

Education Facilities Still Inadequate Across Canada

By The Canadian Press
Canadian children return to school after the Labor Day weekend and are expected to tax to the limit the new facilities provided by struggling departments of education.

Most of the new enrolments are in the suburbs of major cities. Half of the 5,000 new students expected in Alberta will enrol in Edmonton schools. The Edmonton board of education has built 197 new classrooms and hired 357 new teachers to handle them.

Three Toronto suburbs — Etobicoke, North York and Scarborough townships — have built 20 new schools and about 100 classroom additions to accommodate the expected 12,000 new students and relieve the existing classroom shortage. More than 150 classrooms have been added to public and separate school facilities in Ottawa. There are 190 new classrooms in greater Winnipeg, and in Quebec province 369 new schools with 1,872 classrooms have been built, mostly in urban areas.

RURAL AREAS SUFFER
The teacher shortage exists in rural more than in urban areas because of the lower salaries offered by rural school boards. Several provinces have dropped some of instruction. Pilot classes for gifted children have been set up in such centres as London, Toronto and Winnipeg and more are being set up as teachers become available.

Miss Zelma Curley who has spent the past three years teaching in British Columbia is spending her holidays with her parents and Mrs. Wilfred Curley, Clermont. She and Miss Jean Donahoe of Etobicoke who also teaches in B.C. motored to the Island. Her brother Leland a teacher in B.C. too, spent ten days visiting his parents.

The Maritime provinces report a lack of teachers. Nova Scotia is suffering the most. H. P. Moffatt, deputy minister of education, said recently the province's public school system "is breaking down and must be replaced." He said the province is short more than 600 of school teachers to meet their commitments and the lack of provincial and municipal finance.

The only major curriculum change is in Ontario where the arithmetic course in grades 1 to 6 has been revised. In Lethbridge, Alberta, the school board is issuing supplements to grammars, and mathematics and other texts in "back to the reading, writing and arithmetic" movement.

Each vessel crew thought the war was under attack and moved to the deck at full speed. A tragedy was averted when an officer on the Chaleur decided to challenge the Madawaska with a light before raking her decks with machine-gun fire, thinking she was a submarine. The Madawaska promptly identified herself.

Anti-submarine patrol continued. By dawn the whole incident appeared to be a false alarm but arrangements were made with the RCAF to send two aircraft from Ottawa to patrol the area. The report: no submarines.

"Many aspects of this incident are comical or even ridiculous as one looks back," says Crossness. "However, it emphasizes the deplorable lack of adequate defence forces and equipment at that time, not to mention the cheerful zeal of the defenders."

Weird Naval Episode Of World War Recalled

By RICHARD DAIGNAULT
Canadian Press Staff Writer
QUEBEC (CP) — The Royal Canadian Navy sat back this month and decided it could chuckle in public about one of the weirdest naval episodes of the Second World War.

But no one smiled at Quebec naval headquarters when a message arrived there at 6:25 p.m. Oct. 18, 1939, saying that two German submarines were proceeding up the St. Lawrence and were about 90 miles east of here.

The August issue of Crossness, the navy's magazine, unravels the story of "combined operations" hastily organized to meet a threat that seemed as unbelievable as the Quebec reserve army proceeding up the St. Lawrence and were about 90 miles east of here.

The hurriedly-called council of war decided the probable target of the sneak assault was the liner Empress of Britain, then being defensively armed for use as a troopship.

Find Women Have Strange Concepts Of Cancer Causes

MONTREAL (CP) — Women have many strange concepts of what causes cancer, the Canadian Cancer Society said Wednesday.

Referring to a recent survey among 3,000 Canadian women, the society said in a statement that one of the most surprising results was that in an "enlightened scientific age 25 per cent of the women questioned thought drinking and immorality were direct causes of cancer."

Another 11 per cent held the view that a knock or a bump or a fall was the main cause of cancer.

"The results of the survey gave the leaders of medical and lay organizations who are fighting cancer many important clues to the effectiveness of their educational program," said the statement. "It was also helpful in determining where more emphasis and work was needed as well as definitely indicating the need for more public education."

W. H. Budden, president of the Quebec division of the society, said:

Malay Nationalism Is Answer To Communism

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaya (CP) — The head of Malaya's first freely elected government Wednesday predicted that the country's Communist terrorists will accept his planned amnesty offer, but warned that Malaya may face new threats from militant communism.

Tengku Abdul Rahman renewed his demands that they be granted independence from Britain within four years and asserted: "The only real answer to communism is nationalism."

Rahman, a royal prince who led a triple alliance of Malays, Chinese and Indians to victory in Malaya's first elections last month, was speaking at the opening of the new legislative assembly.

Under the amnesty terms to be offered next week the Communists will have to prove their loyalty to Malaya, respect legal and constitutional authority and not take part in politics as members of the Malayan Communist party.

If they do not accept, Rahman plans a major offensive to smash them.

Army Gives Advice To Wives Going To Europe

OTTAWA (CP)—Note to army wives going to Europe this fall: Ships don't provide baby sitters.

Further note: Take a can opener, potato masher, tea strainer and egg beater with you. Also skates, if you skate.

Still further note: The army abhors the word "D.A.S.T." (M.O.V.) C.A.L.E. means deputy assistant director supplies and transport (movements) Canadian Army Liaison Establishment.

All these bits of advice are contained in a 26-page booklet issued by the director of army personnel to wives of Canadian soldiers proceeding to Europe to join their husbands.

This fall, the 2nd Canadian Infantry Brigade will relieve the 1st brigade in Germany and serve there for two years. Some 3,300 wives and children will sail for Europe shortly after.
