

Odds and Ends.

"How many boarders have you madam?" said a military officer to the keeper of quite a respectable boarding house in Nineteenth street.

"Why," said the lady, "I have a number in the city, and several who make short visits from the country."

"But how many steady boarders have you?"

"Why, out of ten now in the house, there are not more than three I can call steady!"

A drunken captain met a private in his company in the same condition and ordered him to halt, all the while endeavouring to assume a firm position on his feet, and with dignified severity exclaimed: "Private Smith, I'll give you (hic) 't' four o'clock gissoberin."

An old minister, while one day pursuing his studies, was suddenly interrupted by his wife asking him the question—which has puzzled the oldest divines: "Do you think we shall know each other in heaven?" Without a moment's hesitation he replied: "To be sure we shall. Do you think we will be greater fools there than here?"

A certain judge, pronouncing sentence of death upon an Irishman, said: "You shall be taken to the place of execution and there be hanged by the neck until you are dead; and may God have mercy on your soul!" At this the prisoner exclaimed: "Hold, there, Judge; I want none of your prayers, for I never knew any one to live long after you prayed for him."

"What kind of board do you get at your house?" said a friend to Binks the other day. "Well, we pine during the week, and plank down a good deal on Saturdays," said the candorous Binks.

"Did you know," said a cunning Gentle to a Jew, "that they hung Jews and jackasses together in Portland?" "Indeed," returned Solomon, "den it ish vell dat you and I ish not daro."

Some body asks if the English preacher a rival of Spurgeon, who is about to visit Boston, is of a mindful turn of mind, since his name is Punshon.

EDUCATIONAL ERRORS.—All of us who are worth anything spend our manhood in endeavoring the follies, or captivating the mistakes of our youth.—Shelton.

If a seaman should turn back every time he encounters a head-wind, he would never make a voyage. So he who permits himself to be baffled by adverse circumstances will never make headway in the voyage of life.

A BEAUTIFUL PARAGRAPH.—O man! fear not for thy affections, and feel no dread lest time should efface them. There is neither to-day nor yesterday in the powerful echoes of the memories; there is only always. He who no longer feels has never felt. There are two memories—the memory of the senses, and in which perishable things decay; and the memory of the soul, for which time does not exist, and which lives over, at the same instant, every moment of its past existence. Fear not, ye who love. Time has power over hours, none over the soul.—Lamartine.

LAGUERREOTYPES.—"What artfulness!" said Mrs. Partington, as she held her miniature in her hand, done in the highest style of a daguerrean art. The features were radiant with benevolence; the cap, close-fitted about her venerable face, bore upon it the faded black ribbon, the memento of ancient woe; the closed-fold kerchief about her neck was pinned with mathematical exactness, while from beneath the cap border struggled a dark grey lock of hair, like a weathered branch in winter waving amid accumulated snows. The specs and box were represented upon the table by her side. The picture was like her, and admiration marked every line of her countenance as she spoke.

"What art fullness here is, and how naturally every limnet is brought out! How nicely the dress is digested!" She was talking to herself all the while.

"Why, this old black luteering, that I have worn twenty years for Paul, looks as good as new, only it is a little too short-waisted by a great deal. O, Paul, Paul!" sighed she, as she sat back in her chair and gazed, with a tear in her eye, upon an old smoke-stained profile, cut in black, that had hung for many a year above the mantel-piece.

"O, Paul! what a blessed thing this is, where Art helps Natur, and Natur helps Art, and they both help one another! How I wish I had your dear old phismahogany done like this! I'd prize it more than gold or silver."

She sat still, and looked alternately at the daguerreotype and the profile, as if she hoped the profile would speak to her; but it still looked rigidly forward, thrusting out huge outline of nose it proud of it, and then with a sigh she reclapsed the case and deposited the picture in the upper drawer of the old black bureau in the corner.

It was all the while burning holes through a pine shingle with one of Mrs. Partington's best knitting-needles.

"You do make that child look like a fool, wife, with all that toggery on him," said Mr. Fog angrily, as they were starting out for a walk. "Dear me," says Mrs. Partington, meeting them at the door, "what a doll of a baby, and how much it resembles his papa!" Mr. Fog coughed, and they passed along.

OUT OF PLACE.—"Does your arm pain you much, sir?" asked a young lady of a gentleman who had seated himself near her, in a mixed assembly, and thrown his arm across the back of her chair and slightly touched her neck.
