ALMONT WILKES,

2.31½

The well-known stallion, "Almont Wilkes" by "Hernando," 2.37 1-2, dam "Olive Wilkes," 2.39 1-4, dam of "Gracie Wilkes," 2.30 and "Almont Wilkes," 2.31 1-2, by Geo. Wilkes. jr., will stand the season of 1898 at Nicholson's Training Stables, Grafton St., opp. Court House, Ch'town.

Almont Wilkes is a big, stylish, carriage horse; he stands over 16 hands high and weighs 1200 lbs. He is the sire of Montrose, 2.20 3-4, and Westle Wilkes, 2.39 1-4. Montrose was the horse that put up such a gallant fight in the free-for-all at Ch'town track last fall, and there is no doubt that only for the conceited action of the other drivers, he would have won with ease. He trotted 13 heats, winning 4 first places and 5 seconds.

Westle Wilkes started in the 2.40 class at Summerside last fall, a green horse right off the pasture, getting a mark of 2.39 1-4 in a field of seasoned campaigners, and his owner expects him to get a mark of 2.23 this year. This proves that Almont Wilkes sires speed of a high order, and being a remarkable good looker, has always been a prize-winner in the show ring even when up against the best in the land.

IN WASHINGTON'S DAY.

Picturesque Costumes Worn at the First Inaugural Ball.

Writing of "With Washington In the Minuet," Mrs. Burton Harrison gives an interesting description of the first inaugural ball in The Ladies' Home Journal. In telling of this memorable fete she gives an interesting peep at the costumes worn by the belles and beaux of a century ago. "For a hint of the costumes worn," she writes, "we must furbish up the impressions of Colonel Stone, who, strange to say, appears to be the chief chronicler of toilets whose data are handed down in print: 'One favorite dress was a plain celestial blue satin gown with a white satin petticoat. On the neck was worn a very large Italian gauze handkerchief with border stripes of satin. The headdress was a puff of gauze in the form of a globe, the headpiece of which was composed of white satin having a double wing in large plaits and trimmed with a wreath of artificial roses falling from the left at the top to the right at the bottom in front, the reverse behind. The hair was dressed all over in detached curls, four of which, in two ranks, fell on each side of the neck and were relieved behind by a floating chignon.'

"In color of attire the men of those days were not, as now, simply a foil for the gay tints of their womankind. 'A light blue French coat, with high collar, broad lapels and large gilt buttons, a double breasted marseilles vest, nankeen colored cassimere breeches, with white silk stockings, shining pumps, and full ruffles at the breast and wrists, together with a ponderous white cravat with a "pudding" in it, were then evening dress a la mode in New York.'

"Washington's usual costume on dress occasions was a coat and breeches of plain black velvet, with a white or pearl colored satin embroidered waistcoat, white or buff gloves and a long sword in a scabbard of polished white leather, which was worn under the coat. He invariably carried in his hand a cocked hat, and his knees and feet were adorned with silver buckles."

Mattress Pincushions.

Mattress pincushions, says a writer in a Philadelphia paper, can be made in any materials, may be embellished with more or less embroidery, and are made in various sizes, oblong or square. The smallest that I advise making should be 9 by 6 inches. Having decided on the size, the stuffing and lining must be done, and for this get coarse house flannel, which must be cut carefully and exactly to the size of the mattress. It takes several yards of flannel, as it must be very firm and hard, and when all pressed together should be quite an inch thick. These layers must be firmly sewed together, as the success of these pincushions entirely depends on their being firm and hard at top, at bottom and at the sides. Another necessity is the perfect regularity with which they are cut, the edges generally requiring to be sheared with very sharp scissors. It is possible to stuff the lining with horsehair or bran instead of flannel, in which case the covering must be made first; otherwise, sew the flannel into a case of cheap loose woven calico, through which the pins pass easily, using tape one inch wide for the sides.

Having completed this, the outer covering is a matter of taste, but plain materials are best. A good satin, silk or moire looks well, and indeed some of the finest flax linens of pale shades come out well when embroidered in white. A small design in one corner looks nice worked in silks, with gold and silver thread and a few beads or spangles if liked, but keep the embroidery to one color. There is no need to describe how to proceed, except that in putting the side pieces on they must be even, well stretched and tacked before oversewing with fine silk. These mattresses will take pins of every size at the side, with ordinary black and white at top, and the result when quite complete is well worth the trouble of their manufacture.

Practical.

The great Marchesi, like other famous singers, was the recipient of valuable gifts from an admiring public. Many of these were of a perishable nature, and some were rich and rare. One only bore the character of absolute practicality.

During a concert tour in Switzerland there was one concert in which the prima donna was especially brilliant. She sang a varied programme—a song from Handel, an Italian air, some German songs—and not only through the greatness but the diversity of her gifts roused the audience to a tremendous pitch of enthusiasm.

Many persons crowded up to her when the concert was over, overwhelming her with the profusion of the flowers they brought. After the crowd had dispersed, a bashful looking girl came up, holding a percel in her hand.

"You delighted me so very much at your last concert," said she, "that today I should like to express my admiration for you in person. Flowers, however, fade. I therefore beg to offer you a lasting and practical souvenir which will keep me in your memory."

With these words she unwrapped a silver soup ladle, presented it and disappeared.—Youth's Companion.

Soiled Woolen Gowns.

Spots and marks on woolen gowns are easily removed by rubbing them well with a cake of magnesia. Hang the gown away for a day or two and then brush thoroughly. If the spot has not entirely disappeared, repeat the process. Other gowns besides those of wool can often be cleaned by this means, and laces that are slightly soiled are freshened by rubbing them well with magnesia and allowing it to remain on the lace for a short time.

A Long Range Shave.

Calino's master, very busy with some important work, does not wish to be troubled with the noise of the coming and going of tradespeople and servants and gives orders that none shall be admitted till he has gone out.

The first one who comes is the barber.

"Go on," says Calino; "come again when he has gone out!"—Paris Gaulois.

The investigations of Weber have shown that the curliness of hair varies with its flatness. The flatter it is the more it curls, Curling irons flatten the hair.

House Cleaning

Painting is part of it just as much as soaping and scrubbing.

There are spots water cannot remove and discolorations that scouring will not take away. Use the paint brush in such cases. We have the finest mixed Paint that is made.

All shades of Alabastine and Kalsomine.
