Interested In New Bridge At Montague

*Citizens of Montague have noticed with considerable interest the appearance of an advertisement calling for tenders for the construction of a temporary pile trestle bridge across the Montague River, and for the removal of the steel superstructure on the present one. This would seem to give indication that a new bridge is planned for Montague without any definite time being set for the actual construction. However, it will be welcomed when it comes, as the present one, not only being old, having been erected in 1912, a then second hand bridge, but also is inadequate for present transportation requirements. Although two cars can squeeze past one another on the bridge, it is not feasible for two trucks to attempt the same thing unless great care is taken. This results in a bottle neck during periods of heavy traffic, and it is not uncommon to see several cars at either end waiting to cross. Moreover, the weight limit of five tons prevents heavy transport passing over the bridge, and requires it to take the shortest practical detour of approximately four miles to Victoria Cross, thereby increasing transportation costs. Consequently a new bridge which will eliminate these difficulties, will be most welcome to everyone, not only in Montague, but also throughout the whole district which uses this transportation route.

MONROE SIZZLES IN SUPERB SUSPENSE DRAMA, "NIAGARA"

"Niagara," the Twentieth Century-Fox suspense drama, which opens today at the Prince Edward Theatre, is a breath-taking motion picture in more ways than one. It provides an abundant display of Marilyn Monroe's physical allurements and at the same time has the scenic splendor of Niagara Falls as a background for the emotional turbulance she herself provokes. And to make the pyrotechnics of the story and locale all the more spectacular the proceedings are photographed in color by Technicolor.

Joseph Cotten and Jean Peters, with Miss Munroe, form a starring triumvirate that adds real lustre to this unusual murder mystery. With Casey Adams playing the husband of Jean Peters the picture unfolds the drama of two honeymoon couples ensnared in a tangle of fate as threatening as the ominous might of the great Niagara they have come to see.

"Niagara" is the story of a two-timing wife who brings her husband, a war-shocked Korean veteran, to the honeymoon resort and plots with the man she is having an affair with to have her spouse pushed into the Falls. Marilyn is the philandering wife and Cotton is the psychotic husband.

*Henry Hathaway's incisive direction has kept the suspense generated by this double-dealing and Cotten's attempts to elude capture, at fever pitch. He has perfectly integrated the resplendent grandeur of Niagara Falls with the tense drama to make the picture an unusual entertainment package. One unforgetable scene is the climax which shows Cotten and Miss Peters being swept to the brink of the Falls in a disabled boat.
