

Women Happenings

The Guardian, Charlottetown, Sat. May 4, 1963.

John Pillman, Kennington, was a weekend visitor to Halifax where he attended an Anglican Church conference.

Guests of Mrs. William Gill, Kennington, are Miss Letitia Sims, who has returned to Kennington after spending the winter months in Charlottetown, and Mrs. A. H. Duvar of Montague.

King Lion Fenner Stewart and Lon Ben Riehl, Kennington, attended a district cabinet meeting at Moncton on Sunday.

The final card party of the season was held recently at the Royal Canadian Legion, home, Kennington. Ladies first prize was won by Mrs. Charles Hickey, second prize by Mrs. Gertrude Hickey, and third prize by Mrs. Garnet Turner and Mrs. George Carr, and door prize to Mrs. George Hickey. For men, Charles Hickey won the first prize, Earle Carr second, and Mrs. Gertrude Hickey third.

Today's spring Bonnet tea at the Community Centre will feature booths of home cooking, sewing and knitting. Helpers will model hats from a local millinery shop and the hats to be modeled and conversation will be held in the afternoon. The tea is an annual affair of the Junior League of the Charlottetown Hospital.

The regular meeting of the Kennington Presbyterian Young Women's Guild was held on Tuesday, April 23, in the Guild room.

The meeting opened with the Lord's Prayer, followed by the devotional period led by Mrs. John Kennedy. Roll call was answered by 9 members.

Plans were made to hold a rummage sale on Friday, May 24 in the Old Town Hall.

The meeting closed with the singing of hymns and a luncheon was served by Mrs. John Heffell and Mrs. John Paynter.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Morris, 48 Chestnut Drive, were host and hostess Monday evening for a surprise party in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Bentley who celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary that day. Six couples were in attendance.

Mrs. A. F. Gormley, Mrs. R. E. Hurst, and Mrs. Ewan Campbell were winners of the door prizes donated by Tailors Jewellers at the fine china program Monday night Mrs. E.K. McNeill and Mrs. Walter Pickard were winners of two floral arrangements.

Star- and moonlight, this evening gave. And we remembered how gently these would shine on the fresh, rounded grave in that island cemetery, where this afternoon, the remains of one exceedingly dear to her loved ones was laid.

First-born of a family of sisters, she was destined not to reach the adult years. Winsomely pretty, as are girls in the new of the teens, beloved, and gone. Only memories remain: scenes of happy days, scraps of conversation that come to mind over and over. A look, we realize, after all, children, our blessings, are "only" faint, not given. And it is not the sad loss we must dwell on, but rather be grateful for the privilege that she was lent for the years. Yet on a sad note at the daughter and sister of an island farm - home rests in that star- and moonlight. Presently summer - flowers will unfold there, up into this night and away. And to be cherished, loved ones, kin, schoolmates, friend, memory's sweet as the tender fragrance that survives.

When the martyred flowers breathe through their little lives; Sweet as a song that once consoled our pain. But never shall be sung again, is thy remembrance. Now the flowers bloom.

Hath come to thee. Sleep, loved one, it is best.

Until Monday. Diary - Good-night.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Sunshine And Showers Of Pleasant Days Ahead

Granddaughter paused in her arms on her way home from classes, to watch a sparrow pick up a scrap of paper and fly up then to an eave.

"The nestling has commenced," she offered.

"Mack nodded. "And do you know what I heard this morning?" he queried. "I could hardly believe my ears, for I thought there were none about it. It was a pheasant, I heard."

"And I," Alex reported, "saw Canada geese! They went that way," he grunted pointing over a hilltop.

"It's a lovely time of year - the Springtime," she said.

And in the sunshine prevailing, was many an engaging promise and warrant of the delights in the seasons ahead. "We talked of them this evening when a company joined us, about the heartiness, in the quiet and peace of week's end."

"I'm always happy to see the last of the winter," James said.

"And April, though it is a month of changeable weather, I like it better than those of the Fall. Now we look ahead, not to snow and frosts but to the sunshine and showers of the pleasant days."

"Strange," another remarked with a dry chuckle, "I wouldn't mind another month or two of winter in the spring work clothes. The worries of the cropping come then."

"I know," James agreed. "But I always think, a man can't meet any worry better if he has his feet planted on the firm earth!"

A Fashion Item at HOLMAN'S

Galant gave an account of the masses, thirty eight in all, flowers for the church, choir books, the Regional High School school prizes and various other contributions, including a donation to the school as various activities at the Music Festival and the Western Hospital.

When the address was read to the outgoing president, Mrs. Kneough, by Mrs. Fred Fitzgerald, and Mrs. Kneough responded to the address by Mrs. Roy Gallant.

Mrs. Kneough responded to the address by Mrs. Roy Gallant, executive for their help during her term of office.

Mrs. Kneough said that a group of 120,000 members in Canada and the United States and Canada, and the United States, shows what power this group can exercise, and this force is made up of small parish councils like ours. Mrs. Kneough also thanked Mrs. M. J. Rooney, the Spirit Director and all those who helped during her term.

M. J. Rooney was then called upon to address the meeting, and he also thanked Mrs. Kneough for her help during her term.
