ADAM BEDE.

CHAPTER VII.

Hetty dropped the prettiest little court-sey, and stole a half shy half coquettish glance at him as she said: "Yes, thank you sir."

"And you must bring all your children, you know, Mrs. Poyser, your little Totty, as well as the boys. I want all the youngest children on the estate to be there; all those who will be fine young men and women when I'm a bald old fellow."

"Oh, dear sir, that'll be a long time first," said Mrs. Poyser, quite overcome at the young Squire's speaking so little of himself, and king moher recount this remarkable specimen of high-born humor.

The Captain was thought to be 'very full of his jokes,' and was a great favorite throughout the estate on account of his manners. Every tenant was quite sure things would be different when the reins got into his hands; there was to be a millennial abundance of new gates, allowances of lime, and returns of ten per cent.

"But where is Totty to-day?" he asked.
'I want to see her.'

"Where is the little one, Hetty?" said Mrs.
Poyser. "She came in here not long ago."
'I don't know.' She went into the brew-house to Nancy, I think.

The proud mother, unable to resist the temptation to show her Totty, passed at once into the back kitchen in search of her, not, however, without misgivings lest something should have happened to render her person and attire unfit for presentation.

"And you carry the butter to market when you've made it?" said the Captain to Hetty meanwhile.

"Oh, no, sir; not when it's so heavy; I'm not strong enough to carry it. Alick takes it on horseback."

"No, I'm sure your pretty arms were never meant for such heavy weights. But you go out to walk sometimes these pleasant evenings, don't you? Why don't you have a walk in the Chase sometimes, now it is so green and pleasant? I hardly ever see you anywhere except at home and at church."

"Aunt doesn't like me to go a walking only when I'm going somewhere," said Hetty. "But I go through the Chase sometimes."

"And don't you ever go to see Mrs. Best, the housekeeper? I think I saw you once in the housekeeper's room."

"It isn't Mrs. Best, it's Mrs. Pemfret, the lady's maid, as I go to see. She's teaching me tent-stitch and the lace-mending. I'm going to tea with her to-morrow afternoon."

The reason why there had been space for this tete a tete can only be known by looking into the back kitchen, where Totty had been discovered rubbing a stray blue-bag against her nose, and in the same moment allowing some liberal indigo drops to fall on her afternoon pinafore. But now she appeared holding her mother's hand—the end of her round nose rather shiny from a recent and hurried application of soap and water.

"Here she is," said the Captain, lifting her up and setting her on the low stone shelf. Here's Totty! By-the-by, what's her other name? She wasn't christened Totty."

"Oh, sir, we call her sadly out of her name. Charlotte's her christened name.
It's a name I Mr. Poyser's family; his grandmother was named Charlotte. But we began by calling her Lotty, and now it's got to Totty. To be sure it's more like a name for a dog than a Christian child."

"Totty's a capital name. Why, she looks like a Totty. Has she got a pocket on?" said the Captain, feeling in his own waistcoat pockets.

Totty immediately with great gravity lifted up her frock, and showed a tiny pink pocket at present in a state of collapse.

"It do' notin in it," she said, as she looked down at it very earnestly.

"Not what a pity! such a pretty pocket.
Well, I think I've got some things in mine that will make a pretty jingle in it. Yes!
I declare I've got five little round silver things, and hear what a pretty noise they make in Totty's pink pocket." Here he shook the pocket with the five sixpences in it, and Totty showed her teeth and wrinkled her nose in great glee; but divining that there was nothing more to be got by staying, she jumped off the shelf and ran away to jingle her pocket in the hearing of Nancy, while her mother called after her, "Oh, for shame, you naughty gell! not to thank the Captain for what he has given you. I'm sure, sir, it's very kind of you; but she's spoiled shameful; her father won't have her said nay in any thing, and there's no managing her. It's being the youngest, and th' only gell."

"Oh, she's a funny little fatty; I wouldn't have her different. But I must be going now, for I suppose the Rector is waiting for me."

With a 'good-bye,' a bright glance, and a bow to Hetty, Arthur left the dairy. But he was mistaken in imagining himself waited for. The Rector had been so much interested in his conversation with Dinah, that he would not have chosen to close it earlier; and you shall hear now what they had been saying to each other.
