New Asbestos Mine May Open On Coast Of Nfld.

By IAN MACDONALD
Canadian Press Staff Writer
BAIE VERTE, Nfld. (CP)—This tiny community on the northeast coast of Newfoundland could become the site of a booming asbestos mine.

President M. J. Boylen said in his second annual report to Advocate Mines Limited four analyses have been made of an ore body in this area.

Engineer G. H. Gibbs of Toronto estimates there are 23,300,000 tons of ore in the region worth $10 a ton or $233,000,000.

The company has a 1,570-square-mile concession in Newfoundland. Mr. Gibbs said if it were to start production at 2,000 tons a day and increase it to 4,000 tons in four years, the net profit would average $4,486,000 a year for 21 years—the life of the proven ore body.

NEED $8,000,000
Negotiations with selected groups now are under way in an attempt to finance the project.

Mr. Gibbs believes $8,000,000 would be needed to build a 2,000-ton a day plant, wharf, diesel power, townsite and provide six months working capital.

"A total of $10,000 would provide hydro-electric power and operating expenses for a full year."

"The cost of increasing the plant capacity to 4,000 tons a day is estimated at $3,000,000, to be defrayed out of profits."

Total or mining costs, including depreciation, administration and removal of one ton of waste rock for each ton of ore, is estimated at $4.06 per ton of ore. This would make the net profit $93,000,000 over 21 years.

GOOD POSITION
The Toronto engineer said Baie Verte asbestos is in a good position to compete on world markets. Its semi-hardness "as opposed to extreme softness or harshness, is a rare and desirable quality preferred by fabricators of asbestos-cement building materials throughout the world."

The ore has fast draining qualities which allow the user to increase production speeds and reduce costs.

"The location of the deposit permits boat loading... this factor represents a saving of from $7 to $9.50 per ton of asbestos to an overseas buyer."

anywhere within the island. The company's balance sheet for the year ended Dec. 31, 1957 showed a capital deficit of $2,232,955.

During that year the search for ore was continued in this area. Three crews of prospectors and geologists covered most of the Burlington Peninsula.

Where finds were accessible by road, bulldozers were used for trenching and stripping.

At the nearby base camp 12 diamond drills completed the appraisal program of main asbestos ore bodies.

Residents now are hoping the mining company will find the right financial backing to get the plant started.

Whether this has been due to the fact that such troubles are actually becoming more widespread or whether it is due merely to the fact that they are now more often detected, but which ever the case may be, with cattle values at the levels which they have reached today, there are few who can long afford to maintain cows in their herd which are uncertain breeders.

The following are recommendations which, if followed, will assist in overcoming many breeding problems:

1. Keep records of freshening dates, heat dates and breeding dates. These help to detect irregularities and aid the veterinarian in diagnosing the trouble.

2. Cows should be fresh at least 60 days before breeding. Cows which have not shown a heat period by 30 days following freshening should be examined by a veterinarian to determine the cause of such delay. Cows which are allowed to go a considerable length of time before breeding very often develop abnormalities and are hard to settle.

3. In the winter it is wise to turn cows out at least once a day and observe carefully for heat periods.

4. Heifers should be bred so that they will freshen at from 24 to 30 months of age, younger if they are well developed. Older heifers are often more difficult to settle.

5. If a cow has had trouble calving, has retained the placenta or showed an abnormal discharge after calving she should be treated by a veterinarian and not bred until her reproductive organs have returned to normal.

6. Unqualified persons should not be allowed to attempt treatment of breeding in the herd. It is very easy to do more harm than good without full knowledge of the anatomy and function of the various parts of the reproductive tract.

7. Breeding stock should be raised only from families that have good breeding histories, if at all possible.

8. Regular herd check-ups are invaluable, especially pregnancy checks.

9. Good feeding, good management and disease control are important factors in breeding efficiency.
