The Conservative Situation in England.

The weakness of divided command has appeared not on the field of Cannae alone, and it is natural that the English Conservatives, now on the eve of decisive battle, should think it time to put an end to the dual generalship and elect a single chief. It is natural also that they should prefer Lord Salisbury, as being at once the stronger Conservative and by far the stronger man. Sir Stafford Northcote is a relic of that residuum which remained with the late Lord Derby when the rupture had taken place on the subject of the Corn Laws, and the talent of the party had succeeded with Peel. He humbly and assiduously served Lord Beaconsfield, who, unlike Peel, bequeathed to the country a rich legacy of political domestics, but no statesmen.
Lord Salisbury is a man altogether of higher calibre, besides the advantages, never disregarded by Conservatives, of rank and fortune. Yet it may be doubted whether, by discarding Sir Stafford Northcote and giving the truncheon of command to Lord Salisbury, the party will improve its chances of victory. Sir Stafford's conservatism, though feeble, is national; it is the sentiment of the quiet and well-to-do classes generally, of all who look with dread upon the progress of socialism, collectivism, agrarianism, disunionism, atheism, and all the other spirits of revolution which at present ride the gale; and therefore it attracts as large a following as any conservatism can in an age of progress. Lord Salis-bury's conservatism is that of a territorial aristocrat with no real interests or sympathies beyond the pale of a privileged order, and his eloquent unwisdom never fails to accentuate the untoward fact. A Government on such a basis as his would topple over in six months.
Never was man more richly endowed by nature with every qualification for bringing ruin on his party and cause. A grain less of talent, and the compound would have been married. Among the many misfortunes of England at this perilous juncture it is by no means the least, even in the eyes of rational Liberals, that the Conservative party, instead of being led by a Pitt, a Canning or a Peel, should be compelled to choose between Sir Stafford Northcote and Lord Salisbury, with the prospect, apparently, in case the choice falls upon Lord Salisbury, of having such a political scamp and mountebank as Lord Randolph Churchill for leader of the party in the House of Commons. Such is the effect of the party system upon the quality of statesmen. England, with all her faults and backslidings, is still full of integrity, patriotism and practical wisdom; as may be seen by anybody who goes among her leading men in the great professions, the great industries, and the other walks of private life. But these men do not come to the front. The men who come more and more to the front are the masters of that craft in which Lord Randolph Churchill is pre-eminent, and can give congenial expression to party passions and foibles on the stump.—The Week.

Grand Entertainment at New Dominion, Lot 65.

The most enjoyable entertainment of the present literary series of the New Dominion Debating and Literary Institute, was held in the schoolhouse, on Wednesday evening, March 26th. Notwithstanding the very bad state of the roads, the spacious schoolhouse was filled to the utmost, many being compelled to stand during the performance. The committee in charge are making a great effort to raise the standard of the meetings, and are most successful in their efforts. The visitors were treated to a genuine feast of music, readings, recitations, dialogues, etc., by ladies and gentlemen, too well known to require any laudatory comments. A better entertainment of the kind, or one which the whole body of visitors so thoroughly enjoyed, has not been given previously this season, and reflected credit on the persons who arranged the programme, and equally with those who carried it into effect. Some persons, at the close, went as far as to state it was the best concert they had ever attended. Be that as it may, it was certainly a treat for all who were fortunate enough to be present.
The make up of the programme seemed perfect and well balanced, without a surfeit in any one particular, and a bountiful of each.
Your correspondent does not care to particularize as all so well acquitted themselves, but the following deserve special mention: The trio by Miss Ellen McEwen, Miss Angelina and Miss Emily Dickerson, who possess musical ability of superior merit, was well rendered and loudly applauded.
Similar compliments were paid Miss Grace Ross and Miss Lydia Fairbairn's duet; they were in splendid voice, and showed every indication of careful training and appreciative vocalization. Mr. Chadwick Stretch sang a comic song, which convulsed the audience, and was received with enthusiasm. Messrs. F. Stretch and A. N.
McNeill sang "We will not talk of Old Times." It was admirably sung, and evoked much applause. Mr. Joseph K. Ross gave a reading, entitled "Love in a Balloon." The rapturous applause he received was fitting indeed, as he is deservedly popular, not only on the platform, but in every sphere in which he so earnestly enters into every good work. Mr. D. McNeill recited "Beautiful Snow," in a manner which won warm applause. A humorous dialogue entitled "The Reconstructed Man," by Mr.
Silas McNeill, Miss Emily Dickenson and Miss Grace Ross gave much enjoyment to the audience. Mr. Alex. McLean gave a Negro sermon. He greatly amused the audience by his able imitations of the Negro dialect, and the capital manner in which he brought out the peculiar points of the sermon. A new and pleasing feature of this entertainment was a giant, ten feet in height, exhibited by Mr. Alex. McLean, who, in a masterly manner, gave the history of this wonderful being, and there is no doubt but if Mr. Barnum would hear of this giant, he would pay a price for him, as he would be a great addition to his curiosities. Brief, but very appropriate addresses were delivered by the President—Mr. Neil Currie—and Mr. James McLean, both of whom spoke with much power and eloquence. Mr. John McMillan, of Fairview, in his usual pleasing manner, made a few complimentary remarks, after which he moved a vote of thanks to the lady performers, which was carried unanimously.
The audience then sang "Good Night," thus closing a very enjoyable evening's entertainment.—Com.

Rush of Immigrants to the Northwest.

A despatch of the 27th, from St. Paul says: "Immigration has begun early and with a rush. The Northern Pacific had twelve cars full of passengers, more than six hundred in all, last night, westward bound, a liberal portion for Washington Territory and Oregon.
To-night's train had sixteen cars that required two engines to pull it into Fargo. Included in this evening's train were 125 through passengers for the Pacific Coast. The passenger business of the Northern Pacific is just booming, and the present traffic is only a foretaste of what is to come. The Manitoba crowded coaches for Devil's Lake, and six those for the latter Territory were nearly all Canadian, who went home to Ontario and Quebec last fall. Six coaches and sixty cars of emigrant moveables will be run over the Manitoba road to-morrow for Winnipeg. The emigrants are all Canadians, and came on a special train from Chicago, arriving here this evening."

"Hatched, matched, dispatched," was a sufficiently flippant paraphrase of "born, married, died," but it was reserved for an Australian journal, the Melbourne Bulletin, to suffice the simple record with sentiment, and under the general heading of "The Garden of Life" to enumerate, "Buds," "Blossoms," and "Cypress."
