THE DAILY EXAMINER.

JUNE 10, 1893.

Prince of Wales College

It is pleasing to note on the part of the public a continually increasing appreciation of the value of Prince of Wales College and Normal School. Philharmonic Hall was crowded on the occasion of the commencement exercises of last evening; and many parts of the country were represented in the large audience. An improvement in respect to the exercises was at once visible in the neatly printed programmes provided by the enterprise of Messrs. Hazard & Moore, and supplied to each of those who were present. One cannot fail to mark a significant difference between this programme and the programmes of similar exercises in the United States. In the latter, four-fifths of the space, at least, is occupied by essays and addresses upon the Great Republic and the perfection of its institutions. In that which was placed in the hands of visitors last evening we see only, of the patriotic order, "Hearts of Oak" and "God Save the Queen." The difference illustrates very forcibly an educational distinction between the United States and the Canadian people. In the United States the teacher seems to be most of all concerned in impressing upon the minds of the young the popular idea of that particular country and its government and the advantages enjoyed under a pure democracy. In Canada the education of the young, is directed less towards our own country and ourselves and more towards the world at large. Our children are taught more in a general way; their children more in a definite way. The tendency of our institutions is to enlarge the mind in the process of development; the tendency of theirs to sharpen the intellect.

The essays read last evening were entitled "Rosalind," in "As You Like It," by Miss Laura Young; "Elaine," in "Idylls of the King," by Miss Lizzie Irving; "Jacques," in "As You Like It," by Mr. G. A. McKinnon, literary subjects all—and all well treated. The "Valedictory," by Mr. W. S. Ferguson, was as follows:

VALEDICTORY.

It is with feelings of pleasure, and perhaps, pardonable pride that we extend a hearty welcome to our friends and visitors on the eve of our departure from the Prince of Wales College. These feelings are mingled with sadness by the reflection that the relations which bind us to the College, to the Professors, and to one another are now to be severed. But, as we depart, some of us to prosecute our studies in other institutions of learning, some to prepare for work of a professional nature, and others to engage immediately in the responsible duties of life, the recollection of the events of the term 92 93 will ever touch the tenderest chords in our hearts, and cause us to cherish the memory of our Alma Mater.

The course of the term has not been uneventful. A Professorship of book-keeping was established with Mr. Miller as instructor. The addition to the College staff of Messrs West and Arsenault was a source of pleasure to their friends and satisfaction to the students. The good results which have attended the efforts of each of these Professors in his separate department is an earnest of his future usefulness. The monotony of the routine work of the term was relieved by the kindly encouragement of the Professors, by the relaxation in the club-room of the Debating Society, and by the contests on the football campus.

In taking leave of the Professors of the College, we can add little to the eulogies of students of former years. The enthusiasm and zeal for work infused into us by the ceaseless activity of our esteemed Principal, Dr. Anderson, will ever remain with us to urge us to greater and loftier efforts. We will retain the most grateful and pleasant recollections of Professor Caven and his work. Of Professor Robinson it is needless to speak here. All the students unite in the wish that fresh laurels may await him in his future career. From Professor Harcourt we part with feelings of the highest respect. For Professors Lloyd and West we will retain a warm place in our affections. We tender congratulations to Professors Miller and Arsenault for the success of their first year in the institution; and to all, our best wishes for their future happiness and welfare.

In bidding farewell to one another, let us not forget that this is a turning point in our lives. Whether we ascend the accountant's chair, practise the physician's art, resolve to contend at the bar, or strive to make two blades of grass grow where only one has grown before, we ought to remember that there is a sacred trust imposed upon us—to keep unsullied the fame of the Prince of Wales College, and to make it our ambition to maintain the good name of the name of natives of Prince Edward Island.

In conclusion, we express the hope that future years may bring to the Prince of Wales College classes more brilliant, but not less devoted than those of '92 '93.

In the course of his reply, Dr. Anderson stated that he had never had a better working class than that of 1893, noted particularly the growth of an Esprit du Corps in respect to the college, and expressed his great regret that Mr. Robinson, whose ability, faithfulness and assiduity he enlarged upon, has severed his connection with it. On the other hand, he expressed great satisfaction with the work of Mr. Miller as teacher of bookkeeping, and with the results obtained by the Rev. Fred. E. J. Lloyd as instructor of music. The presentation of diplomas, medals and other prizes by Judge Fitzgerald was an interesting feature of the entertainment. But Dr. McLeod's address, if carefully noted, is one which cannot fail to have a practical effect upon teachers and pupils. Dr. McLeod pointed out that education is a process of organization of brain and nerve tissue; that a natural impress or trace is left upon the brain as a result of action; and that the accumulation of the knowledge of facts is a secondary matter. This view of the question does not, the Doctor argued, necessarily mean that mind is not the product of matter, but that mental activity and physical matter, i. e., brain structure—are so correlated that we have no knowledge of mind except through matter. Dr. McLeod paid a compliment to Dr. Anderson and the mind-developing methods of Prince of Wales College as distinguished from the system of cramming facts which prevails in many of our schools. Good habits of mind, good methods of action—these are what our young men and women really need.

The music under the direction of the Rev. Fred. E. J. Lloyd was a notable feature of the exercises. The growth of a taste for music is one of the gratifying movements of the age. It is pleasing to know that the Government are furthering this movement by means of our educational system.

We have again, at the close of another scholastic year, to congratulate Dr. Anderson upon the continued prosperity and success of the institution of which he has long been the honored head. As the heart of the educational system, from which comes the new blood which carries life and vigor to the schools of the Province, Prince of Wales College and Normal School must ever be an object of solicitude to everyone who is anxious that the welfare of Prince Edward Island shall be promoted.

The Surplus.

It will be admitted that our Conservative Government is singularly fortunate. Other countries are just now the scene of deficits and bankruptcies. But Canada, under the Conservatives, maintains the even tenor of her way. An expanding trade and economical management have resulted in a surplus, at the end of eleven months, of upwards of six millions of dollars! We shall not contend that this gratifying result is due to the great ability of the present Administration, or to the National Policy, under which we obtain our tea and sugar, and coffee, etc., free of duty, or to the excellent system of currency and banking, inaugurated by the Conservatives, under which the financial needs of the country at large are fully met. We must not damp the ardor of those enthusiastic missionaries who are about to proceed to Ottawa for the purpose of inventing and formulating some new policy.

Prince Roland Bonaparte's Visit.

Prince Roland Bonaparte and suite left this morning for St. John, via Summerside, whence they proceed to Boston and New York. We understand that the Prince was very much pleased with the city and with the attention shown him during his stay.

Yesterday afternoon the Prince and his private secretary and a number of other gentlemen were entertained at luncheon at Government House.

In the afternoon the Prince and his secretary visited the Convent de Notre Dame. The pupils of the institution were massed in the music hall, and upon the entrance of the Prince he was greeted with a double quartette (piano), after which Miss Ida Byrne presented him with a beautiful bouquet, and addresses in English and French were read. Miss Barbara Macdonald presented the address in English, and Miss Bessie McPhee the address in French. The Prince replied, first addressing the pupils in French and then in English. He expressed his gratification and pleasure at his visit to the Convent, and said that it reminded him of the school-life of his own little girl, who is now ten years of age. The proceedings closed with a chorus by the pupils. Chief Justice Sullivan, Premier Peters, and Mr. Blanchard accompanied the Prince and his secretary on their visit to the convent.

Later in the afternoon, the Prince and his secretary and the Chief Justice, the Premier and Mr. Blanchard visited St. Dunstan's College. The students were massed in the study hall, where addresses of welcome in French and English were presented to the Prince. The address in French was presented by Mr Gauthier, and that in English by Mr. Johnston. The Prince replied in appropriate terms to each address. His Lordship Bishop Macdonald, Rev Ronald B Macdonald, Rustico, Rev Dr Walker, Rollo Bay, Rev A McAulay, Rev D B Reid, Rev R P Hogan and other clergymen were present on the occasion.

The Prince was expected to visit St. Joseph's Convent, but was unable to do so for want of time. An appropriate programme had been prepared for the occasion and addresses in French and English were to be presented.

In the evening the Prince and his private secretary and a number of invited guests were entertained by the Chief Justice and Mrs. Sullivan at their residence, Brighton.

During the evening, the Prince was serenaded by the students of Prince of Wales College, whom he addressed in French and English.

—The Patriot has made a great fuss about the recent appointment of Dr. McNeil's son to the post office at Stanley. It is needless to say that delegates did not wait upon Mr. Brecken in respect to the appointment. We are credibly informed that young McNeill bears an excellent character, and deservedly stands high in the estimation of the community in which he lives.

BARGAINS.—Bargains this evening in ladies, misses and children's tan shoes at the Dominion Boot & Shoe Store.

BEHRING SEA ARBITRATION.—This week's Harper's Weekly contains likenesses of the members of the court and counsel on both sides of the case. Very good portraits of Sir John Thompson and Mr. Joseph Pope are given. Copies may be had at the Diamond Bookstore.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

"Presbyterian" Speaks.

SIR,—Your correspondent with the long name has honored me with a reply, and which yet is no reply. He has forgotten the point to which I took exception, and has dratted his reply so as to meet an issue which I have not raised. In other words he is fighting the doctrine of predestination, but that is altogether aside from the points in debate between us. His charges were partiality on the part of the Assembly in treating Dr. Briggs so roughly, while it allowed others of its members to escape with impunity, and charges of deception on the part of nearly all the other ministers in subscribing to a creed and teaching the reverse of that. Here I demanded his proof; but to my great surprise, there is not one iota of proof given. He does, indeed, state several matters, by saying "perhaps he can explain," 1st, Why so many divines are agitating for a revision of the Confession and a change in its doctrinal statements? 2nd, Why we never hear a breath of such teaching from Presbyterian pulpits, as contained in the 3rd, 5th and 10 Chapters of the Confession? 3rd, Why so many Presbyterian ministers are constantly asserting that Christ died for all, when the Confession says plainly, etc. This and an extract from the Evangelist is the reply he gives to my oft-repeated demands for the proof of his charges of partiality and deception.

All this is so much dust thrown into the eyes of his opponent, but it will cost him his fair name of "Impartiality." That he may see better the real nature of his reply, let me substitute the Church of England for the assembly, and charge the bishops and ministers of that church with the same offences as he did to the Assembly. He demands my proofs. I reply that so many eminent divines of that church are agitating for a revision of the Prayer Book, that I never hear a breath of the teaching of baptismal regeneration or the apostolical succession from their pulpits, and then submit an extract from the Rock or Times denouncing some ritualistic doctrines. What would be his answer. Undoubtedly he would cry out against the absurdity of my defence, but it is exactly his own. When will men do to others as they would have others to do them. I am now done with your correspondent. His was the ungracious part of judging unmercifully men whom he never saw, and of whose character he knew nothing bad. "Who art thou that judgest another man's servant; to his own master he standeth or falleth, yea he shall be holden up, for God is able to make him stand."

THE HALLET-STEVENS CASE.

Marks on the Dead Body.

DORCHESTER, June 10.

In the trial of Mrs. Stevens, yesterday, several new witnesses were examined. Edward Donahoe, who helped to disinter Mabel, and who stripped the clothing from her body, testified: "I saw the body when completely stripped. I looked very close at the marks upon the body. There were marks over the lower part and about the arms. The marks wherever they were ran down the body. The marks were on both arms. The greater part was of those on the arms about the elbows, and between the elbow and shoulder on both arms. I noticed a mark around one of the eyes. There were none underneath the arms that I remember. There were no marks on the inner part of the legs. There were marks on the back like the rest of the marks on the body. They were long black marks, and the flesh seemed to be a little cut and somewhat black in the centre.

Personal.

Dr. Taylor has returned from the United States.

Archbishop O'Brien, who has been in the city for several days past, left for home this morning.

Murdock McPhee and wife, of Forest Hill, Allan Macdonald, of the same place, and Ronald D. Stewart, of Belle Creek, are registered at the Rankin House. They leave on Monday for Calgary, N. W. T., where they intend settling.

The Paris correspondent of the London Truth says one of the social functions in Paris in connection with the Behring Sea arbitration: "Mr. Spiers, son of the author of the well-known Anglo-French dictionary and grammar, and Mrs. Spiers gave a lunch in compliment to Sir Richard Webster and his fellow-counsel. Every kind of food on the table came from England, and was much relished by palates jaded with French Cookery. The governor of the feast was a Mr. Sydney Arnold, whose genial presence never fails to bring good humor in his train. The belle of the morning was a Mrs. Pope, a tall, lithe and beautiful person, whose husband is connected with the Canadian Delegation at the Arbitral Tribunal. She was dressed in salmon-colored mousseline de soie, goffered and sashed and bowed with black satin, and having on the skirt one very deep flounce of black musselide de soie, which the pinkish material beneath lighted up."

Mrs. Pope is the wife of Mr. Joseph Pope, assistant clerk of the Privy Council of Canada (elder son of late Hon. Judge Pope) who is attached to the Canadian delegation before the Behring Sea tribunal. Mrs. Pope is the eldest daughter of Judge Henri Taschereau, of Montreal, and a grand niece of His Eminence Cardinal Taschereau.
