What is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food?

A REMARKABLE APPEAL

A remarkable appeal from China's Emperor to Queen Victoria, practically requesting union against the treaty powers, was made public in a Parliamentary paper on China. The document, which is dated Peking, July 3, is most adroitly worded, with a view to rousing British fears as to the fate of their great trade in the East. After telling of the disorders and lamenting the attack on the Taku forts, the message says:

"In consideration of the fact that of the foreign commerce of China more than seventy per cent, belongs to England, that the Chinese traffic is lower than that of any other country, and the restrictions thereon fewer, British merchants have, during the last few decades, maintained relations with Chinese merchants at ports as harmonious as if both were members of the same family. But now complications have arisen, mutual distrust has been engendered, and the situation having thus changed for the worse, it is felt that if China cannot be supported in maintaining her position, foreign nations, looking on so large and populous a country, so rich in natural resources, might be tempted to exploit or despoil it, and percepts differ among themselves with respect to their conflicting interests. It is evident that this will create a state of matters that would not be advantageous to Great Britain, a country which views commerce as her greatest interest.

"China is now engaged in raising men and means to cope with these eventualities, but she feels that if left to herself she might not be equal to the occasion, should it ever arrive, and therefore turns to England in the hope of procuring her good offices in bringing about a settlement of the difficulties that have arisen with the other treaty powers. "The Emperor makes this frank exposure of what is nearest his heart, and hopes this appeal to her Majesty the Queen Empress may be graciously taken under consideration, and an answer vouchsafed at the earliest possible moment."

The Parliamentary paper deals with the period from the murder of the missionary Brooks, on January 4, to July 13. The next to the last written communication from the British Minister at Peking, Sir Claude Macdonald, dated May 21 declares that "the demeanour of the inhabitants of Peking is quite and civil towards foreigners, although from the panic among native Christians it may be assumed the latter are being subjected to threats of violence."

Sir Claude Macdonald was convinced that a few days of heavy rainfall to terminate the drought, which had helped excite the unrest of the country districts, would do more to restore tranquillity than any measure the Chinese or foreign Governments could take. The last letter from Sir Claude Macdonald, dated May 28, refers to the warning to Prince Ching that the Ministers would summons guard unless the Government showed a greater disposition to protect the Legations.

Minister Macdonald admitted that he was somewhat surprised at the calmness with which Prince Ching received the suggestion, which he said had already been made to him. Minister Macdonald adds: "Possibly the Government has awakened to the strength of the Boxers movement, and would be disposed to welcome the additional security afforded by the presence of foreign troops."

The contents of Sir Claude Macdonald's subsequent telegrams are already known. Lord Salisbury notified the viceroys on July 7, through a communication to the Chinese Ministers, that they would be held personally guilty should any in jury be done to Europeans. On July 6 Lord Salisbury gave the southern Viceroys assurances of support.

The papers close with the Chinese Imperial edict of June 29, already published, which was communicated to the Foreign Office June 13.

Mr. H. Babington Smith, writing in the 'National Review', of Ladysmith after the siege, says: "I cannot give a better idea of the isolation of the garrison than by quoting a question asked me by a distinguished officer some weeks after the relief: 'What is this I see so many allusions to in the papers; something about an Absent-minded Beggar?'"

Murray Harbor Notes

The sound of the mowers at work in the hayfields could be heard from all directions today; and although a few begun last week, there is apparently a general "mow in" today. The crop is somewhat lighter than last season's.

Mr. James Brehant, Superintendent of North Attleboro, Mass. High School, arrived here last Wednesday and spent a few days. His wife accompanied him as far as Halifax, where he will join her on his return.

Mr. Norman McAulay arrived home from Boston, Mass., Saturday evening. He will return again in September.

Mrs. D. Jamieson, of Sturgeon, is visiting friends in this place.

On Saturday afternoon a boy named Reynolds, from Murray Harbor North, was making his way up the harbour when a squall struck up and capsized the boat. He managed, however, to keep on the upturned bottom and waved his hat and called out for help. His signal quickly attracted attention, and three boats started to his rescue. Mr. B. Senebaugh, who started from the nearest place, soon reached him and took him from his perilous position and accommodated him in his dory. The boat was towed in, reversed to its former position, and in the evening after the storm abated, he set sail for home. July 30th, 1900.

A Victim of Piles

For 20 Years—A Constant Sufferer From Bleeding and Protruding Piles—Cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

In vain did Mrs. Jas. Brown, of Hintonburgh, near Ottawa, search for a cure for piles. In Europe and America she tried every remedy available, but it remained for Dr. Chase's Ointment to effect a cure.

Mrs. Brown writes:—"I have been a constant sufferer from nearly every form of piles for the last twenty years, and during that time both here and in the Old Country have tried most every remedy.

"I am only doing justice to Dr. Chase's Ointment when I say that I believe it to be the best remedy obtainable for bleeding and protruding piles. I strongly recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to mothers, or indeed to any person suffering from that dread torment—piles."

Physicians and druggists recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment as the one preparation that will never fail to cure piles. It is guaranteed to positively cure piles, whether itching, bleeding, or protruding. 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates and Co., Toronto.
