"Hallo, Bart Swannick!" exclaimed Capt. Speer, the leader of the "brigade" of trappers; "here's a young gentleman who has been enquiring after you. Who've you got there?"

"Jean Barteau. He's called Old Frenchy."

"I'm glad you've caught him. Some of us want to have a settlement with him."

"Hold on till I get through with him first." I'm takin' him to Henning's fort. If you are goin' that way, you ort to hurry, 'cause the red skins are trying to take the fort."

The order was given to hurry, and the old hunter mounted Barteau on a horse, and the party started off at a gallop toward the supposed scene of conflict.

In a short time the rapid riding of the band brought them in sight of Henning's fort, and they at once perceived that the plain around it was covered with s vages, who were in pursuit of a mounted white man.

"That's Jeems Musson, shore," muttered Barteau, as he came in view of the scene. "He's got into a scrape, jest as he thort, and now he is bound to be rubbed out. T ar's spunk in him, by thunder! Wal, I reckon that's ihe best thing he could hev done."

The old fellow's last reflection was caused by seeing Musson raise a pistol and shoot himself through the head, before his enemies could seize him. The Blackfeet, at the same moment, frightened by the approaching white men, wheeled and rode off toward the east, leaving the body of Musson lying on the plain.

When the trappers reached the scene of the suicide, the body of Musson was placed on a horse, and the party hastened on to the fort, as it w s growing dark. The gates were thrown open by Major Henning, who welcomed them most cordially. To Jeannette the major was very deferential, assisting her to alight from her horse, and treating her with an unusual tenderness. Mrs. Henning welcomed her with many kind greetings, and was overjoyed at the recovery of Annette.

After breakfast the next morning, when Major Henning and his wife, with Madame Labardie, her children, and George Searle were seated in conversation, Bart Swannick entered the room, bringing in Jean Barteau, whose demeanor now showed that he was thoroughly cowed.

"What do you want, Swannick? Why do you bring that man in here?" asked the major, observing that Madame Labardie shuddered, and drew Annette closer to her side.

"Thar's suthin' I want to git fixed up, major," replied the hunter. "I've got a crooked kind of an idee into my head, and I allow that you an' Old Frenchy kin help me straighten it out."

"What do you mean? What have I to do with that man?"

"More'n you think fur, I reckon. Didn't you loose a leetle gal, some seventy-five or thirty year ago, when you were sogerin' down on the Platte?"

"I did loose a little girl many years ago," eagerly replied the major. "I supposed she was drowned in the Platte."

"I reckon she warn't drowned that time. I war passin' nigh the fort one evenin', when I seed Old Frency here—though he was a young chap then—hurrying down to the river with a little gal in his arms. When he got to the river he tore off some of the gals fixin's and flung 'em into the water. Then he jumped on his hoss with her and rode off like a streek. I war afoot then, and feared to go nigh the fort, 'cause I heerd that you were pressin' mountain men, and it warn't none of my mix, nohow. When I heerd that you had lost a leetle gal, this think got kinder kinked up in my head, and yesterday I allow'd that I had better fetch Old Frenchy in here to you, to straighten it out."

"How was the child dressed?" asked Mrs. Henning.

"I warn't nigh enough to see, 'ceptin' that it had on a mighty purty red dress."

"It was my child! Did you ever learn what became of her?"

"I heerd that Jean Barteau had a girl in St. Louey that he called his'n, and it kinder kinked up in my head that it was the same."

"It was the same! Jeannette, I have felt as a mother toward you since you came to us first, and now I know that you are my child. Thank God, whose ways are too wonderful for us to find out!"

"I mought as well say that you are right on that point," broke in Barteau. "I did hope to hev some ease and comfo't in my old age, but I reckon thar ain't much old age left to me now. You paid a high price for floggin' me, major."

The major was only restrained from inflicting summary punishment upon the offender, by the intercessions of Madame Labardie and Annette; and he finally consented, not only to turn Barteau loose, but to send him away without the knowledge of the trappers.

"Old Frenchy" was never again heard of. It is probable that he soon fell a victim to the fury of the Blackfeet, or to the wrath of some trapper who had a grudge against him.

"There is one thing I am glad of," said George Searle, "I am glad indeed that I shall not be obliged to present to the Reverend Charles such a disreputable grandfather-in-law as old Barteau would have been."

"What do you mean?" inquired the major. "Do you expect to marry Annette."

"That is the point of the joke, sir."

"You had better get my consent. She is very young, and you will have to wait a long time."

George Searle waited only a year, and then he wrote to inform his highly-respectable father that he had married the granddaughter of another highly-respectable gentleman of the old school, named Major Wm. Henning.

[THE END.]

Racy Literature.

A Cheap Watch.—A sailor went to a watchmaker, and presenting a small French watch to him, wished to know how much the repair of it would come to. The watchmaker, after examing it said, "it will be more expence repairing it than its original cost." "I don't mind that," said the tar; "I will wive you double the original cost, for I gave a fellow a blow on the head for it, and if you repair it I will give you two."

"What did you come here after?" inquired Miss Susan Nipper, of a bachelor friend who made her a call when the rest of the people were gone out. "I came to borrow some matches," he meekly replied. "Matches! that's a very likely story. Why don't you make a match? I know what you came for," exclaimed the delighted miss, as she crowded the old bachelor in a corner, "you came to kiss and hug me almost to death, but you shan't—without you are the strongest, and every body knows you are."

A Bridegroom's Faith.—An ignorant fellow, who was about to get married, resolved to make himself perfect in the response of the marriage service; but by mistake he committed the office of baptism for those of riper years; so when the clergyman asked him in the church, "Wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife?" the bridegroom answered in a solemn tone, "I renounce them all." The astonished minister said, "I think you are a fool," to which he replied, "All this I steadfastly believe."

Lost Sheep.—A methodist preacher was travelling in one of the back settlements, and stopped at a cabin, where the old lady received him very kindly. After providing for him, she began to question him. "Stranger, where mought you be from?" "Madam, I reside in Shelby county, Kentucky." "Wall, stranger, no offence, but mought you be doin' up here?" Madam, I am searching for the lost sheep of the tribe of Israel." "John! John!" shouted the old lady, "come rite here this minnit; here's a stranger all the way from Shelby county, Kentucky, a hunting stock, and I'll just bet my life that tangled-haired black ram that's been in our lot all last week is his'n."

How to Test Your Friends.—I weeded my friends," said an eccentric old man, "by hanging a piece of stair-carpet out of my first floor window, with a broker's announcement affixed. It had the desired effect. I soon saw who were my friends. It was like firing a gun near a pigeon-house: they forsook the building at the first report, and I have not had occasion to use the extra flaps of my dining table since."

A Western editor, in speaking of a contemporary who is down with the "fever and shakes," says "the doctor have given him up," which is just what his bail did two years ago, when he was indicted for horse-stealing. Singular coincidence, isn't it?

Agriculture.

Choosing a Location for Life.

The editor of the Maine Farmer says on the subject, that it is certainly an important question to a young man where he shall locate. If he is to be a farmer, we will advise him were not to go. Do not go where the land is poor. Better seek some spot on earth that produces abundantly as the reward of faithful toil. Poor land will keep one always poor. There is an abundance of land everywhere within s few day's travel which can be had at a cheap rate.

Every young wan, as soon as he is cut loose from home, looks around for a place which he can call his own. Some require a longer time than others. Too many young men at this present day are like the lobster, which appears to swim about in fresh ocean for a time before he can decide to make a home among the rocks along the shore. The best part of life is too often squandred in this way, and after a term of years they find themselves without funds to make a home, with habits so fixed or rather unfixed, as almost to forbid their devotion to physical labour. If a man has abundant capital he may look on and see his hired men work, and be delighted with his agriculture machinery, and not be obliged to labour much with his hands. But where a man's hands are his only capital they should be strong as iron.

If a man finds himself broken down by disease, he must seek some employment that will be the least injurious to himself, and hope to recover his health. We do not ordinarily advise such a man to go on to a farm unless he has a competence. For a man with a competency it is the world, especially if he has been hard pressed with meacantile or professional life. Moderate labor is the best antidote for such a man, but it should not be a principal means of support.

Good Advice.—A practical farmer writes: "One of the greatest drawbacks, and I may say the greatest, to our farming interests, is the Yankee idea of doing everything by turns and nothing thoroughly. The practice of changing from one branch of farming to another, as prices and profits very, is a ruinous one. A few years ago wool commanded a high price, and the result was a rush into sheep-keeping. Animals were sold then from five to six dollars, that would be considered of no account now except for their pelts. The buyer knew nothing about sheep, nor where their farmers adapted to the keeping of them; but with wool at a dollar a pound, they could not withstand the temptation to try their luck, which they did, and as they will tell you now, to their sorrow.

So in regard to horses. If a farmer happens to raise a good coalt and succeeds in getting a high price for it, every old broking-down nag in the neighborhood is called into service to raise colts, but as not one in fifty understands the business, just about the proportion succeeds.

A gentleman anxious to ascertain the effect of transplanting at night, made an experiment, with the following result; He transplanted ten cherry trees when in bloom, commencing at four o'clock in the afternoon, and transplanting each one hour, until one in the morning. Those transplanted during the daylight shed their blossoms, producing little or no fruit; while those planted during the darker portion maintained their condition fully. He did the same with ten dwarf pair trees, after the fruit was one-third grown. Those transplanted during the day shed their fruit; those transplanted during the night perfected their crop, and showed no injury from having been removed. With each of these trees he removed some earth with the roots.

Composting Muck.—We cannot too strongly impress upon farmers the great advantage of compos'ing muck with any rank manure. Use night soil, hog manure, hen manure, fish guano, and the mutual action of one upon the other will produce a fertilizer greatly superior to muck alone. The organic matter in muck is very similar to the vegetable matter that makes up the bulk of stable manure, and the addition of a little rank matter containing ammonia will change a load of muck to manure as valuable as that which comes from farmyards.

Worms in Swine.—In answer to an inquire as to the cause and cure of worms in pigs, a correspondent of the Maine Farmer says: "If the writer will take the pains to give his pigs a handful of good rock salt at least twice a week in their food until killing them, I think his pigs will thrive, provided he gives them enough to eat. The cause of pigs having worms is, I think, the want of the preventive —salt. Pigs hardly ever get any salt except what they get in slops from the kitchen.

☞ The "Jacques Cartier" was imported from MONTREAL in August last, by Mr. George Gardiner, Bedeque. He has been pronounced, by competent judges, to be one of the best and handsomest Stallions ever imported to this Island. He is 6 years old, stands 16 hands high, weighs 1250 lbs., is Jet Black, and was sired by the celebrated thorough bred Canadian Horse "St. Lawrence," one of the fastest horses ever known, and from a Mare sired by an American "Messenger' Horse.

ROBERT GLOVER, Groom.
Summerside, April 8, 1869.

"Flying Frenchman."

THE well-known Entire Horse "FLYING FRENCHMAN," imported from Quebec, is allowed by competent judges to be one of the handsomest and fastest horses on the Island. His stock are numerous, and are very gentle to work or drive. Some of his horses have trotted 3 miles in 9 minutes, and 1 mile in 2.40. As many persons to the Western part of the Island have invited the owner to send him there, he has complied with their requests, and the "Flying Frenchman" will travel for the season on the following route—much the same as that traveled by the "Dexter last year, led by the subscriber:—

Commencing on 1st May, will leave Lot 10, passing through Kildare, Tignish, Nail Pond, Lot 7, O'Leary Road, on to Western Road. This route will be continued for the season.

Terms made known when traveling.

WM. DUNNING.

New London, April 23, 1869.

P. S.—The "Flying Frenchman" will TROT the "Jacques Cartier" or any other Stallion on the Island for 50 Sovereigns.

W. D.

"FARMER'S GLORY."

THE celebrated Entire Horse "FARMER'S GLORY" is already so well known as to need but little recommendation. His stock took the first prize for the best mare in Queen's County, and the best in Prince County, and for the best Stallion for all purposes. He took the first prize from the three Counties from 1852. There has been over 2500 of his stock raised on the Island, and one of them was the fastest horse in New London last winter. Several of his stock have sold for $1000 in gold.

The "Farmer's Glory" will travel for the season on the following route:—Will leave home for Park Corner, Malpeque, New Annan, St. Eleanor's, Miscouche, 15 Point, Egmont Bay, John McNally's, Quagmire, and return home. This route will be continued.

FOR SALE

IN NEW LONDON!

THE subscriber offers for sale the valuable Leasehold Property at present occupied by him, containing 110 acres of excellent Land, 45 acres of which are cleared and in a high state of cultivation; the remainder is covered with hard wood, pine, spruce, and longers in abundance. The lease is for 999 years. The greater part of the clearance has been covered with Mussel mud. There are on the Premises a Dwelling House, 26 by 36, a Barn and other outbuildings, all in good repair. On the back of the Farm there is a small Bay runs in, where an abundance of seaweed can be had. The mud beds are only about 200 yards from the front of the farm. There is a good Orchard and Garden near the house.

The above property is situated in a flourishing settlement, and is considered one of the handsomest farms in New London. It was once owned by the Rev. Dr. Jenkins, from whom it was purchased by the present owner. Any person wanting a good property will do well to inspect the above at an early day.

Grand Diet of Worms,

DISSOLVED BY

WATSON'S SCHOLEDION,

WHICH is offered to the public as a perfectly safe, pleasant and efficacious expeller of Worms from the human system. As this preparation contains no mineral ingredient, the administration of it to young children is not followed by the dangerous and, in many cases, fatal consequences resulting from the use of many of the Vermifuges at present before the public.

A compliance with the directions accompanying it will prove it deserves the character claimed for it above, while the promptness and painless character of its action render it the cheapest and safest remedy for worms hitherto discovered.

Wool! Wool!

THE STANFIELD WOOLEN MILLS at TRYON, having been thoroughly reconstructed and enlarged by additional machinery and Steam Power, will continue to manufacture Cloth from custom wool as heretofore, and at the usual rates. Having doubled their facilities for manufacturing, and procured skillful operatives for every department, the Company feel confident of giving their customers greater satisfaction generally, by manufacturing a better quality of Cloth, and making quicker returns for wool left with them. In addition to the various kinds of CLOTH previously made, they are manufacturing SEVERAL NEW STYLES FOR MEN'S WEAR, and full width Blanketing.

☞ Wool, which must be clean washed, free of mats and coarse locks, and of good quality, may be left at Hon. H. J. Callbeck's, Charlottetown, or at the mill.
