THE AMERICAN $8.00 Typewriter.

This is a well-made, practical machine, writing capitals, small letters, figures, and punctuation marks (71 in all) on full width paper, just like a $100 instrument. It is the first of its kind ever offered at a popular price for which the above claim can be truthfully made. It is not a toy, but a typewriter built for and capable of REAL WORK. While not as rapid as the large machines sometimes become in expert hands, it is still at least as rapid as the pen, and has the advantage of such simplicity that it can be understood and mastered almost at a glance. We cordially commend it to helpful parents and teachers everywhere.

Writes capitals, small letters, figures and marks—71 in all. Writes just like a $100 machine. No Shift Keys. No Ribbon. Prints from the type direct. Prints on flat surface. Writing always in sight. Corrections and insertions easily made. Takes any width of paper or envelope up to 8 1/2 inches. Easy to understand—learned in 5 minutes. Weighs only four pounds—most portable. Compact, takes up but little room. Built solid and simple; can't get out of order. Capital and lower case keyboard alike—easily mastered. More "margin play" for the small letters which do most of the work. Takes good letter-press copies.

Packed securely in handsome case and expressed to any address on receipt of price, $8.00, in registered letter, money order or certified check. We guarantee every machine, and are glad to answer all inquiries for further information as to this machine and also the "Yost." IRA CORNWALL, General Agent for Maritime Provinces, dec20 D. B. STEWART, Agent, Charlottetown.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs. Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance. Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 7c. bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered. HEALTH BETTER THAN WEALTH.

And You Can't Retain the Former and Give up the latter.

Dr. A. Symons Eccles has struck the keynote of radical improvement in the general health of city communities when he says that the most potent factor of present-day ailments is the absence into which the muscular system is allowed to fall by dwellers in cities, who are daily becoming more and more dependent on artificial means of locomotion and labor saving apparatus, until disorders of digestion and nervous maladies are now as common among the comparatively poor as they are among the wealthy. The rich man endeavors to overcome the mischief wrought by sedentary life by horse-back exercise or golf, but the poorer man, who is unable to afford these recreations, neglects his muscular development and invariably tumbles into his brain or nervous system, or rather, than waste the time necessary for a brisk walk or a half hour in the gymnasium.

The popularity of the bicycle has tended to counteract the disease of muscles engaged in large proportions of town residents, but there are still numbers of persons of both sexes who require vigorous muscular exercise in order to maintain health. Women are the victims of modern, social and commercial changes almost if not quite as much as men. The centralization of many domestic industries may have improved the character of the products thus manufactured or of the work performed, but what bread was made and washing was done at home the female members of many families fairly well off, but not too richly endowed with this world's goods, were probably employed in kneading the dough and ironing the linen. One of the results of this general disinclination to take the amount of exercise essential to health is the revival of a practice which is recorded in the earliest medical papyri in the British museum.

The introduction of massage may be regarded as specific evidence of the tendency in these latter days to the neglect of muscular exercise, and Dr. Eccles holds that it is true that the absence of function in certain glands is productive of diseases which can be cured by the injection of organic liquids derived from a similar source, and modern research has established this belief—much more so it evidently true that the failure to employ the great bulk of muscular tissue, which is so large a portion of the human frame, will, and invariably does, give rise to disorder of function and altered structure in the other organs and tissues of the body, which are interdependent on the activity of the muscles and each other. Mental and nervous overstrain is rarely dissociated from muscular disease and flaccidity. The burden of Dr. Eccles' exhortation is: "Even if you make a little less money, take more exercise. You will save the difference in doctor's bills and bring more happiness not only into your own life, but into other people's."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

SHE GOT A BARGAIN.

Better Than That, She Knew How to Use It After Getting It.

A lady surrounded the bargain counter of one of the big retail stores on Sixth avenue the other day and captured a fragment of china silk with which she wanted to make a screen. To accomplish this required a degree of strategy and physical exertion sufficient to equip a college eleven for active service on the gridiron. But she got there. "I spent the whole afternoon," said she to a friend, "and when I got home I figured the whole thing up. I could have bought the same stuff up stairs at the regular counter for 39 cents a yard, and I wanted only 3 1/2 yards. Well, that mean little clerk sold me four yards for 35 cents—it was a remnant, you know—so I found I had been trodden upon for about two hours and squeezed black and blue and had lost just 3 cents by the operation.

"But, law, that's nothing! What do you expect? Why, when I examined that silk the next day, I found a hole in every fold. "Mad? Well, I think I was mad! My husband laughed at me. He says women were born to be fooled, don't you know—so I found I had been trodden upon for about two hours and squeezed black and blue and had lost just 3 cents by the operation. "What would you do? I asked him. "Bo," says he, "I'd throw that away and never go back to that store again." "Not much," says I. "I'm going to make them take that back if I die for it. Now there! And if you should miss me when night comes, you'll find my remains at the foot of the china silk counter!" "I went back. After another two hours of shuffling and crowding I got a chance to confront the young man who sold me that silk. I was prepared to make a record of myself, now I tell you. But he merely looked at me and said in a bored sort of way, 'Oh, yes, that's the same piece of silk Mrs. Black returned last week.' "Yes, I was stricken dumb. If there had been room enough, I'd have dropped. But that's nothing. Let me tell you. While he was making out my receipt check another lady glanced at the silk I had just laid down. "That's real pretty," said she. "How many yards?" "Four, ma'am," says he. "How much?" "Thirty cents," says he, with the most unblinking face. It's the last piece of that shade in the house," says he. "I'll take it," says she, pulling out her purse just as he gave me my ticket for the return of that identical piece. Well, then I knew that young man deliberately cheated me and was going to cheat that lady right before my face. But I got my breath quick enough to tell her. And I did. I said: 'Madam, I've just this minute brought that back. It's damaged. Look at these holes.' He knows it's damaged. Here's my ticket for the rebate for its return."

"Well, if you could have seen the look she gave him! Then she turned on her heel and went out. Yes, I should say I'm about even with that house—one of the finest stores in town too."—New York Herald.

Old John's Translation.

Every one in Boston knows of old John the Orangeman, that picturesque and almost historical personage who presides over the affections of all Harvard men, and every one who knows John knows also that his life's motto is that familiar phrase which expresses briefly and to the point the wish that Yale may be forever relegated to the region of sorrow and perpetual darkness. One afternoon strangers were walking through the yard at Harvard, and on every hand they saw the college seal bearing this motto, "Christo et Ecclesie." "Not being on speaking terms with Cicero, Caesar and the other Romans, this did nothing but to arouse their curiosity. "Finally they met John. "I say," said one of the visitors. "I see those words everywhere. Can you tell me what they mean?" John looked carefully at the Latin inscription, bit his pipe a little harder and then replied gravely: "Oh, don't you know, fr'nd, but Oi 'tink it means 'To-b-wid Yale.'"—Boston Budget.

Some Timber Strength Tests.

It would be difficult to convince the average man, especially the Missouri pioneer, that fir is a stronger wood than oak, but such has been proved by actual tests that were made by a fair and impartial committee appointed for the purpose. The timbers used were each 2 by 4 inches and 4 feet long, both ends solidly braced and the weight applied in the middle of the span. Yellow fir stood a strain of 3,062 pounds, common Oregon oak 2,923 pounds. Fine grained yellow fir from near the butt stood a strain of 3,635 pounds, and best Michigan oak snapped with a strain of only 2,428 pounds. These tests were made by the Northern Pacific Railroad company at Tacoma.—St. Louis Republic.

Not Obscure Enough.

"You intend this novel for the Boston public, do you?" said the publisher, leaning back in his chair. "Yes, sir," said the novelist. "Well, Mr. Pendergast," said the publisher, "the work has its merit. It is pointed, interesting, and the style can be readily read and understood, and I think," he continued as the novelist's face broke into a smile of hope, "I think therefore that you should give up all effort to get Boston people interested in it."—Chicago Record.
