Town On Conception Bay Faces Population Upsurge

By DAVE BUTLER

HARBOR GRACE, Nfld. (CP) — A change in status from a quiet community of only 3,000 people to a bustling industrial centre with nearly 20,000 people may be in the future of this Conception Bay town.

Harbor Grace had changed little in the past 100 years. Then in February this year North-American Fish Industries Limited, the town's only major industry, announced it had sold controlling interest to the English firm of Birdseye Foods, a subsidiary of the Unilever Corporation.

Some of the figures put forward by the company, and by the provincial government, are enough to stagger the imagination of the people here. An initial investment of $31,000,000 on research and development alone will be made in the first five years.

Three other smaller communities are also to be affected by the development, but not to the extent of Harbor Grace. Birdseye will also take over plants previously owned by North-Eastern at Fermeuse, Old Perlican and Port de Grave. North-Eastern at Fermeuse, Old Perlican and Port de Grave all on the Avalon Peninsula.

The effect on the economy of the area, which now suffers greatly from seasonal unemployment, will be so extensive that the town will have to bring in workers just to man the plant and the new ships to be built by the company.

WORK SEASONAL

The town now has only about 100 people working full time, excluding those employed with public services. Another 455 get four months of steady work with the fish plant and about 1,300 are employed steadily for six weeks.

At present, the North-Eastern operation pays out $850,000 to labor and about $1,200,000 in fish purchases. Within five years, the new operators forecast an outlay of $4,200,000 in labor payments and $7,200,000 in fish purchases.

After the plants have received a $1,000,000 renovation, and face-lifting the number of employees will be raised from an average of 600 on a season basis, to more than 1,700. Another 500 men will be needed to man the 25 new steel trawlers the company plans to build to bring raw material to the mill.

More men will be required to form the crew of a new $4,000,000 reefer ship (refrigerated carrier) the company plans to build.

Export values are expected to increase from $3,250,000 to $18,000,000 and fish purchases from 41,000,000 pounds to 180,000,000 pounds. The production of fillets will proportionately climb from 19,00,000 pounds to 75,000,000 annually.

GOVERNMENT KEEN

The Newfoundland government has gone all out to make the proposition attractive to the English firm. Some of the items of assisance which the firm has asked for and which the government has at least unofficially, accepted are:

1. Preferential treatment in picking graduates from College o Fisheries in St. John's.
2. Providing a ship repair facilities. The firm feels that the government should at least support some form of ship repair facilities considered by the firm to be a "vital" issue.
3. Paving of roads leading from highways to plants.
4. Experimental trawling. The firm asks that the government make a grant of about $150,000 for operation of several trawlers of different nationalities to determine, for the firm, the right type of vessel for the area and to gain more detailed knowledge of the fishing rounds available.
5. Development of inshore fishery. Reasonable assurance from government that the necessary funds would be made available for implementing recommendations of company regarding the introduction of new techniques into the inshore fishery.
6. Assurance of immunity from government support of "other fisheries activity" in the company's areas of activity.

Quebec Minister Critical Of Noranda Mines Limited

ROUYN, Que. (CP) — Rene Leesque, Quebec natural resources minister, said here Noranda Mines Limited should "take advantage of its remaining time to learn how to become civilized."

He told about 500 union members the Quebec government will be forced to find other structures for exploiting mines in the province unless the mining industry "becomes civilized."

"The industry is still in the middle ages from a social point of views," Mr. Levesque said, addressing the miners as part of a tour of a number of mines in northwestern Quebec.

He said union members should concentrate their forces in such a way as to become equal to mine owners' power.

The unions have a long way to go to become equal to the pwer of the big mining companies, he said, "an industry which is one of those paying the lowest wages."

WILL HAVE TO PAY

If the unions become powerful, "the mining companies will be forced to pay good wages," Mr. Levesque said. "If the employees of mines in northwestern Quebec are not paid as much as those in Ontario, it is because their unions are not as powerful."

He said the Quebec government is studying the possibility of setting up an exploration firm to assure the growth of mines in Quebec and the participation of the government in their exploitation.

In that way, we could cease being visitors in our own house and become a people participating in our own property."

Again turning to Noranda Mines, he said the firm "totally lacks a sense of dignity."

"It is incredible," Mr. Levesque said, "that Quebecers are forced to have contracts, on which their lives depend, translated into their own language."

He was referring to terms of a safety contract signed between the company and its employees which he said is completely in English.

"This is shocking and is going to be stopped," he said.

Jean Beaudry, assistant director of the United Metal Workers in Quebec, told the same meeting the Quebec government should expropriate mines in the province.

Opening lead—king of spades.

Many contracts fail because of an unlucky division of the defenders' cards, but some of these hands can be salvaged by careful play.

For an example of such a case, examine the accompanying hand. If you look at all four hands, it would seem that South must go down one. The hearts are divided 3-1, so that a trump trick must be lost, and the club finesse, if attempted, fails. These two losers, on top of the obvious two spade losers, make it appear that declarer cannot However, if South plays the hand properly, he makes the contract. Furthermore, the right method of play does not depend on seeing the East-West cards; a perfectly normal line of play will do the job.

As soon as dummy comes down, South sees that the contract appears to depend on either a favorable trump division or a favorable location of the king of clubs. He has no control over how the trumps are divided, but he does have some control over the possible loss of a club trick.

So, in an effort to avoid a club finesse — which might lose —declarer wins the king of spades and then cashes the ace of diamonds and A-K of hearts. Learning that East has a sure trump trick, he cashes the king of diamonds, discarding a spade from dummy, and then ruffs the jack in dummy.

The stage is now set for the winning play. Ignoring the club finesse, he leads a spade from dummy. West takes his Q-J all right, but then discovers that, regardless of what he returns, South makes the contract.

West concedes a ruff and discard if he plays a spade or a diamond; his other choice is a club return. Whatever he does, South gains a trick and makes the contract. The club finesse, attractive though it is, never en-

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
