Care Of Cream Separators

Cream separators require careful attention. If left unwashed, the bacteria present may multiply to enormous numbers and there will contaminate the cream at the next separating. This is one of the chief reasons for poor quality cream. For best results, the separator must be thoroughly washed and sanitized after each use. Less than five minutes are required to complete the task if these directions are followed:

1. As soon as the milk has drained from the supply tank rinse the tank with a cupful of warm water.
  2. Next pour a pint of warm water or skim-milk directly over the float to clear the cream from the machine.
  3. Pour a pailful of hot (130 degrees F.) solution of a dairy cleaning compound into the supply tank. Allow this to flow through the separator while the bowl is still turning. Recover the solution in a pail or dishpan. During this time the supply tank and spouts by brushing with a soft brush.
  4. Dismantle the machine and place cleaned spouts, float and inlet in the supply tank.
  5. Open the bowl and place the disks on the disk rack. Spread and brush these and the bowl with the cleaning solution, if necessary, then place in the supply tank.
  6. Pour several gallons of really hot (180 degrees F.) water over the parts; drain off this water; shake and hang the disks on a hook and leave the other parts in the supply tank, where they will dry off from their own heat.
- A separator cared for in this manner will not only turn out a better quality of cream; it will also last much longer and will skim cleaner than one not properly washed.

Whelping Season

The mink whelping season and care of the kits after birth require close attention to a considerable number of details. If these sound practices are not observed trouble can be expected and in a great many cases heavy losses in kit mortality. Some of these aspects were discussed in the first series of this article.

Cleanliness should be the by-word previous to the arrival of kits. The Yukon type mink, in the Maritimes, usually begins to whelp the end of April. Nest boxes should be kept dry and clean with adequate ventilation.

All droppings and dirt should

Strange But True

By F. H. MacArthur

The Hood Bros. Albert and Wallace of Cornwall, amassed a tidy sum of money from their 35-years venture growing strawberries. With-out capital and with no experience, the brothers made a big success of their venture.

Strawberry weevil, the curse of many growers, never bothered the Hood Brothers. Why? Because they made sure that all new plants set out came from disease free stock. Careful cultivation, and handling of ripe fruit as it ought to be handled, enabled the enterprising brothers to produce a better berry than their neighbors. Result: top prices and good market. They set out in life with an ideal. Without an idea we get nowhere.

The story of the Hood Brothers proves true progress is made only when one's ideal or plan is nourished and kept alive for a better tomorrow.

Editor James Montgomery of the British Weekly wrote many of his finest hymns in prison where he did time because of his too liberal views on social questions of his day.

Publisher Harry Batsford of England, recently will be the cat of his country $2,800, and strange but true, Batsford never owned a cat in his life.

In his will Batsford suggested that propoganda ought to be stocked to "combat the false idea that cats are able to feed themselves, without getting a hand out now and then from humans."

It's always Sunday in some part of the world. I'll prove it right here and now so that you won't need to start an argument about it.

SUMMER PREVIEW

I shall not attempt to describe the Easter Parade in N. Y., so many days after the event. However, I can assure my readers, from my own observation, that press reports and radio, were absolutely accurate when they pictured the great crowds of worshippers and sight-seers on Fifth Avenue (over a million) as dignified, friendly, and in every way behaving as befitted so solemn yet joyous a holiday. I saw only one silly person—a woman wearing a hat laden with vegetables and poultry—and she received frowns instead of applause and soon disappeared down a side street.

However, it is timely, I believe, to review some of the fashion trends for the coming months, displayed so advantageously in the unexpected warmth of Easter Sunday. It is true the shops in Charlottetown and Summerside, as well as in Montreal and Chicago, are now showing much the same clothes as in New York and Paris, and that the same fashion books are read by all. Yet friends still greet the traveler from the larger centers with the eager question, "What are they wearing now?"

Was there ever a better opportunity to satisfy this normal curiosity than on the one day of the year (the weather being at all favorable) when the finest and best that a world's fashion center has to offer, as well as less expensive costumes, were demonstrated by many thousands of actual living wearers?

What made it more exciting this year, was that the day was warm enough to wear a suit (if it was becoming enough) and yet nippy enough for coats and fur wraps (if one had fur wraps of course). Practically every type of outfit was shown, here that will be needed on the island, from the time Spring arrives, somewhat breathlessly, until cold weather again appears.

The fur wraps intrigued me most. Never since the days when the Prince of Wales and Silver Fox scarves added to the charm of lovely ladies, did fur accent costumes so beautifully. Few fur capes or jackets were seen, but fox, complemented thousands of mink stoles and boas of blue-gray suits and coats.

I hoped that some of these furs were known to have come from P. E. I. (because some of them undoubtedly did) and I asked the fur buyer in a leading Fifth Avenue shop about this. I was disappointed to learn that although "Brunswick mink" and Nova Scotia Mink (and of course Quebec mink) are recognized, P. E. I. mink is simply lost in the shuffle of "Canadian Mink." This buyer seemed to feel that it steps were taken, the mink from our island could be equally well-known—since there is little difference in climate. (The blue-fox picture is not so clear.)

What were outstanding colors, fabrics and silhouettes of suits and coats worn with and of course often without) mink or blue fox stoles? Gray suits and coats led—navy and black followed closely. Wool and heavy corded silk seemed to be the most popular materials. And a new trend in suit jackets and separate jackets was definitely the straight boxy type.

There was also a fuzzy, shorter

Now in their holidays, the lads engage in interests of the farm... helping with the feeding of stock, bringing with their Dad hay from a stack, putting down bedding-straw from a loft. "Let's jump on it now!" the younger fellow proposed today when a considerable heap lay below them. "Don't... we, within earshot, began, then thought better and turned away.
