Liquid-Filled Carton Is Tossed In Commons

OTTAWA (CP) — A small carton filled with a thick red liquid was thrown onto the floor of the House of Commons from a gallery Monday as George Nowlan (PC Digby-Annapolis-Kings) was speaking in the flag debate.

The carton landed in front of Mr. Nowlan near the clerk's table and liquid spilled a red gash across the green-carpeted floor. Several members on both sides of the House were splashed.

The Commons protective staff apprehended a young man almost immediately. He was held for questioning.

The liquid appeared to be a water-soluble paint. Solicitor-General J. Watson MacNaught said he was able to wash it off his suit.

Witnesses said the man, carrying a black briefcase, stood for a moment in the opposition members' gallery on the west side of the chamber after throwing what appeared to be a wax-coated quart milk carton.

The Commons protective staff quickly grabbed him and escorted him to the protective staff office on the ground floor of the Parliament building.

Yvon Dupuis, minister without portfolio, came to the protective office and went in. A few minutes later he left, telling reporters: "For your information he is not a French Canadian."

A few minutes later Mr. Dupuis returned to the protection office.

Mr. Nowlan said he was not involved in the incident. He said he was in the gallery at the time and saw the man throw the carton.

St. Dunstons Sacred Art Display Concludes In Two Weeks

The exhibition of contemporary sacred art, which has been on display at St. Dunstons University since early in July, will conclude in two weeks time.

It was learned from university authorities last night that several unidirectional people have visited the exhibition, the first such display ever held in Prince Edward Island.

The exhibition includes paintings, sculpture in wood, stone and ceramics, displays of church vessels, an altar, religious vestments, several stained glass windows, tapestries, linoleum cuts, a batik, and a number of objects in wrought iron.

Some of the exhibits are most unusual in concept and design, but it is in keeping with the spirit of the exhibitors. Very Rev. G.A. Macdonald, president of St. Dunstons, said, "We intended the exhibition to be startling and controversial. We hope we have achieved that. We would never have spent our energies and money to bring together works so common and acceptable that they would not have elicited controversy, excitement and disagreement."

A recent visitor to the exhibition was Mrs. Samuel Zack of Toronto, who is said to own the best private modern art collection in Canada. Among her works, valued at over $100,000, Mrs. Zack includes 17 Picasso and 22 Renoirs.

The names of the exhibitors read like a "Who's Who" of Canadian art. Many of them were born outside Canada but have moved here in recent years. Eva Landori, Julius Morsos, Dora de Pedero-Hunt and Sarah Bap-Maran were born in Budapest, Hungary. They studied there, in Paris and in London and have held exhibits in such places as London, Rome, Vienna, Stockholm, Paris, Brussels and Toronto.

Other artists who brought their talents to Canada from their native countries include Maurice Assier, Algeria, who has exhibited in Algeria, Paris and Rome; Walter Faber, Switzerland; Roy Leadbeater, Cecil C. Richards and Gerald P. Troke, England; George Swinow and Ernestine Tahed, Austria; and Anton Van Dalem, Amsterdam.

Also Krystyna Sadowska of Poland who studied in Warsaw, London and Paris and has exhibited in Paris, London, Edinburgh, New York, Washington, Syracuse, Warsaw, Rio de Janeiro, Lausanne, the Brussels World Fair and many Canadian cities winning several medals from their native countries.

Other artists who brought their talents to Canada from their native countries include Maurice Assier, Algeria, who has exhibited in Algeria, Paris and Rome; Walter Faber, Switzerland; Roy Leadbeater, Cecil C. ## Centennial Day Held At Victoria

Centennial Celebrations at their best were held yesterday as the people of Victoria and visitors celebrated the 1864 meeting of the Fathers of Confederation on Prince Edward Island.

Despite the inclement weather in the morning, the village committee carried out all planned events on the program and were blessed with clearing weather during the afternoon.

During the morning, the baby carriage, baby carriage and dog parade and a soap box derby were run off, although things were slightly disturbed by the rain.

Rotary Speaker Urges Child Music Training

Rotarian Earl Terry, professor at the University of Western Ontario and founder-conductor of the Earl Terry Singers who appeared here recently with outstanding success, was guest speaker at the weekly luncheon meeting of Rotary held at the Charlottetown Hotel yesterday.

"Music, through no conscious effort on our part, elevates to a higher richer life, better living in fulfilling human needs," the speaker said. "Strictly in need is high on the list of boys and girls who do things in a musical atmosphere. It is generally agreed that we should have music in our civilization."

Referring to an early trend towards enlivening the singing in churches by the introduction of young people in the choirs, the speaker said that in 1888 the churches in Boston brought in children from the school of musical employment. "Music should be made available to every boy and girl," he said.

The speaker urged that amateur music be developed in some form of music, band, orchestra, church choir or any musical employment. Introduced by chairman Astair MacLeod, the speaker phrase, "I spy a stranger," When that phrase is pronounced by a member, the Commons galleries are supposed to be cleared.

Jean-Eudes Dubé (L.) — Resignation — Madawaska's a 1-d afterwards four red envelopes suddenly appeared on his desk, and "I thought it was blood stained," he felt his face for a wound, then realized the fluid had dropped from above.
