's Cure, with improved blower, 25c. per box.

Wore Greased Gloves Seven Years

John Siron, mason, Aultsville, Ont., had salt rheum so severe that for seven years he wore greased gloves. He writes: "I wore a quarter of a box of Chase's Ointment. It cured me. No trace of salt rheum now." Chase's Ointment cures every irritant disease of the skin, allays itching instantly, and is a sterling remedy for piles. Avoid imitations. 60c. per box.

Disinfective Agents.

The feminine direct descendants of the famous Aztec are tiny creatures, exquisitely formed and refined in feature. They carry the heads with the upbearing grace of the full-blooded Indian; their skins are not red, but a clear, smooth copper color, that shines like gold in the sun; their hair is coarse and black as ebony, and they are decorated with bright feathers and gay ornaments. These women make the most wonderful pottery that comes to us from Mexico, for they have kept the old Aztec forms and decorations in their art, and they also weave wonderful baskets and do exquisite embroideries.

Strongest ropes.

Given an equal number of strands to make up the rope, and each of the same circumference, it may be readily shown that wire, twisted into rope form, will make a rope so strong as to admit of no comparison even with the best white hemp rope. Twisted hempen cords will sustain 8,746 pounds, if the rope be one inch thick; but one-eighth of an inch in diameter of iron will sustain more than one inch in circumference of hemp rope. No rope, whatever its material, could bear comparison with an inch rope made of piano steel wire, such a rope being able to bear not less than 350,000 pounds, or nearly 120 tons, before it could be torn by a dead weight.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Science is "knowing how." The only secret about Scott's Emulsion is years of science. When made in large quantities and by improving methods, an emulsion must be more perfect than when made in the old-time way with mortar and pestle a few ounces at a time. This is why Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil never separates, keeps sweet for years, and why every spoonful is equal to every other spoonful. An even product throughout.

In other emulsions you are liable to get an uneven benefit—either an over or under dose. Get Scott's Genuine in a salmon-colored wrapper.
