BELOVED MARK TWAIN STORY A NATURAL FOR BING CROSBY

Hear ye, hear ye, Crosby fans! El Bingo, for the first time in his career, goes back into ancient times—way back to the year 528—for his new Paramount production in Technicolor, "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," which arrived yesterday at the Capitol Theatre, with Bing in the title role.

to be his most hilarious film, with lovely Rhonda Fleming, William Bendix and Sir Cedric Hardwicke. They are supported by an excellent cast headed by Mervyn Vye, Virginia Field and Henry Wilcoxon. It took a story as beloved and world-renowned for its wit and humor as Mark Twain's masterpiece to get Bing into armor, if only temporarily. The way Crosby loves his comfort, climbing in and out of hardware suits would have to pay off in plenty of laughs before he would be willing to subject himself to it. According to all reports, the armor incident is only one of many of riotously funny things that happen to Bing when he is thrown from his 1910 horse and comes to in King Arthur's court in the year 528. The story of the ingenious Connecticut Yankee who is knighted Sir Boss because of the many "miracles" stunts he pulls on the Sixth Century populace and the reigning King Arthur, is a natural for Crosby.
