Sees Campaign Of Several Months In Korean War

By J.M. ROBERTS, Jr. (Associated Press News Analyst)

Alternating reports of success and failure of the Allied forces in Korea serve merely to record the ups and downs of a campaign which is just beginning.

It is notable that U.S. Defence Department observers have gone out of their way to warn against over-optimism.

More and more units will have to be committed piecemeal to the delaying action, and it would be too optimistic to believe that they will not be gradually enveloped and largely lost.

Nor is it to be too confidently expected that the Allied build-up in South Korea will be permitted to proceed without interference in other quarters.

Just as Russia has gradually forced the Allies to spread their economic resistance more and more thinly around the whole world, so she may force the thinning of military resistance.

There is beginning to be talk about use of the A-bomb to "end it all quickly." But most of it seems to come from people who are only vaguely aware of the uses of the bomb and of the Korean war theatre.

While there has been talk of using the A-bomb for tactical purposes, it remains primarily a strategic weapon. The Korean fighting is primarily tactical, with small troop concentrations on which conventional air power is just as effective — when the weather permits its use — and with the North Korean "support area" offering little or no industrial concentration as a target.

In fact, the "obsolete" propeller fighters and fighter bombers are proving themselves most valuable in this type of warfare.

It appears more and more that ground strength will be the decisive factor. It is notable how quickly Gen. MacArthur learned that air power was not the whole answer. In that view, it seemed likely that not even the beginning of the end will be seen in Korea before September, and probably it will be later.

The tour, sponsored by a prominent manufacturer, is to establish better international understanding. The boys leaving here were: Austin Murphy, St. John's; Douglas Holmes, Fortuna, Nfld.; John Sinclair, Halifax; Randall Skelings, Windsor; Roy MacKeen, Sydney, N.S.; Fred Drummond, Saint John; John Smith, Miramichi, N.B.; Robert Nelson, Charlottetown; Ronald Lear, Summerside, P. E. I.

U. K. Plans To End Rationing Of Soap

LONDON, July 10—(Reuters)—The Government today announced that soap rationing will end Sept. 10. Food Minister Maurice Webb, making the announcement in Parliament, said derationing had been made possible by the substantial recent increase in raw materials. Price controls on soap will continue. Members burst into laughter when Conservative Sir Thomas Moore asked whether the children had been consulted about the decision.

BRUSSELS, Belgium, July 7—(AP)—The Brussels newspaper Le Libre Belgique said today King Leopold's wife, the Princess de Rethy, is expecting a child early next year. The newspaper said she would be unable to attend the funeral of her mother, Mrs. Henri Baelis, who died at Ostend yesterday.

Inquiry Into Fishermen's Loan Board Operations

A hearing of the Commission inquiring into the operations of the Fishermen's Loan Board was held yesterday at Stella Maris Hall, North Rustico, with Judge J. E. DesRoches, Commissioner presiding. The following witnesses were examined by Mr. J. O. C. Campbell, K.C., Commission counsel: Messrs. Joseph L. Peters, Fred C. Gallant, Alfred Gallant, Angus Blaquiere, Fileas Gallant, Richard Gauthier, George W. Rollings, James C. Blaquiere, Peter Henry Blaquiere, Ferdinand Dorette, and Bertram Blaquiere. At the adjournment of the hearing, the Commissioner announced that the next sitting would be on Monday, April 17, at 10 a.m. at Mount Carmel.

Following is a transcript of the evidence taken yesterday:

Joseph L. Peters Sworn

Q: Mr. Peters, you're a fisherman at Rustico? A: Yes.

Q: You have had dealings with the Fishermen's Loan Board and you were always under the impression that these were loans rather than relief? A: I was.

Q: You have received loans from the Fishermen's Loan Board? A: Yes, a couple of small loans and a bigger one later.

Q: You had in the first instance gotten a couple of small loans—by small loans we mean under $75.00. A: Yes—they were forty to sixty dollars.

Q: Were these incorporated into a larger loan later? A: Yes, added up together.

Q: Those you had to pay off by deductions from your gasoline tax? A: Yes.

Q: You never at any time understood that they were anything but loans? A: I didn't think they would collect off gasoline if they were a donation.

Q: That's one point. Were there there any irregularities that you know of or heard of? A: No, there wasn't any that I know of.

Q: That will be all, Mr. Peters.

Fred C. Gallant Sworn

Q: Are you a fisherman in Rustico area? A: That's right.

Q: In our talk previously you had spoke and mentioned that you had had some loans. A: Yes.

Q: When did you get them? A: Before the war.

Q: Were they small loans?—you don't have to give the exact amounts. A: The largest was $70.00.

Q: Some as low as $20.00? A: I'm not just sure. One was $70.00, one was $50 and I think there were two smaller ones.

Q: You said before that it was the general impression of all fishermen—about the time you were getting those smaller amounts—that they were to help the fishermen out. A: It was the usual thing to think of them that way. You couldn't swear it was a grant.

Q: They must have been put through as loans—a note was taken for them. The primary object was to help the fisherman out. A: Yes.

Q: There was some mention that some of the loans were so small they wouldn't buy much gear. A: At such a time of year—say in February—you couldn't buy gear anyway.

Q: You heard some talk about elections? A: I suppose so—in Rustico.

Q: Were more loans applied for around election time? A: Talk was around that some people were getting loans who had never wet a line.

Q: I was going to suggest—possibly the fact of more loans around election time—one would assume that that would be from the fisherman's point of view in any event, the time to go and get a loan.

Thank you very much Mr. Gallant.

Alfred Gallant Sworn

Q: Perhaps you could tell us what you know about fishermen's loans. A: I got one loan, I think it was in '39 for $300.00 and I certainly appreciated the loan. Had a hard time to get it. Made two or three trips to Charlottetown. Mr. Cox was chairman of the Loan Board. After some difficulty I got it with the understanding that I had to pay it back.

Previous to that I got two small loans—$25 and $40. I just don't know the amount—the three of them were put together and I just paid off with my gasoline rate.

Q: Sometimes I could get off with paying only $15.00 or $20.00 off the rebate. When I got the loans I was under the impression that they had to be paid back.

Q: When you got the larger loan, the smaller ones were put in with it and you have been paying them altogether? A: Paying every year. In fact I don't owe very much now. I am not in a position to make any definite statement, but it appears there was a lot of money given out to people that never put their foot inside a boat.

Q: You would say that there was not enough investigation made of people before giving them a loan? A: The money was given out so they could buy bicycles.

Q: What you mean is that money given out for loans would find its way into the purchasing of bicycles? A: I couldn't swear to that.

Q: You wouldn't suggest that any large amount went the wrong way? A: No, just some of the cases. In general fishermen's loans were for fishermen's gear—those small loans, I didn't feel that they were very much benefit to a fisherman. The loan of $300.00—I could do something with it. I purchased gear with it and it was the means of putting me on my feet.

Q: That's fine, Mr. Gallant, thank you very much.

Angus Blaquiere Sworn

Q: Tell us what you have to say about fishermen's loans. A: I got a couple of loans—one for $150.00, two for $40.00—and always had it in my mind I had to pay it. They were loans.

Q: Not too many fishermen squandered it around? A: No.

Q: Fairly well used? A: Yes. That's about all I have to say.

Fileas Gallant Sworn

Q: Are you a fisherman of North Rustico? A: Yes.

Q: What have you to say? A: I got a couple of small loans and signed a couple of notes.

Q: Was that before the war? A: Oh yes.

Q: That would be about '36, '37 or '38—what did you consider the loan were? A: They come up to around $75 or $80 so I had to pay them back. There were a couple of notes. One note was signed by someone else with my name for around $30.00.

Q: Do you know what happened? A: No, I don't.

Q: You paid the other ones? A: Paid some of them.

Q: Would you express any opinion as to whether you thought they were relief? A: After the storm?

Q: The storm relief wasn't supposed to be paid back. A: I never made any loans in later years.

Q: Thank you very much. That's all.

Richard Gauthier Sworn

Q: What have you to say about fishermen's loans? A: I made three loans—all small loans, paying them back. When I got the loans I firmly believed that it was for relief; I only used two for fishing gear—the other I used for groceries.

Q: What about before the war—it was a pretty hard time? A: Yes it was.

Q: Even without the storm, it was a hard time. A: Yes, I know we lost our nets in that storm.

Q: The substance of your evidence is that although you have been able to pay back on these old loans, some of you are firmly convinced in your own minds it was a form of relief? A: Understood I would never be bothered for payment.

Q: There are two types of irregularities mentioned—fishermen getting money in the guise of loans, and a little more rush at election time for loans—know anything of that, or any knowledge of that? A: No, no knowledge of that.

District W. I. Convention Held At Lot 65 Hall

The twenty-third annual convention of Women's Institutes held recently at Lot 65 Hall, was largely attended. With the president, Mrs. Matthias Callaghan presiding, the meeting opened by singing the Institute Ode. The visiting delegates were very warmly welcomed by Mrs. Matthias Murray and to this welcome Mrs. Baden Balderston made a very fitting reply. A splendid report was given by the work done in their respective districts during the year. Miss Clapp of the Provincial Sanatorium gave a most instructive talk and a wonderful exhibition of handicraft made by patients in the Sanatorium. Miss Mona Wilson gave an interesting talk on Dental Health. The nominating committee consisted of Mrs. J. W. MacKenzie, Miss Addie Halliwell, and Mrs. Walter Coady named the officers for next year's annual convention at Rose Valley as follows: President — Mrs. James MacIntosh; Secretary — Mrs. J. W. MacKenzie.

The lunch hour was presided over by the ladies of Emyvale and a very pleasant intermission was enjoyed by all.

At the evening meeting the hall was filled to capacity and a splendid program was carried out as follows: Song; duet by Mrs. Amos Callaghan and Mrs. Lawrence Murray; Music selection by Miss McElroy; duet by Alice and Martina McCloskey. Instrumental music by Mrs. Lawrence Murray, Miss Hilda Gallant, and Mrs. Eugene McQuillan; duet by Miss Patricia Clarkin and Mrs. Eugene McQuillan; solo by Leo Gallant.

The supervisor, Mrs. Robin, gave an instructive talk on many phases of Institute work. Dr. Lloyd Shaw spoke on education.

Mr. Martin showed two interesting films, one depicting the beauties of P. E. I., the other illustrating the advantage of films in the school. The Resolutions Committee brought in a number of resolutions which were read and approved. The meeting was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem.

Commends Island Progress In Seed Potato Standards, Dairy Farm Production

"The ultimate purpose of the agricultural scientist and research worker is not to make the farmer more prosperous, nor is it to find ways to pile up ever increasing surpluses of food," said Sir William Ogg, director of the Rothamsted Experimental Station in England, at Rotary luncheon yesterday.

But our purpose is to discover ways of increasing our farm efficiency so that the farmer gains by increased production and reduced costs and the industrial worker gains by being able to purchase cheaper food."

Sir William said his party of scientists had not come to Canada on numerous occasions since he was an agricultural student here, and as Director of the MacAulay Institute on Soil Fertility, he had a very close connection and had retained his association with earlier friends and continually made new ones.

He remarked that of the seven members of his delegation, four were from Scotland, two were from the North of England and as close to Scotland as they could get, and the other's father, and grandfather was from Scotland. He said he strongly suspected that there was a scattering of his countrymen in this Province.
