

A Good Sermon.

"He that hath tasted the bitterness of sin will fear to commit it; and he that hath felt the sweetness of mercy will fear to offend it."—Charnock

It should be brief, if lengthy it will steep our hearts in apathy, our eyes in sleep. The hail will wash, the chapel longer dose. Attention flag, and memory's portals close.

It should be warm—a living altar coal. To melt the icy heart and thaw the soul; A lifeless, dull harangue, however read. Will never rouse the soul or raise the dead.

It should be simple, practical and clear. No fine-spun theory to please the ear; No curious ruse to tickle lettered pride. To leave the poor and plain unoffended.

It should be tender and affectionate. And His warm'ning words to lost Salem's fate; The fiery law, with words of love allayed. Will sweetly warm and awfully persuade.
