Edible Candles For Army Forces

(By Gerald Waring)

OTTAWA — If the army decides to issue peppermint candles to the troops, or perhaps candles in a variety of flavors, the soldiers who eat them will have to thank a handful of men who just completed exercise "Shoo Fly II."

This is no joke. Army candles are dual purpose — like Short-horns. Primarily they are burned to furnish light. But just in case the soldiers are off in the bush with no other food, the candles are also edible.

Exercise "Shoo Fly II" was named, naturally enough, after Exercise "Shoo Fly I," which was held last year. The name is undoubtedly somebody's attempt at humor, for in summer the areas where the exercise was held, east of Port Churchill, abounds with countless billions of black flies, midges, deer flies and mosquitoes.

About 60 hard-bitten regulars (they counted their bites by the hundreds) spent a whole month on the edge of nowhere for three reasons:

1. They were told to go there — which in the army is all the reason you need.
2. They were detailed to learn by experience the whats and hows of operating in a tactical role under northern summer conditions. This is important, because transportation problems in the north make it quite certain that any military operations there will be on a comparatively small scale.
3. They were selected as guinea pigs to test army rations, clothing and equipment.

The tactical job given these men of Quebec's Royal 22nd Regiment was to capture or destroy a small detachment of "enemy" troops which had landed on the coast of Hudson's Bay. This they did handily, thus reading a lesson to any Kremlin plotters who might covet that part of Canada.

Testing rations, clothing and equipment was a more complex problem, and they ended the exercise with notebooks full of jottings which will be translated into definite recommendations in the next few months.

Only since World War II has the army made any serious efforts to learn how to go about defending the country's northern frontier. And every time it holds an exercise in the north, like this one, it learns things which will be useful if it ever has to fight up there.

Soldiers' experiences in Shoo Fly I, for example, helped the army develop a new, light weight nylon sleeping bag. The men put their stamp of approval on heavy gray woolen socks as the best for Arctic use in the summer. And they prodded the army into developing an edible candle which won't get too soft in the summer heat. Whether Exercise Shoo Fly II recommends the addition of flavoring remains to be seen.

But perhaps the most interesting discovery of both Shoo Flys was in connection with flies. The men learned that while flies and mosquitoes can be terribly bothersome, they won't impede military operations.

The Army, of course, supplies the men with efficient mosquito netting and insect repellent. But even without these, the soldiers found they developed a natural immunity to insect bites. They discovered that after they'd been bitten by many insects over periods of from three to seven days, they didn't mind being bitten.

In case any trapper or Indian guide chimes in here with an "I could have told thee that," then let him reflect on the fact that in the army you learn things the hard way. That seems to be one of the rules.

HEFTY PRISONER

PICKERING, Ont., Sept. 16 — (CP) — It took four police officers and two civilians to get a 220-pound woman out of a police cruiser and into the jail here Friday night. Then they found the cell door was too small for her. She bedded down in a corridor until her husband came along to bail her out on charges of drunk driving and leaving the scene of an accident.

TORONTO, Sept. 14. Toronto may get direct truck freight from Canada's east coast as well as the west coast if the application made to the Ontario Municipal Board recently by two New Brunswick truckers is granted.

Not long ago the board gave permission to 16 western firms—some of them in British Columbia—to haul general freight into and out of Ontario. Yesterday's application, by Elbert C. Day and Walter K. Koss, was for licenses to truck goods from Halifax and other Maritime points to Ontario.

Fred G. Gardiner, counsel for the applicants, said they wanted to truck potatoes and potato starch to Toronto, and to take back paper potato bags, stationery and drugs.

The application was opposed by Canadian National Railways. The railway said it has facilities for five-day freight deliveries between Toronto and the East. Mr. Gardiner argued the time was nearly two weeks.

The board reserved decision.

WORKERS SEEK TO QUELL WILD ALBERTA OIL WELL

Workmen garbed in asbestos suits, and gas masks are working against time to tame an oil well which went wild at Edmonton, Alta., and started gushing forth 5,000 barrels a day. Fearful that well, which has all the earmarks of one which caught fire four years ago at Leduc, may end up in same way, oilmen have built an artificial lake which will completely dwell the well. The drilling was down 5,000 feet and the well was nearing completion when it "lost circulation" and went wild. Mud poured in during drilling operations and dropped to the bottom of the hole and first gas, then oil, erupted skyward through the open pipe at a cost of $8,000 a day.

Czechs Protest West's Blockade Of Airlines

LONDON, Sept. 15—(AP)—Communist Czechoslovakia tonight bitterly protested to Britain, the United States and France the West's new blockade of Czech airlines.

The Prague radio heard here said the Czech Government was sending formal notes to the three Western Powers complaining of "open discrimination against the Czechoslovak republic."

The Prague radio said the Western Allies' banning of Czech airlines from flying over West Germany, and into France and Britain, was a violation of the Potsdam agreement.

The air blockade was followed today by an Italian order closing down Czechoslovakia's important Milan consulate—where the Czechs do a lot of their Western trade.

Allied officials have disclosed unofficially that the measure are part of an agreed "get-tough" policy in reprisal for the Prague "spy" trial and imprisonment of Associated Press correspondent William N. Oatis. Oatis was sentenced to 10 years in prison.
