

THE MONTAGUE Regional High School Winter Carnival variety concert was the most hilarious presented in Montague for some time. In the above picture the two would-be cooks using a favorite cake mix ran into trouble when trying to slice the cake. All other methods failing they resorted to the use of an axe. One of the cooks kept saying "where did we go wrong? I saw it done on TV and it looked good." The two students are Audrey Kennedy and Margie Wilsey.

MRHS's Winter Carnival Said Best Celebration Ever

MONTAGUE — The Montague Regional High School Winter Carnival concluded Saturday following a three-day celebration which is said to be the most successful celebration in the history of the school.

Students said the success of the carnival must go to the teachers who joined in on the celebrations and who took part in every phase of the carnival. They also stood the brunt of the fun and puns lashed at them by the students. One student remarked that the students did not really know the teachers before this carnival and all were high in their praise for the co-operation received from the teaching staff.

On Saturday, the final day, basketball played the major role in the day's events. The Montague boys and girls won over the Souris players while the girls won over the Provincial Vocational Institute. In games between Morrell and Souris, Morrell was the winner, this includes both boys and girls. The Morrell boys also won over PVI.

Bobby Ballum received the trophy for the most valuable player for the MRHS while Christine Martin was given a similar award for the girls.

The carnival concluded with a record hop in the school auditorium in the evening.

Visitors Book Holds Interesting Comments

Comments ranging from barbed to humorous to appreciative can be found in the visitors' book at the P.E.I. Travel Bureau in Charlottetown, where over 9,000 tourists signed their names during the 1964 holiday season.

Most tourist described the Island as "lovely", "pretty", "friendly", "sunny" or "picturesque", although a visitor from Fredericton, N.B., asked "Where is the sun?" and a Tampa, Florida, family, summed up their vacation by writing "cold."

To a Newfoundland family, the Island was "just like Britain", while a New Zealand man wrote, "Reminds me of home."

The book was sprinkled with remarks from French-speaking tourists who wrote "marvellous", "tres beau", "tres joli" and "la belle province".

One of the most curious remarks was from a Windsor, Ont., man. He said simply: "Wonderful rocks."

Most people commented on the flat countryside, trees, and soil. The pages were full of remarks like — "Oooh that red dust", and "it's all red." One young man from Hamilton, Ontario, got a first-hand look at the soil for he wrote proudly —

"Hit - hiked all the way (1200 miles)."

Sometimes, the visitors book took on all the aspects of a weather map. Tourists praised the sun, warm water and the wind. Then on certain days remarks like, "wet," "cold," "foggy", and "I was sick", became evident.

The opinions of visitors who stopped at the Travel Bureau and took the time to sign the register can best be summed up by a bus tour patron from Drummondville, Quebec, who wrote — "We'll be back."

Auto Firm Reports Break, Stolen Car

Fast work by Parkdale Police Saturday night resulted in recovery of a stolen 1960 model vehicle about an hour and a half after the theft was detected.

The vehicle was taken Saturday from the S. R. Johnston Limited garage in Parkdale. The theft was discovered around 10 p.m. Saturday, when one of the firm's salesmen, on returning to the office, found that the building had been entered.

Parkdale police were notified. Later the car was found on Belvedere Avenue. The two occupants of the vehicle will be charged in connection with the theft. One, a juvenile, will appear in juvenile court, and the second will appear in Queens County Magistrate's Court this morning.

The thieves gained entry of the building by smashing a window at the rear of the garage section. They then reached in opened the night lock.

After breaking into the office section, they gained access to the keys with which to start the vehicle.

Fascinating Hobby Leads To Local Museum Display

By ALAN C. HOLMAN

When Jacques Cartier landed on the shores of P.E.I. away back in 1534 the Micmac Indians he encountered here were still living in a stone age culture. They were actually living in the paleolithic or early stone age period.

A collection of the weapons and implements used by the Indians of that time and prior to it, is now on display at the Confederation Art Gallery and Museum.

The collection is the work of Dr. J.H. Maloney and Byron Burns, both of Charlottetown. Both Dr. Maloney and Mr. Burns have long had an interest in Island history, though the doctor couldn't recall exactly when he began to specialize in collecting Indian artifacts.

Mr. Burns can remember when the Indians began to interest him. It was through a front page story of The Guardian on Aug. 15, 1958. The story was about the discovery of an ancient Indian grave near Tradecade.

pointed out that the Indians on the Island never raised any crops or domesticated any animals other than small dogs.

A winter without any appreciable amount of snow often resulted in death by starvation for many of the Indians. They used to live through the winter by hunting caribou, which they did by walking the animal down until he was trapped in the deep snow. This would often take three or four days. If there was not enough snow this course of food became impossible for them to catch.

By reading and studying the old Indian ways of life both Dr. Maloney and Mr. Burns can tell by the geography of a given area in P.E.I. whether it was used by the Indians and therefore if there is a possibility of finding any artifacts.

Some of the sites where the pair have found old Indian pieces are registered in the National Museum in Ottawa and on any items they find in these places they put a catalog number used by the National Museum. On items from sites found on their own and exhibited in the National Museum use their own catalog numbers.

From one site, which they feel must have been an Indian workshop, they found over 400 items.

Both men have many boxes of artifacts in their homes which they haven't had time to classify or catalog. Lack of material is not one of their problems, lack of time is. Both men have been trying to find time to systematically dig one of the sites they found. But this would require three or four days in a row and so far has been impossible for them both to take the same time off.

MADE INDIAN-STYLE In the collection at the gallery there are spears, axes, axes and arrows all with oodles shafts or handles. These were not found by the pair, just the stone heads for them were.

ANCIENT HONOR Britain's present Duke of Norfolk is the 16th of the line created in 1483, one of the oldest dukedoms in the country.

THEFTS Superintendent A.S. McNeil stated last night members of his force had taken the keys from seven cars and three trucks as owners had left an open invitation to steal them.

RCMP also arrested two motorists on charges of driving while impaired.

FAMOUS FOR BRANDED INSPECTED STEAKS ZAKES GOOD OR MONEY BACK

They made the handles and shafts and fastened the stone pieces to them with leather thong the same as the Indians did centuries ago.

The Maloney-Burns collection of Micmac and pre-Micmac (both feel some of the pieces were used by the people who were here before the Micmacs, about 700 B.C.) will be on display at the Confederation Art Gallery and Museum until the end of the month.
