

THE DAILY EXAMINER.

JULY 13, 1888.

Editorial Notes.

—Wouldn't it be well to have the market house open every day?

—Science now claims that every atom has a little soul. There are men who seem to have swapped souls with atoms.

—The Manchester Examiner calls attention to a large consignment of tea from China, having crossed the Pacific in British ships to British Columbia, and being carried there by the C. P. R. The Manchester Examiner remarks that "the superiority of the new route is thus established."

—The slander charges lately set led in and out of our Supreme court recall Shakespeare's famous lines:

"Slander Whose edge is sharper than the sword, whose tongue Out-venoms all the worms of Nile."

People generally want more of the spirit which thinks no evil, and turns with disgust from the tale-bearer.

—The Patriot cordially agrees with the Summer Journal in its denunciation of the Lieut.-Governor of Nova Scotia! This fact will be regarded as very suspicious. In fact, it will go far to make a large majority of the people think that there is something wrong about the Journal's attack on one of the representatives of our Queen. Seriously, the Journal should now reconsider the policy, the propriety, of its recent conduct in respect to a man who is out of party politics and not in a position to defend himself.

—The Plan of Campaign has been adopted by the Scotch crofters and the Moderator of the Free Church has consented to become the custodian of the rents. The Montreal Witness remarks: "There must either be little that is immoral about the plan of campaign or else the evils arising from the rent-racking system must be extremely great, or Scotch ministers, whose conclusion, as a rule, are well developed under the Calvinistic system of theology, could not be induced to co-operate in it. The fact is, that very often the lives of men, women and children depend upon finding some mode of defence against being turned out of shelter."

—An English blue book shows that there was collected by the Imperial Government as license duties in England and Wales for the year ending March 31, 1888, £2,986,134, made up as follows: Publicans and all other licensees for the retailing of beer, spirits, wine and sweets, including occasional licenses, £1,365,266; dealers in beer, spirits, wine and sweets, and refreshment-house keepers, £187,037; game dealers, £6,149; tobacco dealers, £63,159; appraisers, auctioneers, house agents, pawnbrokers and plate dealers, £134,816; carriages, £496,030; armorial bearings, male servants and dog licenses, £517,135; and licenses to kill game, including gamekeepers' licenses, and to carry guns, £216,411.

A New Steamer.

The new air ship upon which the United States Government proposes to expend $150,000 is to be constructed of steel plates one-fourth of an inch in thickness. The structure will be 954 feet long and 138 feet in diameter, with cone shaped ends. The lifting power is to be obtained by exhausting the air from this huge steel cylinder until a more or less complete vacuum is produced, and the propulsion will be accomplished by means of screw propellers driven by a powerful electrical engine, which in turn will derive its power from storage batteries. The machinery will be placed on a structure underneath the cylinder, which will also contain accommodation for freight or passengers. It is estimated that even with a vacuum far from complete the ship will have a power equal to lifting 153,000 tons. The altitude attained will depend upon the vacuum which can be regulated by the machinery. If the ship turns out a success the feats that can be achieved with it will equal any of Jules Verne's wildest romances. The exploration of the inaccessible places of the earth will be accomplished without difficulty. The relief of Emin Bey and Stanley, when he gets there, can be effected with the most consummate ease. The identity of the mysterious White Pascha can be established, and a few bombs dropped equably down into the camp of the Mahdi will cause that troublesome person to take incipiently to his heels. The air ship will undoubtedly be a great thing. The nation that controls the air will own the earth.

Queen Natalie and the Synod.

The Pall Mall Gazette publishes a number of telegrams which have passed between Queen Natalie, of Serbia, and the lay and ecclesiastical authorities of the Holy Synod in relation to the troubles between herself and King Milan. In her despatches Queen Natalie charges that the Synod is conspiring with King Milan to perpetrate a cruel injustice against an innocent woman. Queen Natalie's last despatch was addressed to the Metropolitan of the Holy Synod. In it she declares that the Synod is not qualified to concern itself in the question of a divorce between her and her husband. A divorce granted by the Synod would, under the circumstances of the case, be contrary to the laws of Serbia, and the Queen declared that she would energetically protest against the iniquity and illegality of such a divorce if granted by the Synod.

The North of Scotland Canadian Cattle Company contracted with William Thomson & Sons, of Dundee, for the tonnage necessary to transport from Montreal to Aberdeen between two and three thousand head of Canadian store cattle in six shipments, beginning early in November. The Barcelona is expected to leave Montreal with the first shipment.

The refusal of the Privy Council to grant permission to appeal the Glengarry election case does not surprise the Canadian electors. Mr. MacMaster himself anticipated a refusal, as will be seen by his letter written from London, although eminent English counsel held a different opinion. Mr. Purcell will sit for Glengarry, and every vote he casts will injure the party that counts him among its prominent adherents.

Teachers' Inter-Provincial Convention.

THIS Convention (to be held in St. John next week) will be interesting and noteworthy, independently of the educational thought of this part of Canada. As the Educational Review remarks: "Such distinguished men as Sir William Dawson, Dr. Fitch, Colmelen and Mrs. Park, Prof. Hulsting, Dr. Schurman, in addition to the best educational talent that the Atlantic Provinces affords, is an indication to present that cannot be overlooked, and the inspiration gained by listening to such men will be full recompense for any sacrifice that may be made." It is expected that there will be seven or eight hundred visitors. We learn that the Premiers of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick will be present, while the Government of this Province will be represented by the Honorable Donald Ferguson. Our Chief Superintendent of Education will be in attendance, and also a large number of the teachers of this Province. For the benefit of the latter we submit the following:—

List of hotels—Royal, $2.50 to $3.00; Duferin, $2.50 to $3.00; Victoria, $2.00 to $2.50; New Victoria, $1.50 to $2.00; Park, $1.50 to $2.00; Clifton, $1.50 per day. Elliott's, Bangor, Ottawa, Nova Scotia, Hawarden, Central and Queen, each $1.00 a day.

Party Ingratitude.

If any fresh proof were needed of the ingratitude of parties, it was afforded by the behaviour of the Bonapartists on the occasion of M. de Maupas' death. If there was any man in France whose services deserved the tribute of laudatory recognition at the hands of that party, it was the author of the "Memoires Sur le Second Empire." Yet we are informed that in the leading Bonapartist organ he had not obtained even the meagre courtesy of having his death announced in the obituary notices. De Maupas had, it appears, paid the hero of the cafes-chantants the compliment of his applause, a fact which is not a little significant. But the Prefect of Police, who had done so much to protect Napoleon III. on the throne of France, was but a feeble old man whose praise or blame no one sought or cared about. Nevertheless, his approval of the Boulanger movement is not without its value as evidence that the double parallel which some have set up and others have laughed at between the present and former Republics and the Boulanger and Napoleonic movements, is not so absurd after all. Boulanger's demand of revision gives additional force to the comparison, and there are other points of resemblance between the coup d'etat and that which preceded the coup d'etat which have not escaped notice. Nevertheless, Boulanger is not Louis Napoleon, with the prestige of an Emperor uncle at his back.

Our Copper Mines.

That the copper mines of this country are excelled by none in the world is now a fully ascertained fact. In Algoma the ore is not only exceptionally rich and abundant, but it is more accessible than in almost any of the great copper-producing countries. It is a metal that fetches the highest price, and it is not only largely used but the demand for it is constantly increasing, so that there can be no doubt of making remunerative sales. Under these circumstances it may well be asked with surprise what it is that Canadiana are waiting for before they realize this dormant wealth. It is absolutely indispensable to delay until some speculative foreigner comes along who wishes to enrich himself? Why should not our own people reap the advantages for themselves instead of giving the lion's share to others? Surely there should be enough enterprise in Canada to develop these mines. That there is enough capital is proved by the fact that Canadian money is being employed abroad at low rates, because there is no country without employment for it in the country. Cannot our capitalists venture out of the beaten track of Canadian industries? It is no distant or little known and inaccessible region from which the invention comes to develop this wealth. A very short trip even from this city would bring those contemplating an investment with ease to the locality of these neglected mines, and a mere holiday jaunt would enable a personal inspection to be made. And when the mines were being worked constant supervision could be exercised, while the output could be handled cheaply and easily. It seems almost incredible that there should be lethargy and indifference under such circumstances. Capital is seeking far more uncertain and less promising investment, yet these rich mines lie idle almost at our doors. Are there none on our own soil willing to avail themselves of the opportunity?—Empire.

A Teutonic Samson.

(From the New York Herald.)

Sebastian Miller, a Bavarian brewer, was the victor in a tug of war with two teams of horses at a picnic at Schuetzen Park, Paterson, N. J. Miller weighs 225 pounds, is 25 years old, and is nearly as broad as he is long. His exhibition yesterday was a repetition of one given on Friday last to a few friends and fellow-workmen at Oppermann's brewery in East Forty-fifth street. One end of a strong heavy ladder was chained to a stake, the other being fastened to the top of a wooden horse.

Then Miller put two straps over his shoulder and lay upon the ladder with his head downward. He braced his feet against an upper round and held on with both hands to one of the lower rounds. When he had thus adjusted himself, two horses of the sturdy build affected by the brewers were hitched to the straps, to which was attached a whiffletree, and began to pull for their lives. In spite of whip and voice, Miller held his position. Again and again the driver urged his willing steeds, but they made no impression upon the stalwart Teuton, whose cord and arm muscles stood out like whipcords. These horses weighed 4,000 pounds, and their driver said they were accustomed to haul loads of six or seven tons with great ease.

Another team tried to pull the modern Samson from his perch, tugging and pulling until they were in a foam of perspiration, but they, too, failed, and were taken away amid cheers and jeers from spectators.

Things One Doesn't Like to See.

I don't like to see girls and boys waltzing on the sidewalk after ten o'clock at night, even though the morrow is Sunday and they can dance just a little. Of course nothing better could be expected from the boys, but the girls, well they should have more sense.

I don't like to see persons putting off to-morrow what they should do to-day. When to-morrow comes they will find that something else will turn up to make the task all the more arduous. "If it were done it were well it were done quickly," is a motto which will not do a person any harm to act up to.

I don't like to see a man too self-opinionated—who believes that the individual who does not see eye to eye with him on every subject is a fool. Such an one should remember that this is a big world, full of big people with big ideas, and that he does not monopolize all the brain-power of even a small place like Charlottetown.

I don't like to hear people abuse a man, even if he is the representative of "the largest and best insurance Company on the Continent," and does persist in showing one figure in proof of his assertion just when one is up to his eyes in business. The pads and lead pencils furnished by that account are very useful, and on that account, if on no other, we should try and bear with the talk of the representative.

I don't like to see the treatment the public receive from the postal authorities in the matter of supplying stamps. The present arrangement is disgraceful, and the sooner an improvement is made the better.

I don't like to hear grown up persons speak of their parents as "paw" and "maw," any more than I like to hear them referred to as the "old man" or "old woman." The good, old-fashioned "father" and "mother" is more to my taste.

I don't like to see a man who was very particular about what he wore before marriage, develop into a slovenly, untidy creature after the event. Neither do I like to see one of this kind, after the death of his wife and when he is looking for another, put on all the airs and style of his younger days. To my mind a man should be just as neat and tidy after marriage as before; in other words a man should strive as hard to please his wife after marriage as he did before they were united.

I don't like to see a contributor to the press withdraw his effusions from the paper in which they first appeared, because something that grated upon his fine-grained organization happened to creep into its columns. To an outsider such conduct appears childish.

I don't like to see the man who is fond of playing practical jokes on people get vexed when one is played at his own expense. If a man cannot take a joke he should refrain from playing one upon others. I like a consistent man.

I don't like to see so many accidents happening as a result of carelessness in properly protecting the waterworks excavations. The city has already had to pay a good deal of money for the carelessness of its officials, and I trust that greater care will be taken in the future.

I don't like to see the walls of the Post Office corridor so dusty. It is very annoying to rub against them and get one's hands or clothing soiled. The person who does the sweeping in the mornings should use the dust brush occasionally.

I don't like to see the readiness with which some people believe and circulate every slanderous story that comes to their ears. The greatest offenders in this respect are women, but the men are not far behind. More harm is done by the talk at the table, sewing circle, etc., than by all the scandals which appear in the newspapers. Truly, woman is the newspaper's greatest rival as a disseminator of news.

I don't like to see the mysterious manner in which important surgical operations at our city hospitals are kept from the public. In other cities every operation worth recording is chronicled in detail in the press, and as a result the public are kept fully informed as to the latest improvements in the world of science, and the hospitals and surgeons receive a reputation that brings them patients from all parts of the world. But then I forget, our medical men—like those who flourished years ago and "bled" for everything from smallpox to an ingrowing toe-nail—don't believe in advertising.

I don't like to see the small way in which our policemen are treated in the matter of clothing. They are expected to keep themselves supplied with good clothing all the year round, in addition to meeting their other expenses, on the meagre salary of $1 per day. As a result there is a good deal of difference in the cut, as well as in the color of the uniforms worn. To be sure the men were treated to new suits last year, in commemoration of the Queen's Jubilee, and this year they are to have the same kindness extended in order to introduce a new uniform. But these are only windfalls, which come once or twice in a life-time. In my opinion the city should furnish the officers with two suits a year, or give them an increase of salary.

I don't like to see a man go out to a mill-stream, and after angling unsuccessfully for something worth taking home, purchase a large specimen for a high price, and on his return tell his friends about all the trouble he had landing his captive. The story may go down for a while; but the truth generally leaks out to the discomfiture of the fisherman.

I don't like to see people run into the Supreme Court with cases which could be much more easily and satisfactorily settled in the City Small Debt Court, or in the County Courts. Law comes high in the Supreme Court. No matter who wins the suit, both parties lose money and time by the transaction. My advice to those who want to go to law is—don't.

I don't like to hear persons who are old enough to have better sense, continually making use of vulgar and obscene expressions in conversation. There is nothing sadder about talk of that kind, and the sooner those who indulge in it make this discovery the better for themselves.

I don't like to see a man, who contributes an anonymous article or series of articles to a newspaper, tell every person who speaks to him that he is the writer. If he is anxious for newspaper notoriety he should attach his real name to his effusion; if not he should keep his mouth closed about it. I don't like a man who cannot keep his business to himself.

Arts.

Personal.

Mr. C. C. Carleton, Souris, was in town to-day.

Hon. J. D. S. Thompson is on his way from Ottawa to visit his constituents.

Mr. A. Stone (formerly of this city) was in town yesterday and went West this morning. Gov. Ames of Massachusetts is at the point of death. His disease is identical with that of General Sheridan.

Mr. J. M. Campbell, of the Post Office Department, was among the passengers in the Worcester for Boston yesterday afternoon.

Geo. F. Owen, Esq., of Cardigan, was in town last evening and went West this morning to attend the farmers' meeting at Margate.

The Educational Review, to hand this morning, contains an interesting biographical sketch of J. Gould Schurman, M. A., D. Sc., of Cornell University.

The Farmer announces that John L. McKinnon, Esq., has been appointed editor of the Island Guardian. We agree with the Farmer that the appointment is most judicious.

Wanamaker, the famous Philadelphia, has a neat one million of insurance on his life, in twenty-nine different companies. The last policy issued on his life was received by him on Thursday last, and so far as is known there is no other man in the world whose life is insured for such an enormous amount.
