Hope No. Koreans May React To Bombing Program

By J. M. Roberts, Jr. (Associated Press News Analyst) Over and above its obvious military objectives, the new United Nations bombing program in North Korea is an invitation to the people to begin protesting the war in which they have been involved by their Communist masters.

Not that the Red leaders can be expected to respond on a humanitarian basis. But in a poorly-organized area, where troops are supplied in piecemeal and more-or-less primitive fashion, a sudden and resounding population can be a real handicap.

Allied authorities are emphasizing the purely military nature of the intensified bombing program and the humanitarian quality of the advance notice being given civilians. But there is nothing more inexorable in psychological warfare than to tell a populace that their town is to be destroyed, and then force them to stand by while it is destroyed.

This same psychology was applied to the Japanese late in the Second World War. It was an important factor in their search for an armistice even before the atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

The Communists first advanced the idea of a truce in Korea when repeated Chinese offensives merely piled up the dead before the long lines of Allied guns.

Then the Reds created a situation in which they had a war with the West, but themselves being specific that the Allies heavily in supplies and attention which would have been better given to Europe.

The Reds have given every sign of wishing to continue this situation indefinitely. The promise to bomb out 75 specific towns, with demonstrations of the ability to do so already under way, is calculated to remind the Communists once again of the value of an armistice.

Of particular interest will be the reaction of the Red Air Force. Although it is not yet clear whether it is within the hour of just where and when the bombers will strike, Red air power as well as the populace will take a terrific psychological beating if it attempts to dodge the issue.

This is strategic bombing of a type heretofore attempted only occasionally in Korea, coming more closely into the pattern of full-scale modern war. Korea is made to be more closely than ever into the test-tube role played by Spain in 1936.

Ottawa Officially Confirms Earlier Provincial Diagnosis

Federal agricultural authorities last night officially named the "mystery" disease which has hit Prince Edward Island as anthrax. So far as is known there have been three horses died as a result of being afflicted but reported deaths of any cattle have not been confirmed by either Provincial or Federal veterinarians.

The statement last night came from Ottawa via the Canadian Press and confirms the diagnosis made earlier this week by Provincial veterinarian Dr. George Fisher. Federal tests of samples provided were made in the Hull, Quebec, laboratories.

Anthrax was considered one of the world's worst animal diseases until the famed scientist, Louis Pasteur of France, developed a vaccine to counteract it in 1881. Since then the disease has been kept under control, but strict measures are still necessary to protect other animals on farms where it appears.

It has also been stated in the Ottawa report that all infected premises will be disinfected and cleaned and all susceptible animals on the farms will be vaccinated. These are horses, cattle swine and sheep.

Outbreaks of the disease have been comparatively rare in the Maritime Provinces, the report states. It is believed that only four occurrences have taken place, with this the first one reported case in Prince Edward Island. However, it has been reported in Canada on many occasions since 1903 when the first instance was recorded. The great strides made in efforts

Beavers Keeping Workmen Busy On Hermitage Road

Busy beavers are keeping a Department of Highway's maintenance man on the job daily, demolishing the structures they work at each night in damming up the stream at Hermitage Road wooden bridge. Someone on the job conceived the idea of leaving lanterns on the bridge at night, with a view to scaring the beavers off. At work—for two nights, and on the third night the water was dammed up again.

Four or more dams have been built by the beavers in this area, and it is also reported that there are others at Mount Herbert and Peakes.

Win 5th

Continued from page 1 Again it was a case of Social Credit's solid hold on persons not in the cities, where results became known much later than in the country. The big vote for Social Credit indicated that the large majority of the voters approved of the government's policy of limited gas export. Opposition to gas export at this time had been one of the main planks of the Liberals and the C. C. F.

The renewed mandate for the Manning Government also showed absolute opposition charges that the oil-rich province was treating municipalities in a niggardly fashion when it came to sharing the wealth from vast oil and natural gas development.

Temperatures ranged between 75 and 80 degrees and roads were mostly dry as voters visited the polls between 9 a. m. MST (noon EDT and 6 p. m. in rural areas and from 9 a. m. to 7 p. m. in the cities. An added indication of the vote volume was the heavier advance polls in the major cities of Edmonton and Calgary. The record vote for an Alberta general election occurred in 1940 when 308,964 voters exercised their franchise, about 14,000 more than there were some 540,000 eligible voters in this election.

There are 61 seats in the new Legislature, four more than in 1948 due to redistribution. It increased Edmonton's total to seven from five, gave Calgary six instead of five and added the new northern constituency of Bonnyville. But only 60 seats were at stake. Provincial Secretary C. E. Gerhart was elected by acclamation in the southern constituency of Acadia-Coronation when the C. C. F. aspirant failed to meet the nomination-day deadline.

Mr. McCullagh was elected to the rank of squadron leader. Illness prevented him from proceeding overseas with the squadron. He had been elected by acclamation in the southern constituency of Acadia-Coronation when the C. C. F. aspirant failed to meet the nomination-day deadline.

Mr. McCullagh visited Europe and other parts of the world during and after the war and wrote his impressions in the Globe and Mail. In 1949 he wrote from London, Paris, Rome and Geneva and his articles were compiled in a 30-page pamphlet titled "Europe Today."

Beetle Larvae Now Causing Severe Damage

Colorado potato beetle larvae are present in large numbers and they are causing severe damage in fields which have not been sprayed, reports the Weekly Potato Bulletin. The second brood of potato flea beetles began to appear this week and they will become more abundant during the next few days. Aphids and tarnished plant bugs are also becoming quite numerous in many potato fields. DDT 50% wettable powder, 2 lbs. to 100 gallons will control these insects, although DDT 25% emulsion, 1 quart to 100 gallons is slightly more effective for aphids than the wettable powder.

Suggests Plan To Investigate Red Charges

TORONTO, Aug. 5 (CP)—Col. B. C. Limb, a South Korean delegate to the 18th International Red Cross conference, today suggested a plan for selecting a committee to investigate Red charges. Col. Limb told a press conference the Red Cross could select 50 national societies from which parties to the dispute might agree on four or five countries to conduct an impartial inquiry.

The Communists could not possibly call everybody biased except themselves," he said. Chinese Communist delegates yesterday continued their charges of United States germ warfare in Korea when they told a press conference that germ-laden insects, leaflets, food and animals were dropped in more than 70 Korean centres since January.

The Communists have rejected all proposals for investigation of their charges which the United States has consistently denied. Mme. Li Teh Chuan head of the Red China delegation, said her country would regard as an "impartial group" any persons not "tools of a Western Power."

When asked for an example of such a group, she named Dr. James Endicott head of the left-wing Canadian Peace Congress, and Dr. Hewlett Johnson, the "Red" Dean of Canterbury, who she said "made impartial observations while they were in China and Korea."

Col. Limb said the International Committee of the Red Cross has for a long time served the needs of humanity so well that everybody accepts it "except the Communists."

He said he would not accept the suggestion that Sweden, Switzerland, Poland and Czechoslovakia form an investigation commission. "We all know where Poland and Czechoslovakia stand and it is a mockery to the intelligence of the world to call these two countries neutrals in the war."

He reiterated his offer to have representatives from North Korea investigate conditions in the prisoner of war camps in his country if they were accompanied by an "impartial body and if the same privileges were extended to Southern Korea."

Milldam At Vernon River Is Rebuilt

The Ross Mill at Vernon River, where the dam was carried away during the early spring freshets, has been given a new lease of life and bids fair to become more popular than ever as a trout pond easily accessible to city dwellers and tourists who make places on the Montague highway their headquarters.

The "hole below the dam", famous for years as the hideout of the big ones after they pass Vernon Bridge on their way in from the sea, is a thing of the past. The dam has been rebuilt and carried the full width of the pond, with a by-pass on the north-west corner which leads to the river and permits the fish to swim right into the pond.

The fishery which the Federal Government erected and maintained at this pond for many years has been abandoned in favour of the by-pass method of replenishing, which is gaining favour, as they are being connected with ponds throughout the province.

Malcolm MacLean, who operates the mill by electricity, is enthusiastic about the new set-up, and is confident that the next "fresh run" will bring the salt water trout into the pond in time for fishing before the season closes. "He expects to have a number of boats available next summer."

Great Efforts

Continued from page 1 The Northwest Territories suffered a heavy blow last November when its main mill burned down. A mid-winter airlift brought in construction materials and workers. By prodigious efforts, the mill was rebuilt and going again by April. In addition a second plant to extract uranium from residue materials was finished at the same time. Production has gone up "substantially."

By next April, Eldorado plans to have the Beaverledge Mine in Northern Saskatchewan going too. It will at least double current production and could expand sharply in years ahead. Three hundreds of prospectors now are roaming the area around Beaverledge in a search for more uranium. Eldorado has its own exploration division, too. The annual Eldorado report refers to "intensive" research now being conducted by the government's mines branch to seek better methods for processing uranium ore.

At Port Hope, Ont., the government's refinery is well advanced on new refining processes.
