The Eye of a Child.
Who can explain or fathom the wondrous instinct of the child? Lying in the arms of its nurse, in its carriage or elsewhere, its large, round, wondering eyes roam over a sea of faces till suddenly its features break into a sweet smile, a baby laugh dances in its eyes, perhaps the tiny hands are extended, and the little body gives a bound as though it would throw itself through space. What has happened? It has recognized a friend, nothing more and no less. It makes no mistake. Wiser, perchance, in that moment of inexperienced helplessness than it will be years afterward, when the world and its inmates have been studied in the light of instruction and experience, its love offering is seldom if ever mistakenly presented. By what power is this child love directed? By what subtle influence does it see and know what in after years it may strive in vain to discern?—Good Housekeeping.

No Wonder.
And the "peach" fell with a dull sickening thud to the ground. But, remember, she was just learning to ride.—New York Journal

Rev. Dogood—My good man, you should think of your soul's welfare. Where will you spend eternity? Remember, we are here but for a day, and then we are gone.
Bill the Brute (with ten years to serve)—You may be here for a day, and then gone. I ain't.—New York Journal

The Fourth.
"Benny," said Mr. Bloomer, "if George Washington is the first in the hearts of his countrymen, who comes second?"
"I don't know about that," replied Benny, "but Independence day is the Fourth."—Harper's Bazar.

It is one of the ironies of life that everything seems to go wrong when a fellow is trying to show off.—Washington Democrat.
To run up stairs is about as silly a way to shorten one's life as was ever practiced.—Home Visitor.

He Was So Patient.
"Patience, my dear, patience," said Harkins blandly to his wife one morning at the breakfast table when she spoke a trifle sharply to one of the children for dropping his bread, buttered side down, on the cloth. "You know that accidents will happen, and we were children ourselves once. I'm sure that Bertie didn't mean to—great Jupiter! There goes Harold's glass of milk all over my new trousers. If I don't—oh, you'd better skedaddle from the table, young man! It beats the eternal—Get a cloth, somebody, and clean up this mess. It beats thunder that a man can't sit at his own table without being tormented and bedeviled as I am every time I try to eat a meal under my roof. Look at those pants—absolutely and utterly ruined. Just wait until I get hold of that boy. Just wait until I lay hands on him and I'll teach him how to deliberately throw a glass of milk over a $14 pair of trousers. Don't tell me that he didn't mean to do it. He came to the table with the intention of doing it, and I—I—well, you'll see what I'll do when I get hold of him."—New York Sunday World.

From Her Viewpoint.
"You seem to rather avoid Mr. Good-man of late," said her mother.
"I admit it," she replied. "He's not at all interesting."
"What's the matter with him?" persisted her mother. "He impresses me as being a very deserving young man."
"But he's so good," she returned petulantly.
"Good?"
"Yes. I can't find anything to reform."—Chicago Post.

Foiling the Fool Killer.
"Who is that man who laughs ecstatically every time a wave causes the ship to lean to one side?" asked the passenger on an excursion steamer.
"He thinks he's doing it," replied the captain. "We bring him along to keep him from causing any real damage. He's the man who rocks the boat."—Washington Star.

Not Interfered With.
Mrs. Watts—Doesn't it make you envious to read of that woman who washed out over $10,000 in gold dust at odd times, between her household duties?
Mrs. Potts—Oh, it ought to have been easy enough. She had no hired girl to take up her time.—Indianapolis Journal.

The Pleasing Part.
"What do you regard as the most important event of the century?" asked the philosopher.
"Well," answered the wheelman, "the finish is about as satisfactory as any part of the run."—New York Truth.

Too Realistic.
"What was that disturbance at the theater last night?"
"The people in the play had ice cream in one act and the whole audience broke loose and climbed on the stage."—Chicago Record.
