English School Crisis Brews Over Sweater Girl Problems

By FERN RICH
GRIMSBY, England (Reuters)—A classroom crisis was brewing at a coeducational school here Wednesday where teen-age girls were banned from wearing sweaters, plunger-necklines and fancy underwear.
The new edict by the board of governors was in support of headmaster S. M. Hill's "dress properly—or else" campaign, which began last week when a boy was sent home three times for appearing at school without a tie.
The school authorities Wednesday took a second look at the pretty girl students. Anne Garrod, 15, in a well-fitting sweater, was sent home at luncheon and told to put on "something more suitable."
Said her mother: "The trouble is some of the girls are better developed physically than the teachers. It is all hokey. Anne is 150-yard sprint champion of her school."

do out of school hours is their own business.
"If they go to parties and such like they may wear sweaters and things but they are not going to wear them in school. This school has always had a good reputation. This sort of thing detracts from it. It must stop. The attitude of some parents is just sheer awkwardness."
"The governors are going to support Mr. Hill right up to the hilt over this matter," he added grimly.
And the girls?
"We might as well go back to pigtail," said one 15-year-old.
"It is so unfair to make us dress like babies," Anne Garrod said.
"They don't seem to realize that girls of today are more developed than girls used to be years ago."
The school, one of the few co-educational schools in England, has an official uniform—claret blazers and skirts. But wearing it is not compulsory.

RAPS YOUTHFUL GINAS
Said the chairman of the board of governors, alderman W. J. Molson: "We do not want our girls coming to school trying to look like Gina Lollobrigida and we are not going to have it. What they

Senator Warns of Dangers in New Credit-Tightening Moves

OTTAWA (CP)—Liberal Senator A. N. McLean, a former banker warned Thursday that recent rises in bank-loan interest rates and tightening up of credit may have serious far-reaching effects on Canada's economy.
The Saint John, N.B. businessman said in the Senate the chartered banks had been "directed" by the Bank of Canada to cease taking on new commitments for term loans and to stop making purchases of corporate securities direct from the issuers.

Also, they had to place a large amount of their cash in day-to-day loans and treasury bills to maintain a seven-per-cent secondary reserve. The Bank of Canada raised its interest rate and the chartered banks had to follow.
The first restriction, he said, practically nullified previous legislation permitting the banks to make term loans direct to home builders.

SOCIALISTIC TREND
How the Bank of Canada enforced these restrictions was a "mystery" because the chartered banks operate independently under the Bank Act.
"If we want to drive the country socialistic we couldn't do anything more effective than forcing good small borrowers back into a position where they would have to pay more than double the bank interest rate for their small requirements."

The New Brunswick senator was debating legislation to widen the powers of the Industrial Development Bank.
The amendments would enlarge the sphere of industry in which the bank could make loans, increase to $75,000,000 the maximum the bank could make in loans of $200,000 or more, and empower some officers of the bank to approve smaller loans. At present the bank's board must approve all loans.

Senator McLean said stopping the chartered banks from purchasing corporate securities direct from the issuers "is just the opposite from what the development bank is asking for in the present bill . . . they want millions more to buy such securities."

It was apparent some crown agencies were going in different directions or working at cross purposes "and some explanation should be given."
He did not foresee any signs of inflation and as an ex-banker he could "not understand an over-all policy that cripples the chartered banks from ordinary lending as lending as authorized by law and then other crown agencies getting authority to increase their loans."
Nevertheless, he would support the bill.

Yank Military Forces In Korea Reported In Tough Position

By J. M. ROBERTS
Associated Press News Analyst
The present position of American military forces guarding the truce line in Korea is typical of what the Communists are trying to do all over the world through their smite offensive.

Military authorities in Korea and Washington are asking how long they are going to have to sit still with their obsolete arms while the Communists build up their power in violation of the truce.
The chief complaint of the moment is that the Communists are putting modern weapons into North Korea, chiefly jet planes, while American troops are denied the modern like defence.
Under the truce, both sides agreed to a freeze of men and weapons as of the end of shooting. The United States has three choices. It can resume the war. It can begin a corresponding violation of the truce. Or it can sit and watch.

WON'T RESTART WAR
The first two would have to be unilateral, since the United Nations allies will not agree.
Resumption of the war is not even being considered.
Shipment of modern defensive but not offensive weapons is being considered. If the generals make enough noise, the American public will probably demand it.
The position in Korea, however, is not a critical one, since it could be corrected almost on a moment's notice if the Reds tried another invasion.
As an example of Communist policy, though, it is extremely important. It relates to the way they think and act in general.
They are under no moral compulsions, as are the nations of the Free World.
In the broader world situation, they can propose and make agreements which would only produce similar results. They have tried to do so both with regard to nuclear and conventional weapons. They have tried to do so with regard to a mutual security arrangement for Europe.

TWO SHOT IN NIGHT CLUB
MONTREAL (CP)—Two men were seriously injured Friday night when an unidentified man fired three shots into a crowded downtown night club. Guy Robitaille, 30, manager of the Lion d'Or, and Larry Bouchard, 34, a customer, were standing in a hallway leading to the street. The assailant was not identified.

Eden Sees H-Bomb Great Deterrent To Big War

LONDON (Reuters)—Prime Minister Eden said Wednesday that the hydrogen bomb is so great a deterrent that large forces with conventional arms no longer have the same significance they once had.

In a speech to a Conservative women's rally here he said these "changed circumstances" should be taken into account in all military planning.
He said that where the ultimate deterrent of the H-bomb is present "large forces confronting each other with all the panoply of gun, and tank and supporting arms have not the same significance as once they had."
"Effective defensive arrangements quite clearly there must be. Precautions must be taken. No one should drop their guard. Now should they be asked to.

"But the deterrent is the determining factor in that regard."
"Now that the significance of this is more widely understood, the time has surely come when all military planning should take account of the changed circumstances which the deterrent itself has brought about."
WAR "UNTHINKABLE"
Eden said that possession of these awful weapons, the great powers must conclude "that conflict between them is unthinkable because it is suicide on a world scale."
Eden's remarks lent credence to recent reports that Britain was on the brink of a reassessment of her whole system of national defence.
The prime minister said he is confident that the conference of Commonwealth prime ministers which opens in London in two weeks will make its special contribution to peace and understanding in the world.
He said he is convinced that Britain had a real opportunity "now and in the next few months" to consolidate all the gains it had made in the last five years.
