

Will Pool Operational Headquarters For Defense

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer
OTTAWA (CP)—A pooled operational headquarters for North America's air defenses will be set up soon with an American in command and a Canadian as his deputy.

Defence Minister Peakes announced Thursday that an integrated command is being set up at Colorado Springs, Colo., where "joint plans and procedures will be worked out in peacetime, ready for immediate use in case of emergency." A similar announcement was made in Washington. General Earle Partridge of the United States Air Force is to head the integrated setup and Air Marshal C. R. Slemmon, 53, chief of Canada's air staff, is to be his deputy.

Air Marshal Hugh Campbell, 49, is to succeed Slemmon as head of the RCAF. A former commander of the Canadian Air Division in Europe, he now is deputy chief of staff (operations) at NATO headquarters in Fontainebleau, France.

The move implies no redeployment of RCAF strength, Mr. Peakes told a press conference, nor does it mean expansion of either the force or its airfield facilities. There would be no deployment of additional United States servicemen to Canadian soil and the USAF components stationed in Newfoundland would be left under RCAF control.

WANT ONE BOSS

The move was designed to enable Canada's and the United States' air forces to work out common procedures while there is time and to vest one man—who could be the American or the Canadian on duty at the time—with the authority to order the continent's air-defense forces into the skies "as soon as a group of planes has been determined as being hostile."

Other aspects of the two countries' air forces would remain national responsibilities. They would continue their own discipline, administration, logistics, communications and unit training. Gen. Partridge's headquarters would be essentially a planning formation, occasionally exercising the two air forces in gigantic maneuvers, but always readying itself against the day when it might have to use its supreme defence power.

Besides the RCAF's nine home-based regular-fighter interceptor squadrons, it would have available the force's vast communications and logistics organization, plus the DEW (Distant Early Warning) and Mid-Canada radar lines and the Pinetree radar-control network.

The defence minister said the role of Canada's projected CF-105 supersonic jet fighter, on which more than $300,000,000 already has been spent, is still to be determined. The CF-105 program will be up for review later this year.

NO ATOMIC WEAPONS

Mr. Peakes added that there is no suggestion that under the new command Canadian fighters will be equipped immediately with atomic weapons.

"This system of integrated operational control and the setting up of a joint headquarters will become effective at an early date," Mr. Peakes said. Air Marshal Slemmon will go to Colorado Springs shortly.

Two years ago Air Marshal Slemmon first suggested the idea publicly during a Montreal visit by a group of aviation writers.

Mr. Peakes said Thursday the thinking had reached the policy stage during the latter months of the Liberal government and that former Defence Minister Campney had considered the proposal. He did not know whether Mr. Campney had placed it before the Liberal government.

WILL INCREASE PRESTIGE

Mr. Peakes said the new headquarters will enable Canada to have more influence on air-defence matters.

He became assistant chief of the air staff in 1944 and in 1948 attended the Imperial Defence College. In 1952 he became the first commandant of the RCAF's air division with the NATO forces in Europe.

He assumed his present position at NATO headquarters in 1955.

Mr. Peakes added that there is no suggestion that under the new command Canadian fighters will be equipped immediately with atomic weapons.

Opening lead—nine of hearts. The success of a great many contracts often depends on how the adverse cards are distributed. There aren't too many hands where the final contract is sure to make regardless of how the defenders' cards are divided.

Sometimes the risk of losing a contract due to bad distribution may at first appear to be remote, but even remote contingencies have to be dealt with properly when they occur.

South was in a fine slam contract and there didn't seem to be much play to the hand until, after a spade lead, the queen of spades was led.

Two of hearts, he led the ace of diamonds and East showed out. The unexpected 3-0 trump division put a new aspect on the play of the hand. There was a club loser to be dealt with as well as West's trump trick. Rather than bank his chances on a spade or club finesse, South chose a suggestion of plays designed to improve his chances well beyond those of either finesse.

After cashing the king of diamonds, he led a spade to the ace and ruffed a spade. A heart to the king was followed by another spade ruff. The ten of hearts was trumped in dummy. West discarded his jack of spades.

Declarer now ruffed the queen of spades and West had the option of overruffing or parting with a club. West, not anxious to be on lead, discarded a club.

The situation was clear. West had four cards left. He was out of spades and hearts and was known to have the queen of diamonds. His remaining three cards therefore had to be clubs.

South led the jack of diamonds, his last trump. West was forced to win with the queen and had no choice but to lead a club up to declarer's K-J-7. So the slam was made.

Two of hearts, he led the ace of diamonds and East showed out. The unexpected 3-0 trump division put a new aspect on the play of the hand. There was a club loser to be dealt with as well as West's trump trick. Rather than bank his chances on a spade or club finesse, South chose a suggestion of plays designed to improve his chances well beyond those of either finesse.

After cashing the king of diamonds, he led a spade to the ace and ruffed a spade. A heart to the king was followed by another spade ruff. The ten of hearts was trumped in dummy. West discarded his jack of spades.

Declarer now ruffed the queen of spades and West had the option of overruffing or parting with a club. West, not anxious to be on lead, discarded a club.

The situation was clear. West had four cards left. He was out of spades and hearts and was known to have the queen of diamonds. His remaining three cards therefore had to be clubs.

South led the jack of diamonds, his last trump. West was forced to win with the queen and had no choice but to lead a club up to declarer's K-J-7. So the slam was made.

As some wag reported the hand to me, the slam was an absolute laydown. South made it without a spade. Bidder in an open game.
