Opening lead—two of diamonds. Sam Fry, Jr. (South) was playing with Harry Fishbein in the 1954 Summer National Championships in Washington. They were using weak two bids, reserving the two club bids as forcing bids. Fishbein's two diamond bid was a negative response, but the leap to three notrump announced he had some scattered values, through not enough for an initial affirmative response. Fry, naturally enough, went on to the slam. The six contract is easy enough to beat with 52 cards exposed, but Fry wound up making the hand by pulling one of the greatest swindles on record.

West dealt a difficult choice of opening leads and came out with the diamond lead which gave Fry a chance to operate. It was at once apparent the slam depended on the heart finesse, since there was a spade loser to start with. The problem was to try to make the hand even if the heart finesse lost. The situation was sized up quickly by declarer when he played the queen of diamonds from dummy faster than you can say Sam Fry.

East played the king and South the ace. A club was led to dummy jack and the heart finesse was taken and lost. West triumphantly led the jack of diamonds, after duly congratulating himself on the brilliance lead—but Fry trumped it.

Two more trumps were drawn, the heart suit was run, dummy's three spades were discarded, and the queen of spades was finally ruffed in dummy to produce twelve tricks.

Our sympathies go to West, who found it difficult to conceive that Fry would waste the queen of diamonds on the opening lead, holding the singleton ace. West could not know his partner had the spade ace and it probably did not occur to him to lead any card but the jack of diamonds when he was in.

Fry had taken the precaution of playing only one trump, so that East had no opportunity to give a nice juicy spade signal.

The Empty Nest

An empty home; an empty heart; an empty life the losers part. —Old Mother Nature.

It had seemed to Hooty the Owl and to Mrs. Hooty, but especially to Hooty, that their two children never would learn to fly. They were called Little Hoot and Little Toot, but they were no longer little. They were almost as big as their father and mother, and they are the biggest members of the Owl family in the Green Forest. There was a very good reason why the two young Owls in the big nest in the top of a tall tree in the most lonesome part of the Green Forest had not learned to fly. It was because they never had tried.

"Where are they?" he cried. Now all growing children need plenty of good food. Of course, the faster they grow the more food they need. All feathered babies grow fast. Young Hoot and his sister, young Toot had grown so fast that it had kept father and mother hunting most of the time night after night, and sometimes a good part of the day when Owls are supposed to sleep. Being eaters of only meat they ate had to be hunted for and caught. While the
