

Odds and Ends.

It is strange that time and tide wait for no man. Things that are tide are usually compelled to wait.

"Marriage," said an unfortunate husband, "is the churchyard of love." "And you men," replied the wife, "are the grave diggers."

A French newspaper, speaking about a new cemetery opened near Lyons, says: "M. Gascoigne was the first persons who had the pleasure of being buried in this delightful retreat."

Sounds, though proceeding from the same distance, do not travel with equal rapidity. A call for dinner will travel over a ten acre lot in a minute and a half, while a summons to work will take from five to ten minutes.

The Des Moines Register says that the grasshoppers recently ate up half an acre of tobacco for a man near that place, and when the owner went out to look at it they sat on the fence and squirted tobacco juice into his face.

"Make way, gentleman!" cried a fussy office-holder to some people the other night at a political meeting, "make way, we are the representatives of the people!" "Make way yourself," replied a sturdy member of the throng, "we are the people themselves!"

As I approve of a youth that has some of the old man in him, so I am no less pleased with an old man that has something of the youth. He that follows this rule may be old in body, but can never be so in mind.—Cicero.

A small boy was asked by a lady if he studied hard at school? He replied that he did not hurt himself much at it. "Oh," said the lady, "you must study hard, or you will never be President of the United States." "Yes ma'am, he replied, "but I don't expect to be—I'm a Democrat!"

When Sir William Hamilton announced to the Royal Irish Academy his discovery of a central sun—the star on which our orb of day and its planetary attendants revolved—a wagish member exclaimed: "What! our sun's sun? Why, that must be a grandson?"

A New Hampshire editor, who has been keeping a record of big beats, announces at last that "the beat that beat that beat the other beat, is now beaten by a beat that beats all the beats, whether the original beat the beat that beat the beat, or the beat that beat the beat."

An advertisement in the London Times seriously announces a new song, with the modest request, "Oh, give me back but yesterday!" A companion to the above, "Oh, could you spare to-morrow?" is in preparation; to be afterwards followed by the sequel lyric of "You haven't got such a thing as next week about you, have you?"

A country preacher was one day much annoyed by those who dropped in after the service had commenced invariably closing the door after them. He bore the vexation with Job-like patience, but at length, being fairly exhausted from heat, he vociferated to an offender, "Friend, do, for goodness sake, let that door be open. I believe if I was preaching in a bottle you would put the cork in."

A WOMAN THAT ONE COULD LOVE.

"Now there is a woman that one could love," said old Roger, delightfully, as he saw a figure, arrayed in the full feather of fashion, in a window in Walsington street. "A long life could be spent quietly in such company; no quarrelling for precedence; no jealousy; no strife of any kind; no teasing for dress and follies, till one's purse-strings ache in sympathy with aching heart-strings, at unchecked extravagance. Even I could love such a woman as that."

"Perhaps you could," responded a sweet voice at his side; "but would it love you back again, think you? There would be no return for your investment of affection here in this heartless thing, this mere frame; you should turn your attention to something worthy of your love, where, for a small outlay of affection, a tenfold return would be made by your domestic joy."

"Alas!" said the old bachelor, "where shall I find this?" But for the beautiful eyes that met his how easily the question might be answered; and, with a melancholy step, he passed along. He was more a bachelor from habit than choice, after all.

A GLANCE AT POVERTY.—"It must be very inconvenient to be poor," said Mrs. Partington, as she glanced with honest pride at her high-backed chairs and old-fashioned chest of drawers, and continued her eye on to the open cupboard in the corner. "How people can contrive to get along with so little I don't see. There is our poor neighbour down the yard, now, is so pinched for room that she has to have a bed in the very room where she sleeps!"

Kind old lady! her benevolence walked ahead of her grammar; but a trifling error in speech is as pardonable in Mrs. Partington as in Henry Clay.

A DEAD SHOT.—"How do you feel with such a shocking-looking coat on?" said a young clerk, of more pretension than brains, one morning. "I feel," said old Roger, looking at him steadily, with one eye half closed, as if taking aim at his victim, "I feel, young man, as if I had a coat on which has been paid for,—a luxury of feeling which I think you will never experience," and then he quietly resumed the reading of the Journal, and the young "blood" made no further remark on the subject.

A witness in court who was cautioned to give a precise answer to every question, and not to talk about what he might think the question meant, was asked,—"You drive a wagon?" "No, sir; I do not not."

"What, man! did you not tell my learned friend so this moment?" "No, sir; I did not." "Now, sir, I put it to you on your oath, do you not drive a wagon?" "No, sir."
