NOTES FROM OTTAWA.

ARNOLDI ON THE GRIDIRON.

The Quebec Scandal.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE EXAMINER.]

When I say that the investigation into the Interior Department may be considered over, I desire to be understood as meaning the denunciations by the Grit press of the Government for its conduct of that department. The moment it was ascertained that similar irregularities to those recently developed, existed during Mr. David Mills' incumbency, and were practically introduced by the McKenzie administration and that Sir Richard Cartwright had sanctioned them in his own department, the Grit interest in the enquiry ceased. But the Government will not cease the investigation—they will pursue it to the end, and not in the Interior only, but in every department of the public service. If no irregularities can be found, so much the better, but where they exist they will be remedied.

Mr. J. R. Arnoldi, who is Chief Mechanical Engineer of the Public Works Department, is pretty well known on the Island, which he has visited frequently. He is of the genus snob, and glories in what he considers a magnificent pair of whiskers; he lives high, drives tandem, and, during summer, has been in the habit of entertaining largely on board the steam yacht "Joe." And it is in connection with "Joe" that Arnoldi will probably come to grief. This "Joe" was rented, according to the accounts, by the Public Works Department, from one Wilson, of Montreal, for $100 a month, and was used by Arnoldi to visit dredges and other property of the Department in his capacity of Engineer. Wilson was examined last week before the Public Accounts Committee, and testified that he was not the owner of "Joe," but merely lent his name for Arnoldi's accommodation; that Arnoldi was the real owner, that the money which Wilson drew for hire of the steamer was handed to Arnoldi, and that Wilson had no interest in "Joe," good, bad or indifferent. A nephew of Arnoldi's also testified that a bill made out in his name and received by him for rent and storage of dredging plant was really Arnoldi's affair, as he (the nephew) did not own the building where the plant was stored, that Arnoldi did and that Arnoldi received the money. All of which evidence goes to put Mr. Arnoldi badly in the soup, and there is nobody sorry for him. His examination will take place on Tuesday, when it will be seen what he has to say for himself. It is reported that he built the "Joe" out of Government material, and if this is so, the irregularity develops into a swindle, and Mr. Arnoldi, besides being cashiered, will probably find himself the subject of a criminal prosecution. This fellow Arnoldi is a type of parasite of which there is a considerable number in Ottawa, and far too many attached to the Government. The scandals now under investigation will prove blessings in disguise if they prove the means of ridding the Civil Service of a lot of cads whose incompetence may be their misfortune, but whose ill-manners and insolence decent people are not obliged to endure. English gentlemen, anxious to remove the living evidence of youthful folly beyond their wives' vision, have shipped their first-son here, and in many cases, managed to obtain positions for them in the Civil Service. The pretensions of these creatures, who cannot tell who their grandfathers were, would be amusing were they not so costly, but the erop has become insufferable and will stand a stiff weeding out. This fellow Arnoldi made himself infamous last summer by a disgraceful assault upon a respectable woman, a neighbor of his. She kept a boarding house (an excessively vulgar thing in Arnoldi's eyes) and she had the audacity to insert a window in her house which would overlook his grounds. He therefore erected a brick wall to blind the window. She got a big stick and knocked the bricks down before the mortar had set. Arnoldi, who was on the scene very soon, turned the garden hose on her and drenched the plucky little woman. She had Arnoldi brought before the magistrate, but Mr. Arnoldi was too big a man to appear before a police magistrate. He disclaimed the summons, and went off on a pleasure excursion in the 'Joe,' and sent a lawyer to settle the case. On account of it being Mr. Arnoldi—one of Ottawa's upper ten—his contempt of court was overlooked, and he was fined a trifling sum. This same Arnoldi, at times, has sanctimonious fits, and his Protestantism was awfully shocked at hearing the choir of St. George's Church chant the "Kyrie" and "Gloria in Excelsis." He bounced out of church, and led an insurrection which resulted in the resignation of the highly respected incumbent, the Rev. Dr. Owen Jones, a brother of Archbishop Weston-Jones, lately of Charlottetown.

I have several times made up my mind to give the readers of THE EXAMINER some glimpses of the social life of Ottawa, but I have refrained, fearing that my reasons for so doing might be misconstrued, but I think I shall have to put my resolutions into practice when I have leisure. Talk about the snobbery of Halifax—it is infinitely compared with Ottawa!

The Tarte-McGreedy Committee worked long and well last week—two or three days more will see the end of the evidence for the prosecution. A very important piece of testimony was elicited from Martin P. Connolly, book-keeper for the firm of Larkin, Connolly & Co., it being shown by his evidence that the firm were in the habit of paying the inspectors, employed by the Harbor Commissioners, sums of money to induce them to report a larger quantity of work done by the contractors than had actually been performed. This practice, he said, had been introduced by Murphy, and continued with the knowledge and consent of Robert McGreedy. McGreedy, when questioned concerning it, denied that it was with his consent, said that he protested against it in writing, and produced a letter which he said he had written to Larkin, protesting against it. When the letter came to be examined it was found to be dated a year afterwards, to contain no protestations against paying the items in question, and to have been written to Larkin months after he had ceased to be connected with the firm. Robert affected to be very indignant at his honesty being questioned, but the facts were against him. Martin Connolly also acknowledged to having altered the books, and erased names, etc., so as to prevent detection of payments. He stated that Michael Connolly knew nothing of them. The names of these inspectors were given, and they will have an opportunity of being heard. One of them, named Milne, has already forwarded an affidavit denying that he received such moneys. It is said that one of them, named Pelletier, is a nephew of Sir Adolphe Caron, and the Grits make a great howl about it, as if a nephew of a Minister could not possibly be a scoundrel. One of the most highly respected Judges of the Ontario Bench sentenced his own son to the penitentiary a few years ago, and I believe the son is there still, yet no one thought of demanding the father's retirement from the Bench.

The Baie des Chaleurs Railway was brought into the enquiry in some way, I do not know how, but sufficient evidence was obtained to show that the two McGreedy's, Riepel, ex-M. P. for Bonaventure, P. Q., and Senator Robitaille, ex-Lieutenant Governor of Quebec, 100 miles of railway, the company had a capital of three millions, with $500,000 nominally subscribed, not a cent of which, however, was paid up in cash but notes of hand, and these notes were retired out of subsidies received from Government. Thomas McGreedy, at any rate, made thousands of dollars out of his connection with the company, and the Government were swindled—that much is plain. But that Sir Hector Langevin was connected with the enterprise in the most remote degree, no one hinted even. Robert McGreedy's examination has already occupied two days, and it is not over yet. He is an accomplished scoundrel and so far knocks Owen Eugene Murphy higher than a burnt boot. He is ready to swear anything that can injure his brother Thomas (which is a work of supererogation, in my opinion) and Sir Hector Langevin. The story of his relations with his brother for many years and their subsequent quarrel over the division of their ill-gotten earnings is a long one and not interesting. Suffice it to know that Robert is now prepared and anxious to swear anything and everything that may be to Thomas' discredit. That he is proving himself a perjurer and an unmitigated scoundrel does not trouble him at all—he swears that he deliberately perjured himself, giving day and date for the circumstance, with as much coolness as though he were filling his pipe. While I was present the other day for a few minutes, he swore that when he was contractor for building a section of the L. C. R. about 1874, his brother Thomas, then a member of Parliament, was his partner, in violation of the law. When asked if he did not remember making affidavit then, during an election contest, that Thomas was not his partner, he unhesitatingly said that he did, but that the affidavit was a mere matter of form and made only to protect his brother's interests in the election. To protect his brother he was willing to commit perjury in 1874—to injure his brother he is of course swearing only to the truth in 1891! Fancy accepting the testimony of such a man! The books of account which he produced were very suspicious. Page after page of the blotter was written in the one hand and evidently at the same time, several pages were torn out, numerous blanks were left—for all of which he could not give an explanation. No jury would hang a dog on the evidence of such a man. Robert McGreedy is no stranger in Ottawa where he resided 25 years ago, and the congregation of St. Patrick's Church has reason to remember him to their cost. His connection with the building of their church cost them thousands of dollars and the priest of the parish was compelled to request his resignation as president of a religious society, because the membership was decreasing under his presidency. A leading member of the congregation told me to-day, "I know him well, and Owen E. Murphy is an angel of light compared with Robert McGreedy."

The farmers of this section are busily engaged with their haying operations.

The energetic potato bug is getting in its work. We are informed that another insect has arrived which dines on the potato bug. If this report is true, it would be well to encourage the late arrival.

The two lobster packing industries of this district have panned out well this season. The Messrs. Allen, Allen & Co. have, after paying their expenses, realized a large remuneration. We are informed that they intend keeping a crew at work this winter making cans and cases for the next season's fishing.

We learn that an enormous fish was seen by some lobster fisherman while they were engaged in overhauling their traps a few days ago. It appears that they noticed the monster some distance from them lashing around in the water. After some time it drew near their boat and they got a distinct view of him. They place its length at twenty-five feet. The fish—after examining the boat thoroughly—left for the east and could be seen and heard at a long distance as it passed down the Straits.

Mr. Theo. O. Wadman of the Boston Herald and also editor of the New Moon, of Lowell, Mass., has been visiting at the house of Mr. Jas. Clark, of this place, for some time past. Mr. Wadman was born in P. E. Island and went to the Hub when only sixteen years of age and commenced his career as a printer. We heartily congratulate Mr. Wadman on his success.
