MRS. CHRISTY MACLEOD

At Hopfield, P. E. I. on Thursday, July 2nd 1936 there passed away Mrs. Christy MacLeod. She was the daughter of the late Norman MacLean and his wife Christy Stewart, Little Sands, and was born there 80 years ago. In early life she married Mr. Torquil MacLeod, Little Sands. He predeceased her twenty-one years ago. For the past few years she made her home with her eldest daughter, Mrs. J. A. Blue, Hopfield, who tenderly cared for her mother in her last illness. Mrs. MacLeod was highly respected by all who knew her, a good neighbor, of a cheerful disposition and a devout Christian character.

Surviving to mourn the loss of a most affectionate and devoted mother are three sons and two daughters: Norman and Torquil in Allison, Mass.; John, Little Sands; Sarah (Mrs. J. A. Blue), Hopfield; Miss Minnie MacLeod, Boston, Mass. A daughter, Christina A., a bright young woman who had just graduated from college passed away twenty-six years ago. A brother, Malcolm N. MacLean, Little Sands, two sisters Mrs. Flora Stewart, Little Sands and Mrs. Annie Phillips Boston, Mass., are also left to mourn.

The funeral service was held on Sunday afternoon July 5th and was conducted by her pastor Rev. T. R. Goudge. The pallbearers were D. D. Livingstone, M. A. MacPhee, Alex. Blue, J. D. MacLellan, D. A. Munn, and Archibald Blue. She was laid to rest in the family plot in the Little Sands Cemetery.

Museum Built Where French Fort Existed

SACKVILLE, N. B., July 16—(C. P.)—A stone museum built by the Dominion government last year at the site of old Fort Beauséjour, near the New Brunswick-Nova Scotia boundary, will be officially opened August 1, by the Governor-General of Canada, according to present plans. Officials of both provinces will attend the elaborate ceremony at the spot where French and English fought in the mid-eighteenth century during their struggle for the mastery of Acadia. Situated a half mile off the main highway between Sackville and Amherst and occupying the southern end of the Beauséjour ridge, the area was established as a national park in 1925 and officially dedicated in 1928. Improvement of the park and construction of the museum were directed by Dr. J. Clarence Webster, C.M.G., of Shediac, N.B., a member of the historic sites and monuments board of Canada.

Fort Beauséjour, built by French and named Fort Cumberland after its capture by the English, played a vital part in events leading to peaceful settlement of the Isthmus of Chignecto district. It was built in the form of a five-pointed star. The ruins are now little more than mounds of earth, with bits of masonry here and there. From the fort, looking westward, lies the marshland valley of the Missaquash river, which forms the boundary of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Near it is an elevated tract of land known as Tonge's Island, once called Ile de la Vallée. The seigneur of Chignecto, commandant in Acadia during the late seventeenth century, lived there. Beyond the Fort Lawrence ridge lies more marshland, the town of Amherst and the distant hills of Cumberland County. West of Beauséjour stretches the vast Tantramar marsh, bounded on the west and south by the uplands of Sackville and Westcoot. South of the ridge lies Cumberland Basin, an extension of the Bay of Fundy, and beyond it the fertile fields of Minville.

In the autumn of 1750, when the English began building a fort at Beaubassin, the French ordered one for the ridge of Beauséjour, overlooking Chignecto Bay. The latter fortifications were still incomplete in 1755, and a spy there was revealing the conditions to the English commandant at Fort Lawrence. Twenty-six cannon were mounted on the walls. The garrison numbered 200 regulars and several hundred Acadians, including refugees and others summoned from their farms. After its capture in 1755 the fort was greatly strengthened. The French made no effort to regain it. The name was changed to Fort Cumberland by Colonel Robert Monckton.

When Jonathan Eddy led his rebel forces up Chignecto's slopes 21 years later the would-be conqueror failed to capture the fort. For 21 days the rebels swarmed about the uplands of Beaubassin, without forcing the garrison of the Royal American Fencible Regiment to surrender. A relief expedition finally raised the siege.

In front of the museum is mounted a cannon of the French period, in perfect condition and ready for firing salutes. Prominent among the exhibits is the coat of arms of Nova Scotia. The design was approved by James I of England, and now forms the only provincial flag in Canada. At the time Fort Beauséjour was built Nova Scotia included all the territory of Chignecto.

The wall of the museum supports an old map of the Chignecto Isthmus showing a pioneer study of the marshland formations of the Tantramar. That communication by water between the Northumberland Strait and the Cumberland Basin was mooted as far back as the days of Beauséjour is seen from this map, depicting a proposed course for a canal to connect Bale Verte and the Basin. Another interesting exhibit is a pen and ink sketch showing the colorful exploit of a one-legged immigrant boy, Brook Watson, who became great in England. Amid floating ice the boy swam the Missaquash river in 1715 and drove back a herd of cattle which had crossed to the French side. A French officer on horseback who rode down to the shore from Fort Beauséjour was so impressed by the boy's bravery that he allowed young Watson to return to his own side.

"The darling" I mustn't miss this!"

A SMALL GIRL, a pall, a large body of water. Leave out anything but the girl and you'll still have a picture.

IT DOESN'T TAKE A whole family of kittens to make a swell snapshot—but if you have a chance like this—don't miss it.

Give Snapshots the job of remembering this Week-end

IT'S so important to get snapshots as you go along. They're the perfect diary of your trips—your picnics—the changes that are always taking place. They save the happiest expressions of those you love best.

So be sure to take your Kodak, whatever you're doing this week-end. Snapshotting makes any day a bigger, more lasting day. A year from now it will be as fresh as ever—one look at the prints, and you'll know whom you were with, where you went, what you did. This is one way of saving time that really works.

No wonder everybody is snapshotting—it's part of every other sport. Count the Kodaks as you go. The snapshots you'll want tomorrow you must take today. Kodaks as low as $5; Brownies from $1.25... at your dealer's.

In Canada "Kodak" is the registered trade mark and sole property of Canadian Kodak Co., Limited, Toronto Ontario.

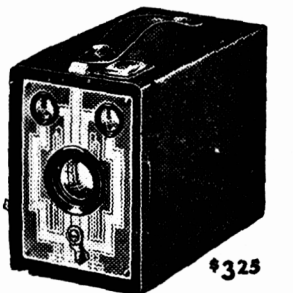

HOW SOON those youngsters will change—don't fail to snap them as they are.

CRACK SNAPSHOT COMBINATION Six-20 Brownie—Kodak VERICHROME Film

Wells followed. A playlet by Grades 1 and 2 was enjoyed. The prizes were then presented and Grades 6 and 7 presented a historical pageant written by a Maritime girl. Mr. Wells then presented certificates to the sixteen graduates and addressed them. Joseph Scott delivered the Valedictory and the school and audience sang God Save the King.
