WE AND OUR NEIGHBORS

Schools Open ... Cottages Close ... Summer Over

By Ruhamah S. Frank.

It was a lovely day in August, as we drove past the small country school-house. The fields around it were green; the blue waters a short distance away, sparkled. But there were no happy children playing in the fields, swimming in the water, basking on the beach. We caught a glimpse of young heads drooping, hot and weary over books.
This is no plea for a shorter school year. But few school systems find it necessary to open in August—and I believe the fine days in September and October could also be used for learning—much more permanent learning—in the outdoors. Why not planned outdoor activities and excursions in science, geography, history—and literature (All works of literature come alive under the blue sky!) based on the course of study, for the many splendid days in September and October?
I would like to include, in part, a "poem" of mine published in the Guardian in 1958—that sums up the idea, I believe, in a light-hearted, pleasant manner. It may perhaps, who knows, not only do something for the children, but extend the tourist season.

Vows Are Pledged At Saint Paul's Church

St. Paul's Church, Summerside, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday, August 16 at 8 a.m. when Theresa Mae, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Arsenault, became the bride of Ronald Pineau, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Pineau, Summerside. Rev. Emmanuel Richard officiated.
Mrs. Lorraine Hall was in charge of the wedding music and accompanied Miss Betty Blaquiere as she sang appropriate hymns during the nuptial mass and the signing of the register.
The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in her wedding gown of white lace and net over satin, ballerina length with matching bolero and tiny collar with pearl trim. Her shoulder length veil fell from a tiny hat with pearl trim and she carried a cascade bouquet of red roses.
Miss Cynthia Pineau, sister of the groom, as maid of honor, was gowned in yellow net over taffeta with matching headpiece and she carried a bouquet of yellow roses. Miss Barbara Gallant, as bridesmaid, was gowned in blue net over taffeta, with matching headpiece and she carried a nosegay of red roses.
Little Nancy Arsenault, sister of the bride, was winsome as

HAPPENINGS

The Princess Francesca Rospigliosi of Florida is visiting on Prince Edward Island. As a young girl the princess stayed at Dalvey House which was at that time her grandfather's summer residence. She has been staying for a few days at Dalvey House on this visit accompanied by Mrs. A.B. Cosh. The princess spent the weekend in Charlottetown, the guest of Mrs. Cosh, West Street.

Dr. William Howatt of Ann Arbor, Michigan, has been visiting his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Howatt at the Beacon, Victoria. Dr. Howatt is in post graduate studies in pediatrics at the University of Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Mr. Forbes Rhude, business editor of the Canadian Press, and Mrs. Rhude returned Saturday to their home in Toronto after a most enjoyable two weeks holiday in the province. While here they were the guests of Mr. Rhude's sister, Mrs. T. Gordon Ives, Longworth Avenue.

Mrs. Fred Osborne has organized the Senior Citizen Club at Beach Grove. All would be grateful for gifts of checker boards, games, hobby craft wool and crochet cotton, crocheted hooks and knitting needles. Scrap Books and Magazines would be much appreciated.

The ladies branch of Charlotteville Curling Club are busy planning for their fashion show which will be held October 6, 7 and 8. An executive meeting was held recently at the home of the president Miss Bessie Prowse. The convener is Mrs. Temple Hoper and the co-convener is Mrs. Gordon V. Stewart.

The following is the list of the models: Mrs. Hugh Simpson, Jr., Mrs. Myron Bell, Mrs. George Ives, Mrs. David Walker, Mrs. Walter Pickard, Mrs. William Johnston, Mrs. Ralph Manning, Mrs. C.J. Gallant, Mrs. Roy Vessey, Mrs. Alfred MacNeill, Miss Helen MacDonald, Miss Marina Buell.

Robert Agnew, son of Mr. and Mrs. W.E. Agnew, 127 Water St., and grandson of the Hon. John Agnew, speaker of the Legislative Assembly, is another Canadian with a remarkable academic standing.

Robert is a graduate of Prince of Wales College, and holds a B.Sc. and M. Sc. from Dalhousie University. From Dalhousie he proceeded to Trinity Hall, Cambridge, on an I.O.D.E. scholarship. There he continued his research in bacteriology for his Ph. D. degree.

Robert is having five weeks at home in his native Prince Edward Island before going on to Saskatchewan. He will be the lecturer in bacteriology at Regina

College and also will have a joint appointment with the Saskatchewan department of public health.

Dr. and Mrs. Rodgers, Los Angeles, California, have been summering at Bay Fortune. They leave this week after their pleasant holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Robinson, Charlottetown, and their daughter, Mrs. Aubrey Gamble, Alexandra, and granddaughter, Debbie, have just returned from an extended trip. While away they visited cousins in Toronto, their daughter Mae (Mrs. Ernest Moore) in Montreal, their son Ivan, who is camp director at Camp Wagona on Lake Wannamaker, Ontario.

This camp is run by the East York Toronto Y.M.C.A. where Ivan is Boys Work secretary. They also visited relatives and friends in Hartford, Connecticut, Brockton, Winchester, Woburn, Jamaica Plains, and Bedford, Mass.

Chosen Princess of Crapaud Exhibition was pretty Nettie MacNevin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John MacNevin of New Argyle. She is receiving hearty congratulations from her many friends.

Mr. Sheldon Bowley and Mr. Heath Bowley of Toronto are at present visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hudson Bowley, Belvedere Ave. They were called home due to the serious illness of their grandmother, Mrs. George Cobb.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Harvest Time — Apple Pie And No Bird Size Pieces

Now with us, and countryside over, the harvest-time is here. On a breath of September wind one may catch its familiar sounds over the fields and see the harvesters at work amid the sheen of its gold.
All day today our reaping continued, with every lad of the name who could carry a sheaf, lending the men happy assistance. "My muscles are a mite stiff" Mack commented this evening, flexing sturdy young arms. "Not" he added "that I was much help."
"Not much help!" his grandfather said patting his head, "why we've all had a great day today at the harvest."
The harvest came to us in a bustle of moving gear: tractor, binder, and little trucks spilling out the works in an old field of this farm—one which slopes gently up the valley and has given us many a crop and seen many a helper come and go there through the long years.
From the orchard we looked out to see these at work—their whose footprints have long since faded in with the soil. We speak of them with James, and hear then their merry laughs and chuckles echo down to us across the years.
A harvest day at Alderlea makes the cooks look to their laurels. Meats must be bounteous and on time. Now the farmers cannot linger on the homeward way to inspect or speculate on the condition or weight of this or that animal on pasture nearby. Perfect harvest-weather may be all too scarce. They must use, well what they have.
"A fair question now" one of the youngsters grinned before setting out to the field, "what are we going to have for dinner?"
"Herring!" we laughed.
He wrinkled his nose in a gesture of disgust. "There you need not put my name in that pot!" he smiled.
As it happened, a roast of beef was our main fare, served as were the vegetables, new potatoes and turnip, piping hot.
"I notice you cook over a hot fire!" Gage dimpled, hungrily awaiting the cooking.
"And now for the apple pie, Ellen—and no bird-size pieces today!" James ordered a bit later. But the lads, who fell to us as our share of the help would have instead dishes of the (Thank) July—strawberries, we had hoarded to make a tasteful dessert on just such a day of the harvest.

So the harvesters came. Sheaves "kicked" from the binder, stooks formed intriguing patterns on the stubble and the work moved happily along. And then in the afternoon that field was deserted and we lost the harvesting to other patches and pieces of grainlands out of sight of this farm.
The night is a gentle one, calm and warm—and dusky, as it awaits the fairy-like touch of the moonrise. On the lawn now, or in the moonlight, we fancy it is a lament for another of September's harvest days over and gone.
Until tomorrow — — — Diary Good-night.

Double Ring Ceremony Unites A Happy Couple

On Wednesday, August 6th, Trinity United Church, Montague, was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when the Rev. J. M. Fraser, assisted by Mr. Reginald Miller, united in marriage in a double ring ceremony, Lucy Joyce, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Wigginton of Montague, and Robert Gordon, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Hutcheson of Toronto, formerly of Charlottetown.

Following the vows the bride and groom partook of the Sacrament of Holy Communion. The church was decorated with assorted summer flowers and guest pews marked by nosegays of roses.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was charming in a floor-length gown of silk organza. The bodice was designed with a Sabrina neckline and outlined by Chantilly lace. The long sleeves came to a point over the hands. The full skirt was slightly on train. Her circular veil fell from a coronet shaped head-dress, trimmed with iridescent American Beauty roses and white carnations. Her jewelry consisted of a pearl necklace, gift of the groom.

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Miss Greta Wigginton, as maid of honour. Her ballerina length gown was fashioned of silk organza in shrimp colour, with portrait neckline, fitted bodice and full skirt. She carried a basket of white and feathered pink carnations.

Immediately preceding the ceremony Mrs. Arnold Wightman, guest soloist, sang the "Wedding Prayer", and during the signing of the register, the "Lord's Prayer".

MARY HAWORTH
Almost Lost Her Husband Is Her Idea Of Love Real

Haworth for Monday, July 1
Dear Mary Haworth: I've just finished reading some responses you had (June 26) to a teenage boy's defence of necking. The majority vote seems to be against it. Such was my attitude before marriage. I was saving myself for the husband family I hoped to have one day.

Well, I have a very wonderful husband. And two beautiful children—a son, 20 months old, and a daughter, four months old—who are the "before" and "after" of a tragic experience. Meanwhile my theories of love have been profoundly shaken.

Last year, when my husband was stationed in Germany for a year, he fell in love with a woman who seems to me to personify the typical European woman. When Tony wrote me about her, I borrowed money, took our son and flew to Germany.

As Tony got acquainted with our son, he began to change his mind about his new love; but wanted to continue the affair, to break it off gently, so as not to hurt her more than he had already. This I refused to be a party to; and made an effort to meet her, to explain. This didn't help at all. She continued to offer herself without restraint.

But I was determined to stick it out, to try to save Tony from ruinous debauchery, even if I lost him eventually. I was determined also to learn from my own mistakes. I made it a point to study the behavior of these women who "make a man feel like a man" in their company. They seem to be very self-aware, constantly watching for their own effect upon the man, and upon all other men in sight.

American women are more interested in enjoying themselves, and if they wish to impress, it is by showing good taste in their appearance and choice of companions. "We don't set out to dazzle a man with our desire to possess him physically—even though most of us, at one time or another, have felt the desire.

The European woman most popular with, most appealing to, American males over there are those who most often describe as "falling all over the man." My husband and other boys I have known ridicule that sort of thing at home. They regard it as romantic folderl—for the birds—in the U.S.A. But in Europe, they seem to base all their relations upon it. There, if a woman sees a man who appeals to her, she lets him know—in no uncertain terms—that she is available and wants to please him.

When I spoke to the marriage counsellor and the chaplain in Europe, I was told these people have an entirely different attitude towards love and sex than we do. Sex is recognized as vitally important, but nothing sacred or restricted.
I always felt that sex with anyone but the man I married for love would be sacrilege. . . . Tony, before he went overseas, often remarked how much people liked me, and how proud of me he was. Why then, should a man who is proud of his wife, and apparently in love with her, want to give it all up?
I am much concerned about this thing. It almost wrecked my marriage and changed a perfectly good young man into a cheap Don Juan—which indicates its power, a power that most young people aren't able to cope with. . . . Thanks for any comment you may contribute. — P.Y. NEWS VOLD

St. Paul's United Church, Summerside, was the setting on Saturday August 2nd, for a pretty summer wedding of interest to many in New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, when Miss Hazel Marguerite MacKnight, only daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Earl H. MacKnight of Apohaqui, was united in marriage to Albert Earl MacEwen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl MacEwen of St. Peters Bay, P. E. I.
Rev. D.K. MacLeod performed the 3 o'clock double-ring ceremony against a setting of yellow and white gladioli and sweet peas. The guest pews were marked with tiny nosegays of sweet peas and babies breath. The organist was Miss Gertrude Sherwood, and the guest soloist was Miss Joan Brown, Sussex.
The bride was given in marriage by her father, and she was attended by Miss Pauline Durick of St. Martins, as maid of honor, and Miss Shirley Pollock, Apohaqui, as bridesmaid.
Stuart MacEwen, brother of the groom was best man. The ushers were Arthur MacKnight, brother of the bride, and Leslie MacInnis, Chipman, friend of the groom.
For her marriage the bride wore yellow and aqua nylon chiffon ballerina length gowns over net and taffeta, with white accessories, and carried cascade bouquets of mixed gladioli and sweet peas.
The bride's mother chose for her daughter's wedding a navy rayon crepe dress with white lace and white accessories. Her corsage was of red roses. The groom's mother wore a grey and white print silk and taffeta dress with white accessories, and her corsage was of white gladioli.
Following the ceremony a reception for about 75 guests was held at the Colonial Home, Sussex. Mrs. Walter Bowness, Bedeque, P.E.I. aunt of the groom, friendship and non-exploitative sharing—and away from the pits, the murky depths of blind possessiveness; or frantic sexuality. Then why do good American husbands, previously content with their comradely American wives, abruptly lost their heads in European Lorelei's? The reason is obvious.

Thoroughly conditioned to regard man as her master and adversary, to be bested by sex cunning, therefore, Lorelei artfully employs primitive come-hither to get him eating out of her hand. She conjures him back to a primordial pitch of togetherness—to a sex-drugged state of wishless ease, wherein the hoodwinked male feels himself worshipped as a pagan god. In this state, his capacity to "keep his head" is overwhelmed by the un-leashing, in his unconscious, of chaotic primal selfishness.
Perhaps if the American man were better oriented to his own depths, in terms of awareness of "the human story," and less preoccupied with materialist pursuits in his homeland, he'd be more immune to the siren song. In any case, if you've fetched Tony back from that abyss, you are doing fine, in pitting your worth against Lorelei's wiles. . . . M.H.
